Home gardens! Although killing frosts have been known to occur in June in the northeastern United States, southeastern Canada and along the Great Lakes, they are rare. As a calendar guide to the gardener it is suggested that in the North he should continue to plant sweet corn, bush beans, beets, carrots, and kohlrabi, and sow rutabaga, turnips and late beets for winter. Start pumpkins, squash, and melons if not done last month. Set out celery plants, first soaking the ground.

PROMPT ACTION SAVES 2 LIVES

Seattle Flyers Forced Down and Saved by Third Officer of Boat

Victoria, June 1—(CP)—Prompt action by Third Officer Shirley Cann of the Canadian Pacific Coastal Steamship Princess Charlotte yesterday saved the lives of two Seattle fliers when their plane was forced down in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Ransome Bovee, 24, and Richmond Palmer, 27, were taken from the wing of their disabled monoplane scant seconds before the craft sank in 72 fathoms.

"I guess we can thank the King and Queen for our rescue," said Bovee, "for the Charlotte had taken the place of the Princess Marguerite when that vessel was chosen to transport Their Majesties from Vancouver to Victoria.

"The Charlotte was deadheading back to Victoria and it was not due at the particular point on the regular schedule."

It was a double rescue for Palmer. Knocked out when the plane struck the water, he was pushed from the cabin onto a wing by his companion. Both men were chilled by water which was waist-deep before they evacuated the cabin.

Widely Varied Landscapes Viewed By Their Majesties on Royal Tour

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, June 1 (CP)—The royal tour entered its third week as the King and Queen left Vancouver for Jasper Wednesday. During two full weeks in the Dominion they have viewed widely varied landscapes.

Their Majesties have just seen the glorious flowers of Victoria—roses blooming, May trees laden with red and white flowers, the golden broom plant that grows wild. One week earlier they had passed through White River in Ontario where winter was only then releasing its grip and trees had not begun to leaf.

As the Empress of Australia brought the royal party up the St. Lawrence, the hills of Gaspe greeted the royal party. The King and Queen saw the towering cliffs of the north shore where the Saguenay enters the St. Lawrence and the rocks at Quebec where they disembarked.

Between Quebec and Montreal Their Majesties saw the little neatly kept farms and the pulp mills. The blue and silver royal train passed through the flat dairy farms of Eastern Ontario to the limestone cliffs of Ottawa.

They visited the towering granite Gatineau Hills, then rolled through red granite hills between Brockville and Gananoque and back to the limestone in Kingston.

Level Garden Lands

The level garden lands along the Bay of Quinte and the rolling clay hills around Toronto gave the royal visitors a glimpse of Ontario farm lands.

From there the tour led through the rugged scenery of the pre-Cambrian shield where Ontario's mineral wealth is being recovered, through the clay farms of Algoma into Port Arthur and Port William, guarded by the sleeping Giant Island out in Lake Superior.

The rugged scenery continued almost to Winnipeg. The King and Queen saw the prairies flat to Regina, after that rolling up to the foothills, and then the awe-inspiring Rockies.

The royal couple reveled in mountain scenery at Banff and crossed the Great Divide, highest point on the westward trip, by motor car.

The royal train was hauled by three locomotives over the stiff grades along the mountains. Apples came to the train from the rich fruitlands of the Okanagan.

The train ran along British Columbia's mighty rivers with their fishing boats and great booms of cedar and fir logs into Vancouver. From there, by ship, the royal party saw the mountainous islands of the Strait of Georgia.

QUEEN'S SMILE CONQUERS WESTERN CANADA

CLOUDY SKIES BRING RELIEF FROM HEAT WAVE

Icebergs Farther South Along Atlantic Coast Than in Century

RAIN IN U.S.

New York, June 1—(AP)—Cloudy skies along the Atlantic seaboard today brought relief from the season's first widespread heat wave, while rain dispelled threat of drought in other sections of the United States.

Hottest weather of the year was reported in several cities, including Baltimore, where the mercury reached 94, New York City, 92, Newark, 96, Detroit, 90, and Chicago 88. It was 100 degrees at Phoenix, Arizona.

Two heat deaths accompanied the mercury's climb to 94 degrees at Philadelphia. There was one heat fatality in New York City.

North Atlantic ships were advised by the Navy Department and the coast guard to travel far south of their usual lanes to avoid an almost unprecendented southern floe of icebergs.

Ships are Warned

An unexpected shifting of the cold wall of air has sent the bergs deeper south in the Atlantic than they have been observed in a century, the Navy's hydrographic office said.

CHARGES LOSS OF 'LUNGE DUE TO LEVELS OF TRENT

Provincial Fisheries Dep't. Lodges Protest With Federal Government

'UNNECESSARY DROP'

Warden at Colborne Believes Most of Spawn in Trent System Destroyed

Toronto June 1 (CP)—Protest against fluctuations in the levels of the Trent Waterways Systems has been made to the Federal Government by the Provincial Department of Game and Fisheries. The Province claims there have been tremendous losses in muskelunge spawn because of the change in levels.

Hon. H. C. Nixon, Minister of Game and Fisheries, stated records on the Otonabee River had shown a drop of 18 inches in the water level in one night. A. R. Minaker, Game Warden at Colborne, wrote that because of "an unnecessary drop in the water level on Rice Lake, Otonabee River, and I believe on most of the Trent system, all of the lunge spawn has perished.

"More damage has been done than the sportsman would do in 15 years," he added.

Spawning in Shallow Beds

Muskelunge spawn in shallow, weedy beds along the Otonabee and the lakes in the vicinity. A sudden drop leaves the spawn high and dry with consequent heavy mortality. Any sudden fluctuation —even higher water levels—affects the eggs seriously since a sudden rush of water may wash them off the spawning beds.

D. J. Taylor Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, at once sent Mr. Minaker's letter to the Department of Transport at Ottawa.

This year, Mr. Taylor said, approximately 5,000,000 eggs—a record number—had been stripped from muskies and it was hoped at least 4,000,000 fry would be obtained for planting. First of this year's supply of fry were planted in Sturgeon Lake yesterday where 200,000 were distributed. An additional 400,000 will be placed in Cameron, Balsam, Scugog and Pigeon Lakes.

Claims Even Fish May Die

"However," said the Deputy Minister, "There isn't much point in our placing fish in the lakes if the water is going to be lowered so suddenly. As a matter of fact, an 18-inch drop might well strand not only the fry but even large muskelunge since they feed in the shallow water. Any fish trapped in a pool along the edge of the lake would almost certainly die."

Village of Gogama Has Mayor For Day

Gogama, Ont., June 1 (CP)—This village 75 miles north of Sudbury, not to be caught napping, has appointed a mayor for a day when the Royal train bearing the King and Queen stops here June 5. Mrs. J. M. Poupore has been given the honor.

Like White River, southwest of here, where a mayor had to be appointed hurriedly when their Majesties made an unexpected call May 23, Gogama is not an incorporated village and has no full-time mayor. Already gaily decorated, Gogama completed its arrangements for a welcome by appointing a mayor.

Hundreds of mill workers, Indians and ordinary folk are expected to crowd Gogama.

BEAUTY THRU CLOUDS

High in Mountains Sky is a Bit Cloudy in Places and Mountain Air is Quite Chilly as Royal Train Passes

(By R. K. Carnegie, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Mount Robson, B.C., June 1 (CP)—While the scattered mountain folk waved a cheery greeting, the Royal train carried King George and Queen Elizabeth through the Rockies today to Jasper Park.

In the fading dusk last [illegible] as the train climbed the Pacific slope, groups gathered here and there to see the blue and silver palace-on-whee's. As the sun climbed into the sky today, small groups again waved greetings.

High in the mountains the groups were smaller—mostly section hands and men who guide tourists into isolated fishing streams. The sky was a bit cloudy in places and the mountain air chilly, as the Royal train pulled into Mount Robson for 10-minute stop.

Around the station were gathered a few more than Mount Robson's normal population of 25. Mostly families of railway employees, they were joined by guides who came from mountain cabins.

Mount Robson, towering 12,782 feet, reaches through clouds toward the sky. Lying in the Cariboo District of British Columbia, it stands south of Berg Lake and the Robson River flows nearby.

PETERBORO CHILD BITTEN BY DOG

100 Stitches Required to Close Wounds on Child's Face

Peterborough, Ont., June 1 (CP)—Marie Bowler, two, suffered critical injuries yesterday when bitten by a dog. About 100 stitches were required to close the wounds on her face, arms, chest and leg. The tissues were practically torn from her chin.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bowler was playing with her doll when a pup took the doll to the larger dog. The girl ran toward the chained dog and she was attacked. The dog was destroyed.

Anti-rabies serum was administered to the girl.

Politics Abandoned For Pickerel Fishing

Toronto, June 1—(CP)—Politics will be abandoned in favor of pickerel fishing in Ontario this weekend when Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Hon. Leopold Macaulay join a fishing party at Lake Nipissing.

The party, arranged by Hon. Harry C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Game and Fisheries, will include Mrs Hepburn, Mrs. Macaulay, Mrs. Nixon, Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Conacher and D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries.

Will Royalty Have Time to Greet 531 Congressmen in 45 Minutes?

Washington, June 1 (AP)—Junior Congressmen were worrying over a mathematical problem today—Will King George and Queen Elizabeth have time to greet all the 531 members of Congress in the 45 minutes they will spend at the capital?

If Their Majesties, following a rigid time schedule, have to leave before all the Senators and representatives are presented to them, it will be the new members, last in line, who may miss out on the greeting.

Just how fast the King and Queen can greet the members is the puzzler. If they offer their hands, it probably will take longer than if the Senators and representatives merely bow on presentation.

White House attaches, who are good at the sort of thing, estimate President and Mrs. Roosevelt dispose of about 15 handshakers a minute at their receptions. If the royal visitors greet 12 a minute, everything will be fine.

There is the possibility, too, that either the King or the Queen may single out some Senator or some representative for a short exchange of words. That might mess things up, members of the Arrangements Committee said.

MORTGAGE BANK BILL WILL BENEFIT MANY IN CANADA

Interest Arrears on Farm Mortgages Two Years Overdue Will be Eliminated

EXAMPLES CITED

Ottawa, June 1—(CP)— Thousands of Canadian farm and home owners who owe mortgages to trust, loan or insurance companies stand to benefit by the Central Mortgage Bank, or ineligible to do Parliament if it is passed, and no provincial legislation stands in the way of its operation in any particular province.

Mortgages owing to individuals or to companies not choosing to become members of the Central Mortgage Bank, or inligible to do so, will not be directly affected by the legislation, but Finance Minister Charles Dunning expects great things from the measure in the way of a general reduction in all mortgage rates.

General principles of the legislation as it affects farm mortgages are: elimination of all interest arrears more than two years overdue, incorporation of the immediate two years' overdue interest into the principal, adjustment of the principal sum so as not to exceed 80 per cent of the farm's appraisal value, the mortgage to be extended to 20 years from the date.

Mortgages on non-farm homes would be affected similarly except that the extension of the mortgage is a matter for agreement and that the interest rate is to be 5 1-2 per cent.

PARKED VEHICLE DIVES INTO TRENT

Eyewitness Says Car Moved Slowly Down-Grade Then Toppled Into Trent

Trenton, Ont., (Special)— Submerged in the waters of the Trent River, midstream from the government dock near the centre of this town, a new automobile owned by Corporal James Howard, R.C.A.F., was hauled from its watery bed after three hours of intensive efforts by garagemen. Considerably damaged about the body and fenders due to its being hauled over the rough rocks of the river bed the car was otherwise "unhurt." Glass in the windows was intact, and the radio played sweet music a few minutes after the car was hauled to safety.

Corporal Howard had parked his car near the west end of the dock. Returning some time later he was surprised to see a crowd gathered about his parking spot, while all that was indicative of an automobile was a large spot of oil floating on the surface of the water a few yards from shore.

Bridge-keeper Herbert Allison, an eyewitness to the affair, said the car moved slowly down grade toward the dock's edge, then toppled nose first into the water. The windows of the car were down and the vehicle floated for a period of from one to two minutes before it slowly drifted downstream and sank.

FIREMEN PREPARED FOR ANY EMERGENCY IN WATER-CUT-OFF

Members of the City Fire Department took no chances of being caught off guard between the hours of two and eight a.m. today when the water supply of the western section of the city was cut off during these hours.

Numbers of iron buckets were placed in the fire halls. Extra trucks loaded with barrels of water stood ready for an emergency. Every member of the department was on duty at his post at four o'clock ready for what might happen. Hand water pumps were placed where they could be reached in a moment.

Fortunately nothing happened and firemen breathed a sigh of relief at eight o'clock when the water was once more turned on.

Cutting off of the supply was made necessary to allow workmen of the Public Utilities Commission the opportunity of cleaning main water valves and other repairs necessary to the various mains in that section of the city.

The shiny locomotive, gleaming in royal blue paint, and accessories, was inspected by several residents while in the yards.

FIRST-AID GIVEN TOURIST BY FIREMAN

At least one American tourist thinks the members of the Belleville Fire Department are a bunch of fine fellows.

The other day while out fishing with a companion, the tourist suffered a badly gashed hand as the result of an accident.

Bleeding quite profusely the tourist hurriedly landed, dashed along the Victoria Park roadway and enquired at the fire station as to the whereabouts of the nearest doctor.

"Let's have a look at that hand," Fireman Jack Thompson said. Within a few minutes the injured member was expertly dressed and the man sent on his way to a physician, loud in his praises of the city fire department's knowledge of first-aid.

Choice Asparagus Sells at 3 Bunches For 10 Cents Today

"Five cents each or three bunches for ten cents, madam, take your choice of the stock," not much of a sales talk perhaps, but indicative of the price of choice asparagus as it was offered today on the city market.

There was a fair amount to choose from, and although sales were slow during the earlier hours business brightened towards noon.

"We won't be able to give the stuff away on Saturday if this slump in price continues," one disconsolate vendor stated as he viewed choice bunches of the vegetable and a silver dime that glistened in his hand, the payment for well over a pound of asparagus.

New Spring onions, lettuce and radishes, with choice stocks of rhubarb, featured the heaviest mid-week market in some time. Prices showed little or no change over those of Tuesday. Potatoes were plentiful selling at $1.35 per ninety pound bag. A Sidney Township farmer discounted the rumors that a shortage will ensue. "There are plenty of potatoes in the market," he said, "and as far as we are concerned there is no immediate danger of a shortage. Farmers have already got their supply of seed for early potatoes, and will, I think, have no trouble in securing sufficient for their late planting needs."

Whitefish and lake trout fresh from the waters of Lake Ontario near Point Traverse were fairly plentiful today selling at eighteen and twenty cents per pound.

Cabbage, tomato and flowering plants were available in large quantities with no change in former prices being noted.

City Deputation Given Cordial Reception Of Municipal Board

A good hearing was given the Belleville deputation which visited Queen's Park yesterday and presented the request officially to the Ontario Municipal Board that Belleville be permitted to cease levying on the sinking fund bonds for the redemption of which money is already available, it was reported by Mayor Bone this morning.

The deputation which consisted of the Mayor, Alderman MacLean Haig, Chairman of Finance; City Treasurer H. B. Stock and City Solicitor A. B. Collins, K.C., interviewed Mr. Coulter, Chairman of the Municipal Board, and Mr. Near and Mr. Charlton, members.

Belleville is the first city to present this request, and the promise that an immediate answer would be given on the matter was assured by the Board. Several representatives of other Ontario municipalities were also present at the hearing to learn the manner in which the local request would be presented, it was reported by the deputation.

Fire Destroys Vacant Sidney Farm House

Sidney, 6th Con. (Special)—Fire originating from an unknown source totally destroyed a large white frame house owned by George Paugher of the 7th Concession of Sidney shortly before daylight today.

The house had been vacant for some time and as far as could be ascertained contained no contents.

Smoke rising from the scene of the fire, opposite the Sine cemetery and approximately one and one-half miles east of Scotts' Church attracted early-rising neighbors. By the time they arrived at the Paugher property, the building was practically demolished, flames sweeping through the frame structure at a high rate of speed.

It was not ascertained if insurance covered the loss.

Young Boy Deserving Of His Folly When He Falls into River

Throwing a kitten in the river by the tail is not considered polite behavior in any sphere of society. But when one, in the act of throwing forgets to let go of the cat, then a certain amount of personal discomfort is bound to follow.

At least, that is what a young unidentified boy discovered yesterday, when in his anxiety to give a small kitten a bath in the more or less placid waters of the Moira River near the Upper Bridge, he, with a mighty heave launched the animal on its way to a watery grave, maintained his hold on its tail and plunged after it in a manner that was anything but graceful.

His cries were heard by a spectator, said to be a man named Mason, who rescued the crestfallen "thrower-inner" from his watery predicament. The cat has now only eight lives.

Beaver Dam Broken

Complaints of residents on the boundary line of Hastings-Peterborough that sections of land were being flooded, were ended yesterday when dynamite was used to blow up a section of Beaver dam in the northeast corner of Peterborough County. According to Game Overseer I. J. Lyons, who broke the embankment, over 100 yards of roadway had been flooded and the water was spreading over nearby farms. The dam was in the middle of a large swamp.

Chief Lynch Praises Speed of Fire-Drill In the City Schools

All Public Schools Evacuated in Less Than a Minute

Whatever the faults of the pupils of the public schools and other institutions of learning of the city and its environs may be, slackness in speed and in efficiency in fire-drill is not one of them, according to Fire-Chief William Lynch, who yesterday conducted emergency drills in these institutons.

Chief Lynch was loud in his praise of pupils and staffs of the various schools for their efficiency and precision in carrying out the drills. "Belleville need not be ashamed of the way in which the pupils are taught these important exercises, nor of the way in which they are carried out," he said.

He spoke an extra word of praise for the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf. "The drill at this institution was a complete surprise to both pupils and staff, yet the building was vacated by 303 pupils in the excellent time of one minute and thirty-five seconds."

"The only thing that can be improved at this school," the chief advocated, "is the installation of a louder siren. The one at present in use is not loud enough in volume of sound to be properly effective".

Numbers of pupils of other institutions and the time elapsed in vacating buildings, follow:

Queen Mary School 483 children in 58 seconds, King George School, 360 children in 48 seconds, Queen Victoria School, 500 children in 55 seconds, Queen Alexandra School, 500 children in 48 seconds, St. Michael's School, 510 children in 45 seconds. The Belleville Collegiate Institute, a three-storey building, 935 students in one minute and thirty-five seconds.

NURSES' ALUMNAE FETES 1939 CLASS

Dr. Lily B. Mathieson Guest Speaker at Annual Dinner Party

Welcome newcomers to the nursing profession, members of the 1939 graduating class of Belleville General Hospital were entertained by the Hospital Alumnae at a delightful dinner at the Hotel Quinte last evening when they were addressed by Dr. Lily B. Mathieson.

The guests were welcomed by Miss Nina Di Cola, first vice president of the Alumnae, Miss Doris Williams, second vice president, and Miss Edith Wright, convener of the program.

The twelve young graduates, Misses Alice Craighead, Ruth Cryderman, Mabel Duncan, Laura Foster, Helen French, Betty Hendricks, Marcella Lewis, Grace Patterson, Esther Purcell, Lucille Sauve, Marjorie Sharpe and Ruth Tyers occupied places of honour at the head table with the superintendent of nurses, Miss Ruth Thompson, and those who were to take part in the program. Red tulips and white carnations decorated the tables and each guest was presented with a royal souvenir medallion.

Dinner music was played by Mr. Leslie Lennox, violinist, and Mrs. Grace Leeman, pianist, adding greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Community singing was also participated in, and a novelty in this part of the program was the song chosen as her favourite by each graduate.

Following the toast to the King, Miss Nina Di Cola who acted as chairman for the dinner extended sincere greetings to the graduating class, at this, the fifth annual dinner, and congratulated them on attaining the goal towards which they had been zealously striving. On behalf of the officers and members, Miss Di Cola welcomed the young ladies to the ranks of the Alumnae.

The toast to the graduating class was proposed by Miss Mary Jane Youmans speaking on behalf of Belleville General Hospital Alumnae Association. Miss Youmans explained the advantages of membership in the Association and expressed sincere good wishes for the future success of the guests of honour. A gracious reply was made by Miss Ruth Cryderman.

Miss Bernice Saunders sang two solos in charming style, accompanied by Mrs. M. P. Duff, and was enthusiastically encored.

Introducing the guest speaker, Miss Mabel Peacock said that Dr. Mathieson needed no introduction to citizens of Belleville, especially to those of the nursing profession. In view of the interest in the West occasioned by the visit of Their Majesties, it was particularly fitting that Dr. Mathieson's address should be on her recent visit to the Western Coast.

Motor Trip to Coast Described

Dr. Mathieson gave in interesting detail an account of a motor trip that extended over many weeks last year, bringing her into contact again with places frequently visited, and with new trails explored with a spirit of adventure. Everyone, especially those doing extensive work, should plan a yearly holiday, for rest, relaxation and for broadening one's outlook so that one brought new charm and freshness back to daily tasks. By staying at the smaller family hotels, and by motoring in a party of four a holiday similar to Dr. Mathieson's could be achieved at a very small cost, and was well worth considering.

With three others, Dr. Mathieson made a leisurely trip to the coast, stopping to visit relatives en route, sketching, and pausing to visit places of particular interest. The route travelled was to Detroit and Chicago, through North Dakota to Saskatoon and Regina. Dr. Mathieson urged travellers to follow the highways and not to let short cuts lure them. Short cuts, in her experience, invariably led to extra miles and discomfort. The only piece of bad road was encountered near Rosetown Sask., and after negotiating with great difficulty a very bad hill, the party was astounded to find sometime later, that in some unaccountable manner they had become confused, circled the community and had come right back to the same hill which had to be travelled again.

Dr. Mathieson told of the fertile growth in some districts, showing 21 stalks of grade one wheat, well filled, from one seed. Turner Valley with its constantly burning gas flares, the beauties of the prairie provinces, Banff with its many charming tourist homes, and its hazardous mountain driving. Lake Louise its scenic glories wonderfully revealed from the deep arched windows of the Chateau and Vancouver were some of the wonders of the trip to the coast while the return journey was through Sinclair Pass, Spokane, the desert lands about the Grand Coulee Dam, Butte, Montana, Yellowstone, Cody, back to Madison and Chicago. In all some eight thousand miles were travelled and the motorists returned rich with memories of a delightful and entertaining trip.

The sincere thanks of those present was extended Dr. Mathieson for her interesting talk by Miss Dorothy Osborne and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

Small Boy Rescued From Path Of Fast Freight Train by the Prompt Action of C. P. R. Worker

Joseph Adams, Working on Bridge, Dashes Down Track and Grabs Youngster as Train Rushes by

CHILD UNGRATEFUL

Prompt action on the part of Joseph Adams, C.P.R. employee, averted what might have been a tragedy yesterday afternoon, when he dashed fifty feet across the main Canadian Pacific Railway bridge near the entrance to Victoria Park, snatched a badly frightened six-year-old boy from the centre of the tracks and leaped to safety with him as a crack Canadian Pacific through-freight roared past his heels.

"The boy with a smaller companion had been playing on the bridge earlier in the afternoon," Adams said in relating the incident. "I warned them two or three times of their danger, and told them to leave, but they persisted in returning. When the whistle of the freight sounded for the approach to the bridge, I naturally looked up and to my amazement saw the youngsters back in their favorite spot."

Adams yelled a hoarse warning to the boys, one of his fellow workmen stated. The smaller of the two at once dashed for the safety end of the bridge and jumped down in the road. The larger of the boys, apparently terrified at the sight of the train bearing down on him one hundred yards away, did not move.

Adams threw down a hammer he was using at his work, dashed down the tracks in the centre of the bridge as the engineer of the train sounded warning blasts on the whistle, grabbed the youngster, and turning, ran for the aperture between the two bridges that opens near the entrance to Victoria Park. He leaped to safety with the struggling boy even as the slowing freight thundered past him.

"When I grabbed him, he struggled like anything," Adams modestly declared, following the incident. "It was hard enough for me to run with him, but his struggles made it more difficult. And the funny part of the whole affair is, when I finally let him down and was all set to scold him, he beat me to it, called me a couple of names in choice cusswords, and ran away to play with his chums as though nothing had happened."

Adams is a member of a Canadian Pacific Railway bridge and building crew at present engaged in chipping and painting the railway bridges here.

City firemen, his fellow workers, and eye-witnesses of the swiftly-moving episode were loud in their praise of Adams' coolness and presence of mind.

Anti-Aircraft Battery Stationed at Pt. Petre

Lt.-Col. Craig is in Charge of Training Manoeuvres

Sinister muzzles of four anti-aircraft guns, part of Canada's newly mechanized army, sweep menacingly the Lake Ontario skies near Point Petre, Prince Edward County.

Behind them in a distinctly peaceful atmosphere, the white tents of the personnel, seventy-five all ranks, of the 4th Anti-Aircraft Battery, gleam against the green of new grass.

Summer manoeuvres which will be carried on as soon as the 5th Battery of Montreal arrives next week, are in charge of Lieut.-Col. C. S. Craig, D.S.O., M.C., officer commanding the permanent anti-aircraft forces of Canada. Lieut.-Col. Craig was born in Cobourg and served his country with distinction during the entire four years of the Great War.

Major A. Keefer, and the personnel of the 5th Battery which includes five officers and fifty other ranks will train in conjunction with the 4th Battery until July 8th when it returns to its station. The permanent battery will remain at Point Petre until approximately August 22nd.

The training grounds have been purchased by the Department of National Defence from Daniel Scofield, Point Petre farmer. Permanent buildings such as cookhouses and quarters are being erected.

First June Day Cool but Nice

"What is so rare as a day in June, Then, if ever, come perfect days.."

Residents of the city recalled these unforgettable lines of the immortal bard, James Russell Lowell, this morning, even though the morning was chill and fraught during the earlier hours with a threat of rain.

Later however, the sun straggled through lowering clouds and by noon blue sky showed where gray had been seen before. A hint of the soft balminess to come before the month is ended was then felt along the business section.

June was greeted today with the drone of bees, but also a more subdued drone of lessons in school classrooms where children of all ages are cramming for the examinations which lie just ahead. The merry month of May has passed with the torn page of the calendar, and in the nearby woods, the shy early violets have been replaced by the hardier summer varieties of plant. June finds the majority of the farmers of the district well caught up with their work, and the promise of summer holidays for the city worker beckoning just beyond.

G. G. McGeer and Col. Drew Figure in Sharp Interchanges

Col. Drew Says He Did Not Come to Face Charges but to Defend Article

Ottawa, June 1 (CP)—Sharp interchanges between Lieut. Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) marked hearing before the Commons Public Accounts Committee on the Bren Gun contract.

Mr. McGeer, examining Col. Drew, recalled that the night before the witnes had said he knew men engaged in setting up the John Inglis Company plant in Toronto had been sent to Czecho-Slovakia at the expense of the Dominion Government to gain practical experience.

Col. Drew said his statement was that arrangements had been made to send these men to Czecho-Slovakia. He did not know if they had gone or if their bill had been paid.

Invention of Bren Gun

The Bren gun was invented in Czecho-Slovakia and first manufactured there. Col. Drew's article in last September Maclean's Magazine, criticising the Government's award without tender of a contract for 7,000 of these guns to the Inglis Company precipitated a Royal Commission investigation before Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the present inquiry before the Public Accounts Committee.

"Your situation, Col. Drew, is that General LaFleche (Deputy Defence Minister) has accused you of lying and of launching through lies an attack upon the Department of Defence which has impeded and frustrated the defence of Canada. He said that kind of attack was traitorous and tantamount to selling out the defence of Canada,' Mr. McGeer said.

"When you come here to face that charge, don't you think you should be careful of what you say?"

'Not Here to Face Charges'

"I did not come here to face charges," said Col. Drew.

"I suppose you are going to make another shift. You charged General LaFleche with perjury—"

"Let me say right now I did not charge LaFleche with perjury," Col Drew said. This referred to Col. Drew's argument before the Davis Commission when he said General LaFleche's evidence from beginning to end was 'not to be believed.

Col. Drew cited the record of exhibits filed with the David Commission, referring particularly to the "Canada House File." These documents were correspondence to and from the office of the Canadian High Commissioner in London and the National Defence Department.

The exhibits showed that authorti yhad been sought by the Department to give the Inglis Company representatives in England the facilities of the naval radio and had asked also that arrangements be made for them to go to Czecho-Slovakia. The men concerned, referred to as "Ainsworth and McLachlan" were "directors of the Inglis Company," said Col. Drew.

Mr. McGeer Insists

Mr. McGeer insisted that witness recall his statement of last night, that he (Col. Drew) "knew those men had gone to Czecho-Slovakia at the expense of the Canadian people."

"I say to you that not one single man engaged in setting up the Inglis plant ever went to Czecho-Slovakia," slad Mr. McGeer, "and not one dollar of expense was incurred by the Canadian people in sending a single individual to Czecho-Slovakia."

"Where is that in the evidence?" asked Col. Drew.

"I am going to call Major Hahn, (President of the Inglis Company), Captain Jolly (of the Ordnance Department) and General LaFleche to prove that fact. And I am giving you that warning now."

"You are not giving me any warning," retorted Col. Drew. "I have no knowledge whether they went there or not."

A brief altercation developed at this stage, with Howard Green (Cons. Vancouver South) calling on Chairman W. A. Fraser (Lib. Northumberland) to "Be Fair". He asked that the witness be not interrupted by noise and "cat-calls from back-benchers."" This protest had been prompted by the exclamations which greeted the Colonel's last observation.

Expression Withdrawn

Malcolm McLean (Lib. Melfort) objected to "any small town lawyer" referring to other members of the committee as "back-benchers". Later, he withdrew the expression "small town lawyer".

Col. Drew said he knew that while in England, according to the exhibits, Ainsworth and McLachlan had been authorized to go to Czecho-Slovakia and that subsequently accounts were rendered covering travelling expenses to the amount of $4,000. This was in the nature of a "demand voucher".

"Was it for monies the company had expended?" asked Mr McGeer.

"No, it was for the authorization of these expenses."

Nothing had been paid at the time the voucher was presented and a number of accounts were outstanding.

"We are dealing with your veracity and the degree of regard the committee can have for your statements in the light of the care you take in criticising others with regard to the accuracy of their observations," said Mr. McGeer.

He repeated Col. Drew's remark about knowing men had been sent to Czecho-Slovakia. Since not one man had gone there, Mr. McGeer said he wanted to give Col. Drew an opportunity "to tell this committee why he made a statement that is utterly false:"

"I have given you the information."

"Suppose it should turn out that these men did not go to Czecho-Slovakia that not one dollar of expense was incurred to the Canadian people could we take that as a measure of the veracity of your other statements? Would you be willing to agree with me that that would be fair test?" Mr. McGeer asked.

Reliance on Documents

Col. Drew replied that he had to rely on the documents sent to Canada from Canada House. The information was that the trip had been authorised and under the contract the expenditure would be payable by the government.

"That falsehood is going all across this country" said Mr. McGeer "and it is a falsehood that goes to the very basis of the charges of inefficiency and expense that is at the bottom of your article".

Col. Drew demurred. He thought it would have been a perfectly proper thing for the Inglis officials to go to Czecho-Slovakia.

"I would have been disappointed if they had not gone" he said.

TO VICTORIA AND BACK

It was fitting that Victoria, capital of British Columbia, a city with a predominance of people of English origin and so really an English city on Vancouver Island washed by the waves of the Pacific should be the last point in the west of the Canadian tour of Their Majesties the King and Queen and that it should mark the turning point of the most important event in many years in Canadian history. As the British Empire's rulers were feted in that city, which looks towards the east and western civilization, and towards the west, where lies the Orient or east, Their Majesties, the British rulers who are also the rulers of Canada, must have felt something of the spirit of the first explorer who looked upon the Pacific, "silent upon a peak in Darien." That greatest of oceans whose waves break upon the Orient as well as upon the western world has always inspired thought. Their Majesties may have thought of their possessions across that ocean, in the southeast part of Asia, in India, of their great Dominions of New Zealand and Australia in the south. They may have thought of the mystery of that East which is older than the western world.

Here at Victoria east is west and west is east. King George and Queen Elizabeth could look westward towards the Orient and eastward to the occidental nations. Such a scene, against the background of history and civilizations historic and prehistoric, was inspiring in the extreme. From this point they could look back on the land they had just crossed and through which they were to return by a more northerly route, and to the greatest of Republics, the United States, which they are soon to visit. To the east of them lies everything which they have been accustomed, the great civilizations of the western world of Europe and America.

Here was a city populated mostly by descendants of the English section of the British race whose love for flowers was demonstrated in the floral background so typical of the Englishman who love flowers and gardens, whether at home or abroad.

It was apt that His Majesty in his address which was broadcast in America and in the British Isles, should point to the vast distances of Canada, with Victoria farther from Ottawa than Ottawa is from the Britain, that he had gained a new understanding of the Canadian people and their development as the Queen and he crossed Canada and proceeded to the Pacific Coast, that he should express a wish to have seen the far north with its vast possibilities for the youth of the land for His Majesty understands that pioneering spirit which has made Canada and makes a great nation,, with something of that Viking spirit which is part of the blood of the British race. And then as he stood in the legislative building of the British Columbia capital, many thousand miles from London, about a third of the way around the globe, the King thought of the happiness and concert of nations and said that cooperation is the way of prosperity, and not conflict. So momentous was this remark that his audience forgot and interrupted his speech with applause. Here was a King-Emperor, head of over five hundred millions of people of various races, whom he is leading in the path of peace, thinking of all the nations and thinking how much better all nations would be if they dwelt together in amity and understanding That what he had seen in Canada helped to inspire this utterance from the Sovereign of a third of the population of the earth is something to make Canada very proud and make her feel how fortunate and how great have been the responsibilities of her people in moulding the Dominion.

As the King and Queen travel eastward across Canada, the deep impressions they have gained will fathom more and more the spirit of the people whom the King has so honored with his praise.

This tour is a vast orbit from the Homeland to a capital city of a province of the Dominion on the verge of the Pacific Ocean.

TIME FOR CAUTION

This is the time of year when accidents become all too common. It is the time when motoring increases and accidents on the highways grow. It is the opening of the swimming season with a toll in tragedies marring the full enjoyment of the season.

Motorists do well to observe the rules of safety as traffic thickens more and more for their own safety and for that of others.

Bathers should avoid taking any risks in unknown streams and waters, or overstepping the bounds of common sense and reason.

"DON'T BE A TOURIST, BE A TRAVELLER," advises J. P. McEvoy, author and traveller. He makes the difference clear in an article in the current Rotarian Magazine, pointing out that it's largely a matter of having a definite purpose in your journeyings that makes them worth while. Pursue your interest, he urges. "Whether it is child welfare or rock gardens, whether your passion is architecture or orchids, fishing or folk dancing, butterflies or bridge, youll find devotees everywhere. You can always call with profit and the asurance of a welcome on those of your own profession in whatever land you are," he adds. "Do you sell? Do you buy? Your rivals are everywhere. Whether you make bricks or lay them or throw them, the sun never sets on your coworkers, collaborators, or conspirators."

"GREY OWL," FAMOUS WHITE INDIAN has gone to the Happy Hunting Grounds but the mystery of his life continues to live after him. "Grey Owl's" life was devoted to the conservation of animal life in Canada and he wrote several books and made many lectures in this country and England on his favorite topic. He spent many months of the year studying his feathered and furred friends at close hand and although he was accused of posing as an Indian when he was in reality a white man, his work was good and will live after him. Recently an application was made in court at Saskatoon for a share in his estate by Mrs. Angele Belaney, of Timagami, Ontario, who produced a marriage licence purporting to show that she married Grey Owl in 1910 at North Bay. Interested parties to the action include Grey Owl's wife, Yvonne, and the guardians of his daughter, Shirley Dawn. The Toronto General Trust Corporation are official executors of the Grey Owl estate.

"DE BOILER KID" a nickname given himself by Freddie Snite, who lives in an "iron lung," is again in the headlines. Last week Fred Snite started on a long journey from his home in Chicago, his destination being the famous Shrine of Miracles at Lourdes, France. With him went a staff of twelve: five pale blue-uniformed nurses, a physician, a physiotherapist, two orderlies, two mechanics and a chauffeur. His wealthy father said they were going for "a spiritual uplift." Cheerful Freddy, for whom the most optomistic life's span is seven years, said: "I will make an earnest plea to God and the Blessed Mother for physical improvement knowing that He can cure me if He desires." Each Sunday Freddy's specially built trailer has taken him in his cream-coloured 900-pound cylinderical respirator to a small church near his winter home at Miami Beach, Florida The trailer backs to the door, the respirator rolls down a ramp, and Freddy trundles up the aisle to hear Mass and partake of Holy Communion.

ONE GALLANT SOLDIER OF A rural regiment will long remember the visit of the King and Queen to Kingston. He was enjoying the train trip from Belleville to Kingston and had his head out of the window when a playful gust of wind removed his military hat. The train obligingly stopped and he ran back for his hat. Unfortunately the train started up again before he reached it and he was marooned in Napanee for the rest of the day, boarding the train again that evening on its return. What a chaffing he received from his pals when he rejoined his regiment.

NOT WHAT HE THOUGHT

At a Guildhall dinner it was the lot of a pretty, witty little lady to be taken into dinner by an eminent bachelor judge, who was for ever worrying about his health and imagining all sorts of complaints were about to attack him.

However, by exerting her charm she managed to keep him entertained throughout the dinner until the sweet arrived, when suddenly he laid down his knife and fork, and, growing very pale, turned to her.

As she looked at him in silent surprise, he muttered anxiously: "Madam, I fear I must ask you to excuse me. What I have been fearing has happened. I have suddenly developed a severe attack of paralysis of the lower limbs."

"Oh, please don't distress yourself!" exclaimed the lady cheerfully. "It was my leg you were pinching, not your own!"

THAT BODY OF YOURS

We All Need Mental Treatment

About fifty per cent of all the beds in hospitals are occupied by mental patients. As we think of the sayings and actions of some of our friends and acquaintances, and also, at times, of our own sayings and actions, the wonder is that there are not even more beds occupied by mental patients.

We all have our little anxieties, worries, pet illusions, repressions, an inferiority complex along some lines and a superiority complex among others. In fact, many of us are "border-line" mental cases that require but some shock to make us, for the time being at least, fit patients for a mental hospital.

In speaking of how easy, how almost naturally, normal individuals can become mental patients, Dr. J. P. S. Cathcart, Chief Neuropsychiatrist of Pensions and National Health, Canada, says:

"During the life time of each and every one of us experiences are encountered that continue to have painful and distressing associations (or memories) because of our inability to understand or deal satisfactorily with them. Our only recourse is that of forgetting, but actually nothing is forgotten; certainly nothing of an emotional nature. The painful event may and does often keep out of our conscious thoughts. We push the memories of these painful experiences aside and call this "repression" and the repressed experience is a 'conflict'. Just as long as we can prevent these repressions and conflicts from interfering with our everyday life and responsibilities we can consider ourselves normal, but when these past painful experiences become a large part of our daily thoughts, they influence our actions and we do abnormal or unreasonable things".

I believe the definition of a "normal" individual as outlined by Dr. Cathcart in National Health Review should help us all.

"The normal individual is one who is 'comparatively' free of symptoms, is unhampered by serious mental conflicts, has a satisfactory working ability and can love some one else besides himself. In other words, he is an individual who has the capacity or ability to become adjusted to life, to give and take, and to maintain a satisfactory balance between himself and his surroundings or circumstances.

INFORMALITY GREETS THEIR MAJESTIES IN REGINA

Informality marked the welcome of the King and Queen to Regina. Shortly after this picture was taken the Speaker of the Legislature read the address of welcome in the open air where all could see. As the royal procession arrived at the parliament buildings a voice from the gallery demanded: "Three cheers for the King" and got them.

On A Market Day In Galway

Who says the jaunting car is dying out? The few kept for visitors in Dublin and Killarney don't count; there are dozens of real jaunting cars on a market day in Galway. Early in the morning the country people come pouring in, donkeys, ponies, and horses down the road. Big churns set high on carts, or great round balls of butter about two feet across and yellow as gold; butter, sweet and unsalted, made of cream in plunge churns. Donkeys trot in, bulky with panniers full of carrageen and dillisk, and by truck, lorry, bus, and cart come eggs, eggs, eggs, hundreds of eggs in big deep baskets. The baskets are a study in themselves, every growth of sally willow, every sort of straw, reed, and rush seem to be used. All day long continues the invasion of Galway. There are many small shops that specialize in imported goods, special shops which are very English, or very French, or Dutch, or Jewish, these all hold their own in Galway town, and keep up their same slowly-won, long-lasting patronage.

Because Galway, down the centuries, has always housed generations of foreign traders and, as foreigners must, these traders have turned to the natives for help under local conditions, so today, the country people visit the shops in a spirit of enterprise....Go into Galway on a market day, if you are of those who can enjoy just watching things. Across the square comes a fine, fat country woman, one of the old school, a black shawl over her head, and voluminous thick petticoats giving her stability and presence. Her bare flat feet slap the paving stones, and she stands beyond a shop and looks in. The creases in the shawl behind her head register her slow look, from the bottom up to the top of that window, and then she turns sideways. When she has taken her bearings and has her mind made up, in she goes, and there's a pause Presently out she comes, driving before her a small elegantly slim and modern looking shop assistant, whose thin legs on their high heels look incredibly hoof-like and aloof beside the customers flat bare toes. The country woman indicates her object, the polite assistant shakes her head apologetically. The country woman draws back indignantly (thereby blocking up the entire doorway. With one hand she waves aside expostulations from the rear, now the small assistant can neither get in nor out. We see a long and voluble argument. Finally both return into the shop again and as by some unseen agency the object in the window is withdrawn, and presently our country woman comes out again and continues her way, breathing deeply, even as the ocean heaves after deep storms.—From 'Irish Holiday,' by Dorothy Hartley. (New York: McBride.)

MORTGAGE BANK

where the mortgage is directly affected would work out are:

A—A farmer has property appraised for $8,000 in the light of present conditions. There is a mortgage of $8,000 at seven per cent with four years arrears of interest, making his present obligation $9,280. Under the act this mortgage would be reduced by eliminating two years' interest—$640—and then further adjusting the principal, including the other two years' interest arrears, so it would not exceed 80 per cent of the appraisal value. The mortgage is now for 20 years at $6,400 and interest is reduced to five per cent.

B—A city worker has a home appraised at $3,000 with a mortgage of $2,000 at seven per cent. He is two years in arrears of interest—$420—so his obligation is $2,420. His mortgage will be reduced to 80 per cent of $3,000 which is $2,400, and h's interest will be reduced to 5 1-2 per cent a year. The term of the mortgage may or not be extended. It will be a matter for agreement.

Their Majesties Stand Trip Well

Victoria, May 31 (CP)—Happy at the wonderful welcome Canada has given them, well and fit after as strenuous a trip as any modern Monarchs have taken, the King and Queen last night made ready to turn their backs on the Pacific for a fast return run east.

Their appearance yesterday as they went through a five-hour schedule of functions and parades and later rested at Government House indicated they stood the first half of the trip splendidly.

While on the prairies the King seemed a little tired at times, but his rest at Banff gave him new vigor. The Queen has never appeared to find the continual parading, receptions, formal dinners and luncheons and the long train rides a all fatiguing.

Members of their staff say they take it all in their stride and really enjoy greeting the crowds, meeting people and watching the country's beautiful scenery from the Royal train. Their actions as they ride through the various cities support this.

The Queen is always eager for new and interesting sights and often touches His Majesty's elbow to point out a colorful group of subjects or a unique decoration. His Majesty always turns to look back.

They move again into the sea of faces tomorrow when they travel to Vancouver into the din of shouting and the rumble of train wheels, suspended in cheers and songs and flags.

But no one who has been travelling with them across Canada expects either the King and Queen to break under the hard work they are doing. The unanimous opinion among reporters aboard the pilot train is that the Royal couple can "take it."

TORONTO MAY VOTE UPON ANNEXATIONS

Toronto, May 31—(CP)—Toronto Board of Control passed a motion today to have Toronto taxpayers vote Jan. 1 on whether they favor the city annexing suburban municipalities. The motion will go before city council June 12 for approval.

Mayor Ralph Day said he feared a government survey being completed would favor amalgamation, and he thought the Toronto citizens' viewpoint should be on record.

The municipalities likely to be affected would be North York, East York and West York, Scarborough, Leaside, Forest Hills, New Toronto, Long Branch, Mimico and possibly Port Credit.

Mother's Day Conclusions

How did she take it, this festival in her honor, which we've heard so much about of late years—Mother's Day?

To satisfy her curiosity, your reporter decided to cruise around the Big Town and see how Mother was making out. Is Mother's Day a genuine tribute to Mother, or, as some cynical grouches maintain, a whipped-up campaign to sell knick-knacks which appeal to older women?

Decidedly not. After touring department stores, restaurants, theatres, even beauty parlors, to see what was being done for mother, the conclusion was reached that Mother's children act toward her on the second Sunday in May as they'd like to treat her every day in the year, if only they had the time and money.

In a big department store, I saw an old lady who might have posed for Whistler's 'Arrangement in Black and Gray.' Whistler, as you remember, wouldn't call it a portrait of his mother for the most sentimental of reasons.

The elderly lady who resembled the portrait was well past her three score and ten. Affectionately she was escorted by her son, evidently a clergyman. He was all of fifty but still her boy, and not above getting a call-down now and then, in spite of his clerical collar. He wanted her to have a five-dollar bag fitted with a sizeable mirror. But his mother would have none of this extravagance. She held out for imitation leather at $1.50 minus the mirror.

"James I'm amazed at you, suggesting I must have a mirror."

"Who gets back a prettier reflection? As your spiritual adviser, I insist." And the $5.00 bag was mother's.

At a restaurant, which means festivity to all women, the jam landed me at a table with a mother and daughter. Mother was sixtyish, daughter a spinsterly girl who might have looked middle age when she was ten. "No, dear, I don't want caviar canape, nor lobster, nor steak and bananas, which you say is so good. I'm going to choose scrambled eggs, little sausages, a pot of tea, and apple pie."

"But mother you have all those things at home almost every day. This is a party I'm giving you, because it's Mother's Day."

"It's always a party dear, when I can be with you. I wish it could be arranged so we lived in the same city but of course you can't give up that swell teaching job."

"Some day we will live together, mother—regular spree this afternoon." And the spinsterly daughter looked young as she said it.

Flowers for mother, books, perfume, little frou-frou things for her wardrobe. But the prize comedy touch for Mother's Day was in a beauty parlor, where grandma was being treated to a facial by her daughter and grand-daughter, and the final suggestion was "why not have your eyebrows arched? You'd look so ducky with hoop eyebrows."

Woman Guest of Honor Should be Served First

I am constantly astonished at the number of hostesses who help themselves first when there is a woman guest at their table. I find myself wondering if they really think that this is the correct thing to do or if they have ever given this important question any thought. I never am able to read the explanation in the expression of most of these hostesses, for they always look so smug in the thought that they are being "correct".

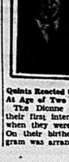
However, some hostesses who have debated this sequence of service justify the fact that they have themselves served first by saying that this makes it easier for the guest of honor to observe how she shall serve herself to the dish. Actually it is unworthy for a hostess to assume that the guest of honor is such a socially unaccustomed person that she doesn't know how to serve herself.

Whatever the mistaken reason, it is no compliment to the guest of honor if the hostess is served first. Under this procedure the hostess receives the fresh dish with the unused serving pieces. Passed to the woman guest, or to the woman guest of honor, is the incomplete, broken-into dish, with the used serving pieces. Which of them receives the real courtesy, the greater consideration?

To the hostess who thinks graciously and carefully about every detail of her service, it is important that she give courteous consideration to her guests; that she honors her guest of honor. She will always therefore, give to her woman guest of honor the privilege of helping herself to a fresh, untouched dish. She will realize that it is rule to permit herself to be served first.

Even when the carving and serving are done at the table by the host or hostess, the woman guest of honor should be served first. With this informal service, the host or hostess has an opportunity of honoring the woman guest of honor by graciously asking her first for her preferences. As the guest of honor's plate is passed to her, the host or hostess may courteously say, "This is for you, Mrs. Hill (or 'Mary'), and I hope it is just as you wished."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children



Quints Reacted to Discipline At Age of Two

The Dionne Quintuplets made their first international broadcast when they were just a year old. On their birthday, a special program was arranged from the nursery, and millions heard them. First they sobbed lustily because the program came just when the five of them should have been going to sleep, and they resented this interference with their regular schedule. But they made up for this outburst a few minutes later when they cooed contentedly into the microphone as they were getting bathed.

On their second birthday, they were beginning to change over from babies to little girls. We could see that by the fact they were becoming clothes conscious and were developing a sense of propriety. They were beginning to react to discipline too. Although they put their own toys away at night, we were still far from having them trained to the reasonable obedience we have now. Little incidents occurred which kept the nursery in somewhat of an uproar—three of them would climb out of bed at midnight, romp about the nursery for a while and then climb back into bed again. Marie developed a habit of exploring, crawling up on a cupboard by means of a chair, pushing the chair away with her foot and sitting there, marooned and wailing.

This same little girl turns up for her second birthday party with a black eye, acquired when she fell and struck a chair while on one of her climbing escapades. Already the Quints had learned the fascination of smashing glass. They had found that a toy brought sharply against one of the nursery windows results in the dandiest crash-bang. So we had all the windows replaced with unbreakable glass.

By this time the Quints were saying a few word in French. They had, besides, a language all their own, by means of which they conversed freely among themselves. Of course we didn't understand them but they didn't care. By this time, too, they had almost outgrown the use of diapers.

At three, the Quints were dressing themselves completely. They were feeding themselves, too, and we had taught them to carry their dirty dishes out to the pantry after they had finished their meal. We had taught them many thing. For instance, all five were unhappy one day when we hung a picture of a duck on the nursery wall. The duck had its mouth open, and the children had all been taught that it was bad form to keep your mouth open.

They all kneeled for prayers, and they insisted that their dolls kneel just as they did. Already all showed a great admiration for music. They could dance and they could carry a tune. Emilie and Marie had seventeen teeth, one more than the others.

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

An interesting meeting of Melrose Women's Institute was held on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. J. C. Milligan. A patriotic program, under the leadership of Mrs. E. Lazier was carried out. During the business period plans were made for entering an Institute "Linen Chest" at the C.N.E.

A change was made in the delegates to the District Annual. Owing to the fact Miss B. Robinson could not act as delegate to the district meeting to appear on the program with a musical number, Mrs. C. Haight and Mrs. R. Macfarlane were appointed to go to give a duet. The matter of a project for next year was discussed and first choice was "Refinishing of Furniture," second was "Vegetable Cookery."

The secretary presented an invitation to Melrose Branch to attend the June meeting of the Quinte Branch. The invitation was accepted.

The roll call, to which nearly all responded was an interesting thought about the royal visit. Following this the leader gave the topic paper after which all joined in "The Maple Leaf".

Mrs. Wm. McLaren read a poem after which Mrs. C. Osborne gave a reading. Collection amounting to $3.85 was received. The National Anthem was sung and lunch served. Attendance was 36 members and four visitors.

Banquet Concludes Y. P. U. Season at Mt. Pleasant, Rawdon

Rawdon, June 1.—On Friday evening, May 26, Mount Pleasant Rawdon Young People's Union staged as a closing feature a very successful banquet with over one hundred and twenty-five in attendance.

Rev. A. H. Poulter, Wooler, was guest speaker and based his remarks on "Why we are here and what it all means?" He said if all who had attended the meetings weekly would look back over the past few months they would surely feel that they had been helped spiritually, morally, physically and socially, as each of these relationships goes to build up the character of manhood and womanhood.

He based his four cornerstones on a poem by Henry Van Dyke and said individuals must think clearly, without confusion, and train themselves to choose wisely; they must act from honest motives because what a person does, determines his destiny. The last two stones were "Love your fellowmen" and "Have faith to trust in God and Heaven". He closed with an appropriate poem and urged each one present to do their best to build up His kingdom on earth.

Rev. J. E. Beckel was toastmaster and the program opened with a toast to the King. All responded with the National Anthem and Mrs. Merle Spencer presided at the piano.

Mr. Bert Jeffs proposed the toast to the guests and the following replied: Miss Mary Sharpe, president of Wellman's Union; Mr. Wesley Farrell, vice-president of Bethel Union; Miss Bessie McMullen, president of Springbrook Union; Mr. Don Williams, president St Paul's Union who also brought greetings from South Hastings executive and Belleville Presbytery executive; Mr. Jack Rannie, president of Hoards' Union; Mr. Lorne Hagerman, president of Salem Union; and Mrs. A. H. Poulter. All expressed their thanks for the kind invitation to enjoy such an interesting evening.

Mrs. Cyrus Summers proposed a toast to the winning side, those who rode in the Plymouth car and were under the leadership of Miss Esma Cole. The losers drank a toast with their leader, Mrs. Summers in honor of the winning side. Last fall the two captains chose sides and cars. The losers travelling in a Nash car scored 146 while the Plymouth car travelled 155 miles and won by nine points.

Those on the winning side were Miss E. Cole, Mr. Ed McKeown, Mr. Frank Spencer, Mr. Bert Jeffs, Master Ross Jeffs, Mrs. Blake Sharp, Miss Anna Sharp, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Miss Marion Rose, Mr. Herb Smith, Miss Marion Phillips, Mr. Grant Hubble, Mrs. Herb Higgs, Miss Muriel Sine, Miss Eileen MacMullen, Mr. Percy MacMullen, Mrs. Merle Spencer, Miss Summers, Master Don Spencer, Mr. Bob Melville, Miss Evelyn Melville, Master Jerry Melville, Mr. Douglas McAdam, Mr. Irvin Potts, Mr. Roy Thrasher, Miss Margaret Johnson, Mr. Jack Sharp, Mr. Harvey Couch, Mr. Fred Conley, Mr. Clifford Holmes.

Despite the 'flu epidemic, the cold weather and bad roads, the Union carried on with the president in attendance at every meeting. Miss Cole responded to the toast on behalf of winners and said by working co-operatively the union had been most successful and it was hoped that a larger number would plan to attend the meetings when the Union reopened in the fall

Messrs. John Coggins and Robert Melville led in a round of community singing. Master Neil Hubble delighted with a popular song, his mother, Mrs. Percy Hubble, playing the accompaniment and Neil was given a hearty ovation. Miss Marion Rose recited a humorous number. Mr. Cyrus Summers and Miss Gladys Summers delighted with two musical numbers on the guitar and harmonica. Mr. John Coggins and Miss Doris Rannie contributed a duet with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as accompanist. Miss Rannie was especially welcomed as she taught four years in this community. Masters Ross and Ralph Jeffs rendered a piano duet.

Rev. J. E. Beckel and Mrs. Summers each spoke briefly and again the National Anthem was sung. The hall was decorated in pastel shades of pink and blue with bouquets of lilacs and apple blossoms. The tables looked pretty with vases of tulips, bleeding hearts and pansies and the silver collection taken to defray expenses amounted to over ten dollars.

The following committees were responsible for the success of the banquet together with the president. Lunch, Miss Eileen MacMullen, Mrs. Ken Weaver, Miss Anna Sharp and Miss Doris Sine; decorations, Miss Esma Cole, Mr. Billy McAdam and Mr. Irvin Potts; program, Mr. Bert Jeffs, Mrs. M. Spencer, Rev. J. E. Beckel, Mr. John Coggins.

This will officially close the Union meetings till fall but on Conference Sunday the young people are planning to give a brief program after Sunday school.

Mrs. Mary Hay is slowly recuperating after an illness of two weeks.

On Tuesday, May 23, the pupils of the Williams school with their teacher, Miss Fenice Joyce entertained the pupils of the Allan school and their teacher, Miss Esma Cole. UNEARTH 300-POUND MASTODON TUSK IN NIAGARA CLAY Workmen digging into a clay bank while doing restoration work on old Fort George, near Niagara-On-The-Lake, Ont., unearthed a nine-foot tusk, believed to be a relic of the days when mastodons tramped the marshes of southern Ontario. The curved piece of yellowed ivory is being shipped to the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. At top L. Sternberg of the museum staff is pictured preparing the relic for shipment to the museum. C. W. Dare, seen holding shovel lower left) was the worker who first discovered the tusk. He reported his find to H. B. Stewart (right) foreman in charge of the restoration work who summoned authorities. Pieces of the crumbled bone attached to the tusk are being examined by Miss Margaret Way of Kingston, Ont., (lower right) who is working on the government restoration project.

DOCTOR OPPOSES STATE MEDICINE

Dr. Jones of Kingston Praises Contributory Health Insurance

Hamilton, Ont., Jun 1—(CP) — Dr. W. A. Jones of Kingston in his presidential address to the Ontario Medical Association condemned State medicine but praised contributory health insurance as a solution of the problem of providing medical care for the Canadian people.

Dr. Jones suggested 50 cents a week from every person in Canada would provide citizens with complete medical and surgical attendance with laboratory service, semi-private hospital accommodation and standard nursing service.

"If people contributed consistently during the earning period of their lives to an insurance fund, there would be no difficulty in paying for medical attention of all kinds during periods of sickness," he told the doctors.

Dr. Jones said under State medicine the "free and independent medical man surrenders his freedom and gives up his birth-right for a mess of pottage."

Doctors under State medicine might become "serfs to a system, "subject to the wiles and machinations of politics and politicians." The element of competition and the desire for advancement professionally and financially would be removed, he warned, and patients would not receive the best type of medical service nor would the medical man employed in such service have as good an opportunity to do good work.

Dr. Jones expressed concern over misunderstandings between the practitioners and the Ontario Department of Health. He said several district meetings had passed resolutions expressing the anxiety of the medical profession members to co-operate with the Department.

He suggested most misunderstandings were caused by using letters as the sole method of communication between doctors and practitioners. Doctors sent out by the Department could discuss matters with doctors and eliminate much friction, he said.

The Stars Say

For Friday, June 2

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits for this day may be read as generally adverse. While there are no definite predictions of disaster, there are undercurrents of trickery, fraud, deception or some other sinister situation brought about by unscrupulous persons. Beware of these, use vigilance and sound judgment, and some favorable prospects will be diverted to constructive channels. Elders or superiors should be handled with diplomacy

Those whose birthday it is may be able to sidestep certain menacing conditions by alertness to fraud, treachery or some other obscure or subtle situation brought about by designing persons. This might be in high places, but in all be wary, tactful and use ingenuity in parrying peculiar attacks.

A child born on this day may be clever, direct and plainspoken, but it may be the victim of those of very opposite characteristics. Careful training in not being subject to obvious deceit is recommended.

Despite the speech yesterday by Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Soviet Commissar, criticising British proposals for a three-way alliance, official circles in London are still confident that an agreement will be reached, perhaps reasonably soon.

One of Molotoff's chief objections to the British formula was its omission of specific guarantees for Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, Baltic countries close to Russia's northwestern frontier. There is some doubt as to whether he included Finland in this category. But it is known that the Finns have expressed bitter opposition to their inclusion in any alliance with the Soviet.

British spokesmen explained the British formula was aimed at aggression and it did not make any difference where it broke out, so long as it was in Europe. They said the three Baltic countries were included in the general terms of the pact although they were not enumerated and there was no doubt if any one of them was the victim of aggression and asked assistance, Great Britain and France would go to their aid.

Opposition Strengthened

Prime Minister Chamberlain, who had counted on announcing shortly the conclusion of a pact with Russia, faced the prospect of strengthened opposition to his foreign policy in the June 5 gathering of Parliament.

Recent progress in the long negotiations had softened the opposition, clamoring for quick action in lining up Russian military might with that of Great Britain and France to bolster their new commitments in Europe.

Germans considered the rejection—voiced yesterday by Molotoff—not only as a setback for Britain and France but encouragement for Germany and Italy.

Italians sources viewed it as a severe setback for Britain. The tone of press dispatches to Rome disclosed the satisfaction Fascists derived from the speech.

"Brutal Soviet frankness causes Democratic delusions to crumble," was Il Messaggero's headline.

Speech Postponed

"The speech postpones, if it does not entirely destroy, the construction of a Demo-Bolshevist pact on which the hopes of the anti-Fascist war mongers of the entire world were hinged," said the dispatch to Il Messaggero.

Il Popolo Di Roma interpreted Molotoff's speech as meaning that as the price of an agreement Britain and France must "agree to guarantee not only the territorial security of Russia but also the Soviet policy and with it the policy of the Comintern in Western Europe and Asia."

The French expressed belief Russian suspicions could be allayed and that eventually an accord could be reached. It was understood in Paris that Russia's particular objections to the proposed treaty were aimed at clauses linking it to the League of Nations calling for consultation instead of automatic support for Baltic states on the Russian border in the event of attack.

But the mountain folk gathered to cheer a loyal welcome. Children from nearby towns in British Columbia and Alberta came early to join the crowds in the quaint village 3,472 feet above sea level.

Snow-clad peaks, glistening lakes, evergreen forests lay waiting as the King and Queen came back over the mountains from the Pacific. Probably they will motor to many parts of the vast park before continuing the eastward journey, leaving for Edmonton at 9.30 a.m. tomorrow.

Outlook cabin, home of Their Majesties at Jasper Park Lodge, is a spectacle of color. Gardeners have brought thousands of plants into full bloom. Flowers are banked throughout the lodge.

The Royal cabin looks out across the strangely green waters of Lac Beavert to 11,033-foot Mount Edith Cavell, snow-topped and glacier-studded. Northwest lies Pyramid Mountain, 9,076 feet high and streaked with all the rainbow's colors. Tumbling east of the lodge the Maligne River races through its canyon beneath the ramparts of the Colin range.

Seventy-five miles south of Jasper lie the great Columbia ice fields, known as one of the continent's greatest beauty sopts but hardly penetrated by man until building of a highway, still under construction, from Jasper to Banff,

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

CHAPTER XVII

They had been in St. Petersburg a week now. Anson and Corinne had gone home. Janice, Wylde and Mrs. Greene, in a rather strained relationship, stayed on at a hotel, as though waiting for something—Janice could not imagine what, unless it was for her to succumb to their insistence that she go home to her father.

Patiently, Wylde had insisted that nothing must stand in the way of their happiness. Impatiently, Mrs. Greene had stormed and pleaded that Janice see sense, return to her father, and take her rightful place in the world.

Stubbornly, Janice had met their arguments with quiet refusal. If she would not go back to her father for a home and money for herself, surely she would not do it for money for a husband.

"How can I love Wylde when he is trying to force me to do this thing — trying to make me go to father more of a mendicant than before?" she asked herself. She tried to analyze her feelings. She studied Wylde in odd moments — and her clear, penetrating blue eyes disturbed him, made him impatient, apologetic, explanatory.

And then, suddenly, one night at dinner, Mrs. Greene was smiling, and Wylde seemed full of confidence. Looking about the huge dining room, Janice saw her father and sister, Ivonne, at a table for two across the room.

In that moment, she knew that Mrs. Greene had planned this meeting — knew that she was a mere puppet, with others pulling the strings.

The blond giant who was her father aroused pride in her. He looked a strong man, not given to bending his will to others. She liked that. His blue eyes were as deep and clear as her own. When they met hers across the room, and he bowed, she found herself smiling back at him, a little excited over the battle she knew must soon be forthcoming.

"We're alike. No wonder Mother said I was so much like him. No wonder the lawyer said I was his daughter. I want to know him!" she told herself.

She even liked her sister, so like the mother who had been unable to fight life's stern battles. Liked her—and found no envy toward her in her heart.

"Your father and sister," Mrs. Greene said, and could not hide the triumph in her voice.

"Yes," Janice replied briefly. Mentally, she added, "If you think you are going to get anything out of me, you are entirely mistaken. Whatever occurs, is between my father and myself."

So many thoughts crowded her head that she hardly listened to the conversation at the table. No reason why she should not be friendly with this charming man who was her father. No reason why she should not spend a pleasant evening, or several pleasant evenings, with him. This man would understand her attitude, would respect her wishes, would maybe admire her for her stubborn stand—so like himself when set upon an idea as the right course to follow.

Resentfully, she wondered if Mrs. Greene had told her father about Wylde and herself. Had she dared to imply that Wylde could not marry her until she came into her money? Did her father think that she was willing to come to him on his terms only to make it possible to marry the man she loved? Oh, he must not think that!

"They're leaving," Wylde said, his words penetrating her abstraction.

But they were not leaving the dining room, only their table, making their way straight toward the Greene table.

Ogden Flagg greeted Lelia Greene courteously, shook hands with Wylde, and turned to Janice with a smile that was friendly, but with eyes that were speculative.

"At last, after many years, we meet again, Jan," he said quietly.

"How do you do, Father?" she replied, in a voice that trembled with excitement.

She suddenly remembered that her mother had hated the name Jan and had never permitted her to be called it. "Your father called you that—it sounds boyish. Don't ever let me hear you use it," her mother had said once, when she was very small, and she had never forgotten it. Helene had called her Jan occasionally, but never in front of her mother.

"And here is your sister, Ivonne. About time you girls knew each other."

"Yes," Janice studied her lovely sister, and smiled. She knew how to handle Ivonne. She had handled an older Ivonne for years, and understood the character that shirked responsibility and, with grasping fingers took all life could offer.

Ivonne's greeting was not as enthusiastic as Janice had hoped for. After all, it was nice having a family, and suddenly, she wanted that family to be very friendly. But Ivonne was more interested in Wylde. They were soon laughing and talking about old times, and Janice realized, with a sudden pang, that Ivonne liked Wylde immensely.

"Remember the time you thought yourself head over heels in love with me?" Ivonne was asking Wylde, with light-hearted laughter bubbling over. And Wylde was blushing like a schoolboy.

"Post mortems are bad form, Vonne," he reminded her, and laughed nervously.

Wylde had said that Ivonne could not see him for dust but, at this moment, there was no dust in her eyes—she saw him and found him interesting. Janice saw that without half looking, and she saw, too, that Wylde was glad to be reminded of those days when he had been head over heels in love with this beautiful girl.

When they had all had coffee, Ogden Flagg suggested, "I'd like you to come up to my suite, Jan. There is much we have to talk about, and I'd like to get acquainted."

Before Janice could answer, Mrs. Greene hastily interposed.

"Of course—run along with your father, Janice."

Ivonne, with dark brown eyes veiled by long lashes, said casually—much too casually—"I'll keep an eye on Wylde for you. He can take me dancing. Surely you'll trust him to your sister?'

Janice laughed — but things suddenly seemed very black.

CHAPTER XVIII

"Not easy to meet a daughter after so many years," Ogden Flagg began, when he and Janice were alone in the living room of his suite.

"Particularly when Mrs. Greene has planned this meeting," Janice said candidly.

"Jove, girl, you come to the point! I like that." Flagg smiled.

"But it was without my knowledge," Janice added quickly. She could not bear to be put in a false light with her father. Now that she had met him, she admired him, wanted to love him, wanted his love.

"Oh, don't hold it against Lelia", he remonstrated. "She is so full of Wylde's future and happiness that she doesn't use finesse sometimes."

There was a silence, during which Janice could not meet her father's penetrating blue eyes.

"Are you in love with Wylde, Jan?"

"And what difference does that make—Father?"

"I know their finances are in bad shape, that Wylde must make an advantageous marriage. It is all right with me, if you really love him."

"Very kind of you—but I cannot see it that way. Whether I love Wylde or not, is not your problem. If he loves me, he can marry me and take care of me — my family does not have to take care of the man I marry." There was pride in her voice, in the flash of her eyes.

Her father was silent and, in that moment, Janice knew that he was trying to believe that she really meant what she said. Suddenly, she felt she had to make him believe her, understand that she wanted nothing of him in the way of money—only his love and respect. She leaned eagerly forward in her chair, a slight figure of intense earnestness.

"I mean that, Father," she insisted.

"Jove, I think you do!" There was admiration in his eyes. "But, Jan, if it means happiness to you—"

"Would it mean happiness to you, if you were in my place?" she demanded. She knew they thought alike, that they would see things from a mutual viewpoint if only she could dispel his mistaken ideas about her.

"Girls are so different today." He hesitated. "But if I were a girl, I'd want to marry a man who was willing to take care of me."

"That's the way I feel. Wylde has always been the dream of a girl in pigtails who thought him a wonderful Prince Charming," she admitted. Suddenly, she knew she could talk with her father frankly. He would understand. "But now, I am beginning to wonder where Prince Charming is. The storybook prince had character, and the ability to conquer all obstacles. Didn't he, Father?"

"The old version had him so," admitted Ogden Flagg.

They got no further on the subject of Wylde Greene. They found themselves talking, instead of what had happened in the years since they had seen each other, of what Janice wanted of life.

"Thanks for accepting my Christmas gift," Flagg said suddenly.

"I couldn't refuse. I don't want to hurt you, Father."

"Yes. I can see that. Sort of your mother and myself at war within you. How is it going to work out, Jan?"

"How do you think?" she countered.

"Hanged if I don't believe that I'm going to win!" There was exultation in his whole manner.

She looked at him, startled.

"I mean that you're so much my daughter, that you will have your own way and get somewhere," he hastened to explain. "You'll win over those traits of your character that you don't want to overcome you. I'd like to have you with me, though, Jan."

"I'm a good stenographer," she said, a little smile turning up the corners of her lips.

"I'm looking for a daughter, not a secretary," he protested.

"I'm afraid I'm not looking for a life of luxury. I want something to do in this world."

"Ivonne manages to keep pretty busy," he pointed out.

"You call that busy?" demanded Janice. "That is just frittering away time!"

"Don't tell her that!'"

"Could I live with my mother for all those years without learning when to hold my tongue?"

Her father laughed heartily.

Then he sobered and demanded. "Ever feel like shaking Lois? I did it once, and she never forgave me."

Resentment flared up in Janice for a moment, then died.

"I know just how you must have felt, but I loved her, and maybe I understood her better than you did."

"I deserved that," he admitted quickly. "Your sister would never have answered me so. Jan, won't you come home with me?"

Slowly, she shook her head. She did not want to hurt him, but something, some intangible persistence within, demanded that she continue in her search for—what? Self-respect? Independence before she accepted all the wealth and security her father offered?

"I can't—not now. Please. I can't even explain to you, but I've got to go on as I am. Oh, it isn't resentment at being given to Mother—or dislike of you—for I really like you a lot. It's something that I can't put into words—something that I feel."

"Sort of a stubbornness not to give in to Wylde?'

"Maybe I am testing his love," she admitted, "but it seems to be deeper — something that doesn't even include him."

"Are you really in love with him, Jan?"

"What is love, Father?"

"Danged if I know, except that it's an emotion that brings great happiness and great sorrow."

She left his suite hours later, after giving her promise that she would write him from time to time, keeping him advised of her doings. He and Ivonne were leaving for New York the next morning by plane. He was going to make his home there from now on.

"Is Ivonne flying you north?" Jan asked, a little enviously.

"Ivonne? My dear, I'd not trust myself in any plane she piloted. I love life far too much for that. No, when I fly in her plane, we have a pilot with plenty of flying hours to his credit!"

His last words rang in her ears for many days afterwards: "Remember, Jan, you're my daughter—and I want you with me any time you'll come."

CHAPTER XIX

The next morning, when Janice joined the Greenes at breakfast, she heard that her father and sister had already gone. She smiled a little wistfully.

"Everything all right between you two?" Mrs. Greene asked, treading where others with finer sensibilities would not have dared venture.

"If you mean, am I going back to my father—no!"

"You little fool—with everything waiting for you!" said Mrs. Greene exasperated.

"Surely, Janice—" began Wylde.

"Will you excuse me?" Janice pushed aside her almost untouched breakfast, hastily rose, and left the dining room.

Up in her room she paced the floor. It was apparent that she had lost Wylde by refusing to go back to her father.

Did she really love him? If she did, why wasn't she torn with unhappiness? Why wasn't she on that bed, sobbing her heart out because her Prince Charming had proven mercenary? Oh, but she did love him There was a part of her now fairly aching for the feel of his arms about her, for his lips to crush hers, for tender words to assure her that nothing would separate them.

A knock, Mrs. Greene entered, regally.

"I've come to talk with you, Janice," she said firmly. "You do not seem to understand that you must take your proper place in the world; that, if you are going to marry Wylde, you must not be a working girl."

"You mean, Mrs. Greene, that if you are going to allow Wylde to marry me, I must be the wealthy daughter of Ogden Flagg," Janice stated flatly and clearly. "Well, I will not go to my father to demand my share of his money to marry your son or any other man!"

"That is insulting.'

"No more insulting than your attitude. I am stating in cold facts what you have tried to disguise as a kindly and conciliatory attitude on your part. You don't care whether my father and I are together or not—all you want is to have Wylde marry money. Well, let him marry Corinne — or any other wealthy girl—I don't care!"

No Trace of Bodies

Up to date there has been no trace of the bodies of James Miller and Andrew Goodwin, who have been missing since May 6th when they set out in Miller's new boat for a trial run. The boat was later found by Morley Helmer, Point Traverse fisherman, when he went to lift his nets. The boat was entangled in the nets. A constant search has been kept up since that time but all efforts so far have failed. There have been many rumours of finding the bodies but traced down they are found to be without foundation.

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs
People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.
What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. COURT BUILDING COST CRITICIZED

But Need of New Supreme Court Building is Admitted

Ottawa, June 1 (CP)—Criticism of the cost of the new Supreme Court of Canada Building in Ottawa was heard in the House of Commons last night, but Justice Minister Lapointe said the judicial power should be housed as well as the legislative power was housed in the Parliament Buildings.

The present Supreme Court Building was a "disgrace to Canada" he said. The highest court in the land should have a building in which Canadians could take pride.

Works Minister Cardin said the total cost of the building, including interior fittings, garages and terraces surrounding it would be $3,360,000.

Hon. Hugh Stewart, (Cons.-Leeds) agreed the Supreme Court should have a fine building but questioned the necessity of providing garages underneath the building. Harry J. Barber, (Cons.-Fraser Valley) said the Court Building would cost nearly twice as much as the Justice Building which housed the whole Justice Department and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mr. Lapointe said the Justice Building was an office building and could not be compared to the Court Building.

All Governments Blamed

"The most antiquated departments in the Government are Public Works and Post Office," said Dave Spence, (Cons.-Parkdale). "The Ministers don't seem to know anything and don't want to know anything."

He explained he was not criticising the present government particularly but all governments. He thought when the Public Works Department erected a building for another department the cost should be charged back.

The Post Office Department claimed to make a profit of $1,500,000 but the Public Works Department provided all Post Office buildings and maintained them and no one knew what this service cost.

4 Persons Injured In $100,000 Fire

Talco, Texas, June 1—(CP)—Fire that swept through the refinery of the Paluxy Asphalt Company following a series of explosions was brought under control early today. Damage was unofficially estimated at $100,000. Four persons were injured.

C. W. Moore, refinery worker, was in a critical condition in Paris hospital. C. S. Streetman, another workman, and Cotton Allen, employed by the American Liberty Pipeline Company, were burned slightly. A fireman suffered burns on his feet.

Paul Beasly, refinery workman, said the fire started from a minor explosion in the "flash tower" at the cracking plant as the result of pressure.

POLICE PROBE ROBBERY

Toronto, May 31.—(CP)—Police today investigated a reported assault and robbery of Benjamin Walker, jeweler and old gold dealer whom police were told was robbed of $5,500 cash in a house on Carleton Street last night.

According to the police report, Walker entered the house to complete an old-gold transaction conducted over the telephone earlier in the day. He was set upon and beaten by a man and woman.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

towns en route here from New Westminster 40 miles to the west. At each place Their Majesties smiled and waved from the observation platform to assembled thousands.

And the men, women and children of the Fraser Valley farming districts around Fort Langley, Mount Lehman and Matsqui cheered a loyal farewell.

Return journey across Their Majesties' Dominion started yesterday when they voyaged 82 miles from Victoria to Vancouver aboard the steamship Prince Robert. The vessel made a record-breaking trip of three hours and 10 minutes from the breakwater at Victoria to Vancouver's harbor entrance, docking 25 minutes ahead of schedule.

Wanted to Buy Island

During the trip the Queen said she would like to buy one of the islands that dot the Strait of Georgia between Victoria and Vancouver.

"Could I buy one of those islands," she asked Captain H. E. Nedden of the steamship Prince Robert.

She was told she probably could and the suggestion immediately was made unofficially that if any are still the property of the Crown—actually the Canadian Government—one be deeded to the Queen.

Government heads are expected to consider the proposal if Her Majesty is serious in her wish.

The King presented Captain Nedden with a pair of cuff links and the Queen turned to the captain after the presentation and said: "I want you to wear them and don't put them away."

Visit Stadium

The King and Queen drove 12 miles to New Westminster, visiting Queen's Park Stadium where 10,000 children assembled, and receiving civic officials in a station platform ceremony.

At Chilliwack the King had changed his Admiral of the Fleet uniform for a dark grey business suit with chalk stripes but Queen Elizabeth still wore the Queen's blue ensemble in which she left Victoria.

Here, too, public officers were presented and Their Majesties walked among war veterans gathered at the station. As the train left, the crowd of 10,000 broke through barriers to crush around the observation platform while the Sovereigns waved farewell.

No Additions to Trip

No additions or alterations can be made in the heavy program of Their Majesties it was stressed in a statement issued on behalf of the interdepartmental committee on the Royal visit.

"It is earnestly requested that plans will not be made in communities for organized demonstrations on a large scale on the assumption that any of the officials can give an assurance that Their Majesties will appear at any particular place not included in the official itinerary," the statement said.

"During their visit to Canada Their Majesties, on several occasions, have appeared on the rear platform of the train at operating stops, when these have occurred at convenient times of the day. It is hoped the people in the communities along the railway line will realize that these appearances, which are not in the official itinerary, have been due to the gracious kindness of the King and Queen."

THEIR MAJESTIES ARRIVE FOR VICTORIA NAVAL CEREMONY

HALF MILLION CHEER MONARCHS IN VANCOUVER

A truly royal welcome was given the King and Queen in Vancouver on their first visit to the Pacific coast. In the throng were Chinese, Japanese, bearded and turbaned Sikhs from India, and through the cheers the King and Queen could detect the broad drawl of visitors from over the border as well as of Canadians still carrying the distinctive accents of Yorkshire and Lancashire.

WALL STREET

New York, June 1 (AP)—Further selling dribbled into the stock market today and pushed down leaders fractions to around two points. Dealings slowed appreciably after an orderly opening and, near the fourth hour, prices were at the bottom in many cases.

Foreign markets did little either way.

Principal losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville and Owens-Illinois.

Among Canadian issues C.P.R. inched ahead and Dome fell back a trifle. In the bond market Dominion 4s were under moderate pressure.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 1 (CP) — Prices drifted downward today in Toronto Exchange in the first hour and although a firmer tone developed in the second hour, losses were not made up and mid-day found the mining and industrial indices down a half to nearly a point and the western oils off .34. Trading dried up on the decline and only 217,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours, about half the volume of the previous session.

Despite the weakness generally, Teck Hughes and Pamour advanced 10 to 15 cents. Declines were held down to five cents or less. A decline of a point for Noranda and ¾ for Nickel were the main casualties in the base metal group.

Steel, utility and senior oil shares were the heaviest of the industrial section and in the western oil group losses of 5 to 8 cents were netted by Calgary-Edmonton, Home and Okalta.

Butter Prices Rise At Toronto, Montreal

Toronto, June 1—Firmer prices were evident for butter and eggs on the Toronto open produce market Wednesday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Exports of cheese out of Montreal last week were reported by the Department at 15,241 boxes, bringing total shipments since May 1 to 71,145 boxes, an increase of 52,139 boxes when compared with the like period of 1938.

Light offerings cleared well at steady prices in morning trading on the butter market, but later values firmed as offerings dried up. Local sources reported the English market had advanced to 115 shillings for New Zealand finest and this factor imparted strength to domestic prices. While sales passed in early trading at 21 1-4c for the first grade Ontario product, supplies were not available at this level before the close. Sales were said to have been made at 21 1-2c, but trading was not sufficient to establish a market on this basis, with the result that prices closed nominal in the range of 21 1-4c to 21 1-2c for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids. Prints traded in retail channels at former prices.

Smaller receipts were clearing well on the egg market, and top grades advanced in the ungraded and retail divisions, while the graded section held unchanged. Grade A-large and A-medium rose 1c per dozen in the ungraded section to 18c and 16c respectively and this increase was passed along to the retail division. Graded shipments closed at 19 1-2c to 20c for grade A-large, 17 1-2c to 18c for medium, 15 1-2 to 16c for B's and 15c for C grades.

Quebec Butter Rises.

Montreal, June 1—(CP)—Quebec butter strengthened fractionally while other offerings ruled steady to shade easier on open produce markets here yesterday the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized fresh in wholesale jobbing lots was 21-3-4. Receipts: 503 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese brought 10 1-8 cents a pound. Receipts: 1,364 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21-21 1-2 cents a dozen for A-large; 18 1-2-19 for A-medium; 18 for B-large and 16 for C. Receipts: 1,060 cases.

REPAIRS TO WATER MAINS LEAVE MANY UNPREPARED

Unprepared residents of the city in these sections affected by the shutoff of the city water supply during the early hours this morning while employees of the Public Utilities Commission made repairs used water for washing from melted ice cubes in the family refrigerator, coffee water from the percolator, and other original sources, it was revealed.

In some sections full pressure of the water was not turned on until well past seven o'clock, and many a family reportedly breakfasted without the usual morning coffee or tea due to the scarcity of water. Others, forewarned by an advertisement of the Commission, had laid in sufficient supply to tide them over until the supply had been turned on again.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS DETAILED ON PATROL

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, Belleville, H. Jillings, Napanee, and R. Kay, Smith's Falls, left today for St. Catharines, Ont., where they will be detailed to patrol the Royal procession from that city to Niagara Falls, Ont., next week. These motor cycle officers were instructed to report at St. Catharines tomorrow when they will receive instructions as to their personal duties during the longest motor trip yet to be taken by their Majesties, when they will drive through the beautiful Niagara Peninsula. Inspector Frank Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police today announced that ten of his officers from the O.P.P. Eighth Division would also be dispatched to the Niagara district early next week for patrol duty during the presence of their Majesties just prior to leaving Canada for the United States.

SOUGHT BY POLICE

again immediately for the Skead Forestry Office on the opposite side of Lake Wahnipitae and a boat was despatched to bring out the search party and the body of the old recluse.

The find ended one of Northern Ontario's greatest manhunts, in progress since a week ago last Tuesday night when Cassleman disappeared from his farm house. Provincial Police had gone there to question him about the disappearance of Gilbert Bennett and Wilbur (Tom) Sawyer.

The hunt took on new intensity with the finding of the bodies of the wealthy Bennett and his friend in Mountain Creek last Friday. Sawyer's body was pierced by a bullet and Bennett's head had been smashed almost in half, apparently after being struck with a soft-nosed bullet.

Sold Holdings.

The veteran prospectors were believed to have been working on spectacular gold finds when slain. Bennett had told his lawyer he thought he had "the biggest gold mine on the North American continent". Shortly before his death, Bennett was said by friends to have sold his nickel holdings in the north for a large amount of money with which he was going to work his new claims.

Halting only during the last weekend, when rains and heat made the bush unbearable for two days, the search parties of Provincial Police and veteran woodsmen beat through the Wahnipitae bush district for Cassleman, who lived alone on his small farm for 23 years. The longer the search progressed the more sure they were that Cassleman would not be found alive.

Since Tuesday police had concentrated the search along the creeks and lakes, almost certain his body would be found at the bottom of one of them. Friends of the old man told police they would never find him alive; that they thought Cassleman would drown himself rather than surrender.

Climax of Feud

The slaying of Bennett and Sawyer was believed to have climaxed a long feud Cassleman carried on with them over land rights. The old man's licence of occupation of his 159-acre farm elapsed early in 1936 and was declared cancelled late that year. Bennett had the land rights to the property.

Bennett recently had been running blaze lines near Cassleman's shanty in his work exploring gold finds. The prospectors' camp was next to Cassleman's property on Lake Wahnipitae.

CLOUDY SKIES

Ships on the North Atlantic run were advised to use track "A", designated as an emergency, "extra southern" lane, after the coastguard cutter Champlain reported bergs far to the south of their usual positions on May 28.

The Champlain is one of a unit of coastguard vessels assigned to the ice patrol. The patrol, internationally supported, was created after the liner Titanic struck a berg and sank in April 1912.

Rains spattered western and northern North Dakota, offsetting damage to crops, but other sections of the state were in need of precipitation. Farmers in the Red River Valley expressed concern over hot winds that removed the soil's reserve moisture.

Police Blotter

The temptations of the big city apparently proved to great for a Moneymore man and his wife as they visited Belleville yesterday. Seeing the sights of the big city exhilarated the couple, but what really got them into trouble was the fact they had imbibed much too freely and not well with the result the pair were arrested on charges of intoxication.

The husband was placed in the men's cell and separated from his wife, who shared likewise punishment, but in the women's cell block. In their automobile was found two bottles of native wine, untouched, police revealed today. The pair were released this morning with instructions to return in time for Friday's city police court at which time charges of infractions of the Liquor Control Act will be preferred.

Constable Jerome, of the Canadian National police department, reported a motor car had apparently been abandoned on railway property. The vehicle, an old model Whippet bearing Ontario markers number 47-N-4, has not been disturbed from its parking position near the C.N.R. station for over three days, Constable Jerome, advised city police.

Numerous motorists return to their parked cars daily to find police stickers affixed the windshield informing the owner they have been in violation to the city one hour parking bylaws in force throughout the downtown area. Violations are found both in the mornings as well as the afternoon, police stated today.

Fine prevailing weather conditions are believed responsible for the increased number of transients seen passing through the city, 15 being given shelter at the police station last night.

Yak Butter Scarce On Tibet Border

Unusual Demand Due to Retinue of 1000 Men of Late Panchen Lama

Tachienlu, Sinkiang, June 1 (AP) —This speck on the Tibetan border is concerned with a vital shortage of yak butter.

In Tibet itself there is no shortage, but every man along the 1,700-mile border between Tibet and China, and especially in Sinkiang, feels the pinch in the scarcity of the frontier's staff of life.

Inhabitants can get along nicely on three mainstays, dzamba (ground barley), Chinese tea and yak butter. Dzamba is plentiful, Chinese tea is arriving by caravans of 1,000 packcoolies daily, but the unusual demand for yak butter by the retinue of the dead Panchen Lama has caused the worst shortage in many years.

The Panchen's retinue of more than 1,000 eat large quantities of yak butter and in addition keep 1,000 butter lamps burning in front of the Panchen's coffin.

At present, all signs point to a continued shortage in the butter until the body of the Panchen Lama—who was Tibet's spiritual ruler, is safely placed in its sacred home in Drashe Lhumbo. The Panchen died in 1937 and negotiations on its eventual disposal are being carried on.

For nine months, foraging parties from the Panchen's camp at Kanze have scoured the Sinkiang countryside, buying up all yak butter. The supply dwindled and the price soared. These foraging parties were kept out of Tibet itself by partisans of the dead Dalai Lama, who was Tibet's temporal ruler.

Yak butter is the major and necessary item in the nomad's menu. He eats it, drinks it, rubs it on his body, burns it in his temple, and offers it as a sacrifice to his gods.

Butler, K.C., in today's Police Court held at the Court House Building. It being Thomas' first offence and as restitution had been made His Worship gave the youth a six months' suspended sentence, upon the payment of the costs of the proceedings.

Norman Yull, Belleville, was given a four months' suspended sentence after being convicted of the theft of timber stakes, the property of the Canadian National Railways.

A charge of purchasing furs without a Government licence, preferred against Harry Yanover of this city, by Inspector Herb McCabe of the Game and Fisheries Department, was dismissed without costs.

Sheldon Williams, Prince Edward County fisherman and trapper, stated he had sold muskrat skins and pelts to Mr. Yanover and his son Louis. Inspector McCabe stated Harry Yanover did not have a licence to purchase for pelts.

"We admit Mr. Yanover did not have a licence, but his two sons, Louis and Ben, had Government licences to purchase fur pelts anywhere in Ontario and each time pelts were purchased in the presence of the accused either one of the sons were present," pointed out Charles A. Payne, K.C., counsel for the defendant. Later Mr. Williams admitted under cross-examination that he, Inspector McCabe and a man named McDonald were in partnership trapping muskrats in Thurlow last Spring. They sold about 170 skins to the Yanovers, Williams stated as he admitted to Mr. Payne, that each time business was transacted with Mr. Yanover Sr., one of his sons, who possessed a licence, was present.

Louis and Ben Yanover, sons of the accused, produced their licences in court. "I see no liability on the part of the accused man here and dismiss the charge", His Worship stated directing his findings towards Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., who in turn nodded his head in consent.

A juvenile Indian lad from the Tyendinaga Reserve, pleaded guilty to the theft of $37.00 and was given a six months' suspended sentence, after restitution had been made. "The lad found the money in a wallet, which had fallen out of a man's pocket", reported Provincial Constable W. E. Smith, who investigated the case in the first instance.

NO CRIMINAL CASES FOR COUNTY COURT

No criminal cases being listed for trial at the forthcoming session of the Judge's County Criminal Court, to open before His Honor Judge McLean in Belleville next Tuesday, it was found that it was not necessary to impanel a jury for this court session. Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn announced this afternoon, when he learned from the office of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., that no criminal cases were listed for trial during the current June session.

One non-jury case, Spry vs. Spry and Allen is listed for trial and will be presented as the only case before Judge McLean next Tuesday afternoon. The action is for the return of a quantity of timber or the payment of $700.00, said to be the value of the timber. D. F. Miller, Havelock barrister, appears for the plaintiff, while the firm of Collins and Cushing, Belleville, will represent the defendants.

DUKE OF KENT ON STATE VISIT

Flies from Hendon to Visit County, Whose Name He Bears

London, June 1 (CP Cable)—The Duke of Kent today began a tour of the county whose name he bears, flying from Hendon to Lympne in a near gale which delayed his arrival 35 minutes.

The King's youngest brother went to the picturesque village of Lyminge, near Folkestone, where he watched children's folk dancing and presented trophies to Navy League Sea Cadets.

The tour was arranged by the Kent (County) Council of Social Services.

Later, when the Duke was entering his car on leaving Aylesham School, he handed a red carnation he was wearing in his lapel to Mrs. Mary Burrows, a miner's wife, who was in the crowd.

Mrs. Burrows triumphantly held the flower aloft, then kissed it. She told newspapermen she intended to place it in a glass case and hand it on to her children.

The Duke later went to Ramsgate and opened the first section of the town's three-mile air raid precautions tunnel, which is designed to protect the entire population in the event of war.

Put Bells on Cats To Warn Small Animals and Birds

A bell-the-cat suggestion to residents who contemplate taking pet house cats to summer camps this year has been offered by a member of the Belleville and District Humane Society as one means of protecting small game around the camp.

In past years the toll of friendly chipmunks, baby woodchucks, squirrels, and other smaller animals by cats has been a heavy one, it is pointed out. This year, in order to set the example, the local Humane member has decided to equip the house cats with small, feltlined collars, from which will dangle miniature bells to warn the wild life.

Royal Visit Helps To Boost Business

With Hitler and war scares off the front pages of the newspapers business of the city is rapidly returning to normal, and local storekeepers report the first revival of heavier shopping, a report which is corroborated by officials of the local Port of Customs who declare a noticeable increase in sales tax collections recently.

"People who have been afraid recently to buy anything, or to spend their money on anything have forgotten their inhibitions since Hitler has been missing from the headlines, and business lately has been exceedingly good," stated one storekeeper this morning. "The visit of the King and Queen to Canada has also resulted in a tremendous revival of trade lately."

PAINTING OF PARKING LINES TO START SOON

First traffic and parking line painting is expected to be commenced by the city department of public works next week, it was reported at city hall this morning. The work will be carried on during the slacker traffic hours of early morning and will occupy some two weeks' time.

WHERE BLAST RIPPED GRADE SCHOOL, INJURING MANY

Firemen search the ruins of a two storey frame school building at Barberton, O., ripped apart by an explosion while between 80 and 100 children between the ages of six and eleven were at their desks. More than 30 children were injured, several seriously. The building was being used temporarily by the Akron suburb or "overflow" pupils. —Central Press

Trades Made in Off-Season Not of Much Benefit to Teams According To The Standings

Al Todd, Who Went from Pittsburg to Brooklyn, is an Exception

ONE GAME PLAYED

Cubs, in Effort to Bolster Team, Secure Claude Passeau from Phillies

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Without much of the usual fanfare, there has been considerable trading before and during the present Major League Baseball season and most of it must taste pretty sour about now to the clubs concerned.

There are some exceptions. Brooklyn Dodgers took a lot of chiding about their castoffs, but they're in fifth place in the National League today—a notch above New York Giants—and that is what counts in Flatbush.

The Dodgers rebuffed their especial enemies 7-4 in yesterday's only big league game to protect this advantage and one of the heroes was Al Todd, the catcher Pittsburgh couldn't use. He delivered a pinch double in the midst of a three-run uprising that decided the game in the eighth inning.

Todd's travels furnish a good example of the failure of most of this season's shuffling. Pittsburg Pirates blamed him to a considerable extent for their collapse in last year's pennant race and sent him to Boston Bees in a straight player deal for Ray Mueller. But after the first few games of the season Manager Pie Trayner gave upon Mueller and turned to Ray Berres, his No. 2 backstop all last season. This would seem to indicate he gained nothing in the exchange.

Replacement is Worse

Clark Griffith, whose David Harum tactics with Washington Senators gained him the nickname of the "Old Fox," likewise didn't like Zeke Bonura at first base so he waived him out of the American League and into the camp of the Giants. But yesterday the Senators finally decided that Jim Wasdell was even worse and released him to Minneapolis in the American Association. Now they hope to get along with outfielder Sammy West at first base.

Recently St. Louis Browns sent Buck Newsom and three other players to Detroit Tigers for Vernon Kennedy and five others. The Browns were getting hitting and needed pitching. They still need pitching—and have lost 15 of the 17 games they have played since the deal went through.

Lieber Not Clicking

Biggest previous transaction was the off-season swap of Chicago Cubs and the Giants which each club gave three players. Billy Jurges and Joe Demaree have been working regularly and fruitfully in the New York vineyard, and Gus Mancuso has caught his full share of games for the Bruins. But the troubles of shortstop Dick Bartell are well known and Hank Lieber hasn't been any O'Leary's cow in setting Chicago afire.

In fact the Cubs' doldrums caused Manager Gabby Hartnett and his front office thinkers to send two pitchers and outfielder Joe Marty, their world series sparkplug, to the Phillies this week in return for Claude Passeau.

SOUTH HASTINGS BASEBALL LOOP TO HOLD MEETING

Four Clubs Have Signified Intention to Operate This Season

MEET FRIDAY

Cannifton and Foxboro Hardest Hit by Loss of Players

Foxboro, June 1 (Special)—Rural baseball lovers in the southern part of the county will be pleased to learn that the persistent rumours floating around all spring to the effect that the South Hastings Baseball League would not be operating this year were after all, unfounded. The very latest in the way of information, (and it appears to be authentic) is that not only will the league be operating, but also, that the same four clubs which fought it out last year will again be in there fighting it out for the silverware.

All through the early part of the season, however, and even up until early this week, the prospects of the S. H. League operating this year were indeed gloomy to say the least. The old initiative that started things off and kept them rolling in other years seemed to be entirely lacking this season. With many of the older players either quitting the game for good or their occupations taking them to green fields far away, one or two of the clubs were doubtful of their ability to field a team, and apparently the league officials took this as an indication of waning interest and consequently took no steps to get the league going. Cannifton and Foxboro seemed to be the hardest hit in this respect with old Dame Rumour having it that there would be no team representing the former village in the league this year. As is usually the case, however, when the older ones drop out there is always younger ones to fill their places and such was found to be the case in the S. H. League.

Accordingly, with the prospects of a summer devoid of any sporting activities staring them in the face, all of last year's entrants in the South Hastings League have now signified their intentions of playing ball and with a little pressure being brought to bear on the league officials the president has announced that the annual pre-season conclave will take place in Cannifton on Friday evening of this week. Ordinarily, the conventional opening date of the league is the twenty-fourth of May, but last year the league did not open until the early part of June and it is thought if no delay is made in drawing up the schedule there will still be ample time to run the games off before the long evenings are passed.

Ottawa Pitcher Twirls His Second No-Hitter

Ottawa, June 1—(CP)—Carl Allen, 19-year-old pitcher of St. Patrick's College Junior City League baseball team, twirled the second no-hit-no-run game of his career last night in a regular league game with Braves to give St. Pat's a 1-0 victory in the seven-inning fixture.

The young right-hander faced 25 men, walking four, and struck out seven. Johnny Quilty of St. Pat's doubled in the first inning, and scored on Hughie McGovern's single for the only run of the game. Allen's other perfect game was pitched in 1936 in a juvenile league nine-inning match.

For many years we have [illegible] the cry in Belleville "why don't our own Belleville boys get a chance to play baseball, hockey, etc.? We'll support our own talent."

We'll see how sincere the Belleville sporting clientele actually is this evening when Napanee pries off the Bay of Quinte baseball lid versus the Belleville nine at the Fair Grounds. Faced with the problem of rebuilding their team from the ground up the players have practised religiously and without interruption for the past month but will be playing their first game tonight as a unit. The result will be interesting to watch. Bill Switzer will doubtless get the starting assignment for Walt Gerow's charges while Sammy Ellis or Joe Kelleher seem to be the logical starting choices from Bud Wilkins' camp. The umps. will call "play ball" at 6.30 p.m. precisely.

According to Northern Ontario sport pages, Ralph "Highpockets" McCabe is to be a fixture with the Copper Cliff seniors of the Nickel Belt League, who started his baseball career as a junior in Belleville, migrated to Oshawa where he rose to pitching heights and now has been signed by the Copper Cliff "Miners" of the Nickel Belt League. McCabe hurled a portion of an exhibition game recently and met with splendid success, as he blanked his opponents while laboring on the hilltop. Other Belleville ballsters to make good in Northern Ontario are "Sexy" Gray, "Nugget" Bennett, Harry Margan while Frank Farrare and Gerald Ethier made the softball [illegible] ally Jack Turner, formerly of Oshawa, [illegible] as the ace hurler at Creighton Mines, Marchildon now being with the Toronto Maple Leafs. Apparently the future of youthful baseball players is much more secure in the north than in Old Ontario, insofar as continued employment is concerned.

If Maxie Baer hopes to qualify for another shot at the world's heavyweight boxing crown, he'll have to dispose of Lou Nova in a most impressive manner. Of course the winner of the Nova-Baer bout is being counted on to meet champion Joe Louis in September, but the winner of tonight's go in New York will have to show some real class in order to assure a top-notch bout in the fall. Nova seems quite confident as he is more concerned about some other person getting at Louis before he does, rather than what Baer may do. Nova says Louis is ready for the cleaners and vulnerable for a good left hand and is worrying that Galento may get to the champ. before he (Nova) has the opportunity. However, Baer has other ideas pertaining to who's going to meet Louis in September. Baer has been appearing on the radio quite frequently of late, but between broadcasts seems to have got in some pre-fight training. Also the Livermore heavy says he must win now that there's "three Baer mouths to feed." The betting is about fifty-fifty.

"How are you going to stop Johnnie Bawden and the Shell 'Oilers'?" seems to be the great problem around the local softball circuit, Bawden having pitched three and won three consecutive games in most impressive manners. Dame rumour has it that Skipper Frank Sedore will start Bawden in the Oilers' next two games. "We want to win the first five games we play; after that it does not matter too much as we'll be assured of a play-off berth," Sedore is credited with having stated recently. The Oilers' next tussle is at Point Anne next Monday at which time the residents of Ox Point have a swell assortment of Bronx cheers awaiting Manager Sedore of the Oilers, who deserted the Cementmen's ship to head the new Oilers entry. On Friday the Cementmen meet Corbys here and much depends on the issue regardless as to which side of the fence one dangles his feet.

Do you remember when Columbia University's gift to baseball, 22-year-old Lou Gehrig, strode to the plate 14 years ago today to start an iron-man stunt unequalled in modern sport. From that date to May 2 this year, Lou played 2,130 consecutive games for the New York Yankees. He was benched at his own request during a game with Detroit Tigers last month in the midst of his worst slump.

Tommy Henrich was the only member of the New York Yankees to blast a home run when the McCarthymen beat the Maple Leafs 4-1 in Toronto yesterday. Babe Marchildon, Ontario's pitching gift to the Leafs, started on the mound and did fairly well against the slugging Yanks even if they did score all of their four runs of his delivery. Batting practice pitcher Paul Schrieder hurled for the Yanks while George Selkirk, Canadian-born member of the Yankees, went hitless in three official times at bat. As a matter of fact the Yankees only gathered in eight hits. It was quite a thrill to Marchildon when he struck out Selkirk in the third, and did his team mates ever give "Twinkletoes" the raspberry.

Here and There—For a young fellow who left these shores before he became a school problem, George Selkirk didn't fare too badly yesterday when he was honored by members of the Maple Leaf Hockey Club, the town of Huntsville, where he was born and Others.... If George Richards beats Johnnie Denchuck the Polish lad Friday night at the arena efforts to have Richards meet John Katan in a title bout are in the making, we hear....Baseball is big business in Cincinnati these days, the Reds are 57,000 up on their attendance this year over that of a year ago on respective dates....When McIntyre beat Hollinger 4-2 yesterday three players known here were with the winners Bill Prout, Blue Webber and Jake Quinn, while Reg Dorey was with the losers....All in all we find ball players' names in every Northern Ontario line-up who received their elementary diamond education in these parts.

RED SCUTTON HITS TWO HOME BUT TEAM LOSES

Former Kingston Player at Kirkland Lake is Making Good on Diamond

McINTYRES WIN

St. Catharines Transports at Top of Loop Without Playing Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Senior baseball opened on northern fronts yesterday with Northern Baseball Association games in Kirkland Lake and Timmins.

Lake Shore Athletic Association, gold belt champions, were halted by Toburn Mines 10-9 at Kirkland when the tying run was on third in the ninth inning. Red Scrutton, former Kingston player, drove in two runs with a triple but he was left on base.

In Timmins, the renovated McIntyre team opened the season by defeating Hollinger 4-2. Among the newcomers to the Macs is Lefty McNeill, Loyola College, California, football player, who plans to line up with Ottawa Rough Riders this fall.

McNeill drove in one run and had a perfect day at first base in his debut. George McShane gave the Hollinger crew only four hits but four errors allowed the two runs scored.

In more southern climes Johnny Moyer turned in a four-hit effort in Guelph as Waterloo Tigers trimmed Guelph Leafs 4-1 in an intercounty game. Ralph Hammond, Leafs' ace southpaw, had to accept defeat when his team's sloppy fielding gave Tigers their runs.

Transports on Top

St. Catharines Transports, although idle, took over leadership in the Niagara District League when Merritton Alliance toppled Niagara Falls Brights 4-2 at Merritton. Home run honors for the game were even when Leeson, Alliance catcher, knocked a four-bagger in the last of the seventh with one on to match that scored in the first half by Lister, who holds the same position for Brights.

Bright's inter-city rivals, the Brocks, moved behind them in the League standing by capitalizing on Welland's errors to defeat the Aces 11-4. Dave Catherwood steadied after a bad second inning to limit Welland to one run in the last seven. Freddy Biggs rallied to Catherwood's cause with four hits in five times up. Stirling also assisted with a homer.

Two double plays robbed Thorold of chances to score in the first and fourth frames as the Mounties lost 4-2 to Fort Erie on their home grounds. Near held Thorold to five hits while Fort Erie touched Armstrong for 11.

Glen Ross Scores First Win of Season

Stirling, June 1 (Special)—Glen Ross 1938 champions of the Rawdown softball league hit their stride for the first time of the current season when before a good crowd of enthusiastic spectators they downed the hustling Springbrook squad 9-6 for their first win of the season. The league looks to be well balanced for this year and some real smart ball should feature the games as the teams get further into the schedule. "Gerry" Broadworth and "Russ" Pyear opposed each other in mound duty with the latter being replaced by Smith in the last inning. Springbrook never scored a run until the fourth in which they clicked for three, and the rally continued to bring them within shooting distance as they scored three in the last. Glen Ross scored four in the first, one in the second, two in the third and two in the last. "Friday" Fraser and D. Broadworth each batted out a homer.

Some of the players and many of the spectators would appreciate "Daylight Saving", so that a full game could be played as it is all games are called after not more than five innings because of darkness. Other centres have taken advantage of the break for the working guy who has to dash out and get his recreation after working all day and they give him an extra hour of daylight to get it in, but the idea doesn't appeal in the northern "hamlets."

The teams:

Glen Ross: Art McDonnell, R. Pyear, H. Brown, B. Hagerman, A. Fraser, J. Brown, A. Grills, T. Clarkson, R. Conniey, Smith.

Springbrook: Bailey, C. Thompson, Broadworth, D. Broadworth, B. Robinson, A. Holland, C. Reid, D. McKeown, R. Wellman.

TWO MAIN BOUTS TO BE FEATURED

Richards and Denchunk Will Provide Customers With Many Thrills

Featuring two main bouts, professional wrestling returns to the Hume arena with three sterling bouts of strength, speed, stamina and science on Friday evening topped with the return of George Richards, the Jewish champion who defeated Al Dunlop here recently, and who meets Johnnie Denchuck, the Polish-born grappler from New York City. Richards a native of Toronto, more recently returned from a successful winter of wrestling in the United States, where he wrestled under the name of Benny Stein.

As an added attraction a second main bout was arranged by Manager Norm Barriage of the Hume arena, when it was learned that Johnny Gyroffy, the lithe Hungarian grappler from Winnipeg, had returned to the east after two years wrestling along the Pacific coast. Gyroffy, who stands six foot three inches tall and weighs 230 pounds, meets Al (Bunny) Dunlop in the second feature bout.

For thrills and excitement, however, the opening preliminary bout between Frank Slavick, the agile Polish boy, and Joe Conkle, formerly the Red Devil, is an assured sure-fire crowd-pleaser. Both Conkle and Slavick are lightweights, but have a world of wrestling experience behind them, both having wrestled in Europe as well as America.

CITY BARBERS TRIM BUTCHERS

'Lather Slappers' Pile Up Big Lead in Early Innings

The city Barbers gave the Luckin butchers a "close shave and trim" in their first meeting in the "No Kick" softball league at the Collegiate campus, the "lather-slappers" winning by a 22 to 17 score. With 'Ferdinand the Bull' as their mascot the "meatmen" were rapidly gaining on the Barbers when rain halted hostilities in the seventh and following the use of an adding machine the final result was announced, although "Yoke" Cook's meat-cleavers claimed they had been "given the business" when the whisker-trimmers used Bariage on the mound.

Bruce Root, the Barber's lead-off man, proved to be a more ferocious bat-wielder than Ferdinand's charges. Root scoring five runs. The Barbers met the butchers' hurling slants from Barriage with a vengeance, scoring five runs in the first, third and fourth, but the absence of Larmer Bennett and Stan Lapalm was keenly felt by the winners as the Luckin meat-cleavers finished strongly. The butchers meet the Kiwanis nine in another league thriller tonight. Browning and Barriage, the respective hurlers were hit hard and often

Fringes of Gold

By EDNA WALTERS

Joan revelled in the scented warmth of the great hall as she stood waiting. It must be very pleasent to live in a home like that. And, when she followed the maid's black silk frock into the gold-and-white elevator, her sense of luxurious well-being increased. No one would guess that the outside world was wrapped in snow and that the bitterness of the cold wind cut harshly.

"You may go, Minette," directed the blue-eyed mistress of the rose suite. When her maid had gone Alice Grant regarded the waiting Joan with a grave intentness. "I had a reason for telling Madam Jerrold to send you with my gown. Do you like to go to the theatre?"

"Yes, I go, sometimes," she replied.

"I have a ticket for 'Fringes of Gold' for tonight. I expected to go with a girl chum who has disappointed me. I'll give it to you on a condition."

"Yes?" murmured Joan.

"That you pretend you are me. You resemble me in your general appearance, blue eyes, dark hair and slimness. I want my evening to myself and I'm announcing to the household that I'll be at the Bijou theatre. You needn't mind the subterfuge, which harms no one. In fact," the blue eyes grew mysterious, "the gift to me of three hours will bring a great happiness to two people."

Joan pondered. Evidently this pampered girl longed for the freedom the poor enjoyed. The masquerade, as Alice Grant pointed out, a harmless exchange of identities.

Minette smiled demurely as she slipped the gay little gown of sapphire velvet over the marcelled head of the shop-girl. Minette was in the secret and would accompany the pseudo Miss Grant down to her waiting car. As Joan took a last peep at herself, snuggling her chin into the silver fur of her splendid wrap, she fancied she saw a man's face staring at her from the doorway. She wheeled about but the space between the curtains was empty. All the way to the theatre she tried to decide whether the sparkling, skeptical eyes in the white face of a man had been real or just a figment of her excited brain.

She sank into her seat in the seventh row with a subdued gasp of absolute enjoyment.

Someone took the vacant seat at her left but she failed to notice for she was living the role of Dalphne Davis, the star.

Passing up the aisle, her soul still dazzled by enjoyment, a hand dropped upon her shoulder.

"Come to the office," said a harsh voice, one of authority.

Whitening, she obeyed.

"You are not Alice Grant, are you?"

She remained mute.

"Miss Grant has been robbed of pearls. We find you here in her seat, wearing her gown and—" the cold tone hesitated, then a finger touched the string of pearls that Joan had supposed to be imitation, just lent her to enhance the velvet frock, "wearing her pearls. Have you anything to say?"

"Take me to Miss Grant," cried Joan.

"Impossible. If you've anything to say, say it. Otherwise it's jail for you. Where did you get her gown?"

Joan swayed. Then bit her lips and got herself in hand. She'd given her word and she would not break it. She had her night of nights. Dressed for the first time in years as she wished, occupying a good seat at the beautiful theatre, she'd entered fairyland. "I've nothing to say," she said, lifting her head to meet the sparkling skeptical eyes of the man in the mirror.

The little room was empty except for the two of them.

Dick Grant held out his hand. "Come, my sister is out in the car waiting. It was a mean trick, but, Joan Winters, you've given me something I never thought to possess—faith in a woman's word. Alice wants to marry for love and I laughed at her. I told her there was no loyalty in the world. I said if she could prove her stand that I would give my consent."

"Yes," said Joan, flushing beneath the ardor she read in his face. "Then I may go? I'll return her frock tomorrow".

He slipped the fur wrap about her. "No. You are to come home with us tonight and let us make up to you for what we did. And, little Joan", he added, being as they passed out into the snowy night, "you are going to let me prove to you that there is romance left in this drab old world." "Fringes of Gold" had given Joan some happy hours and the romance of the mimic scenes became woven with the real emotions of life for, just three months later, she became Mrs. Richard Grant.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Nora is of this afternoon, Willyum, so that leaves me mistress of the kitchin, and I thought of a pleasant surpise for you.

Good, liver and onions, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum, really I mean really, cant you think of anything except liver and onions when the food question raises its head?

Well yes, but it's a great effort of the will and never quite seems worth the strain somehow, pop said, and ma said, Well let me tell you first and formost, I'm not asking you to go to a resterant.

Then I can tell you 2nd and hinmost, you're relieving me of the necessity of refusing, pop said, and ma said, Well, I'll come to the point, there's a Chinese place downtown where they put up the most marvelous chop sooey for people to take home, all the bridge ladies are just crazy about it and claim their husbands just cant seem to get their fill of it, so I've decided to bring some home with me this afternoon

I'm sorry, I'm boycotting the Chinese, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum, you know very well nobody boycotts the Chinese, it's the Japanese.

That's the point, it's just a little streek of originality in me that insists on expressing itself, pop said. I'd even boycott Chinese liver and birdsnest onions, he said, and ma said, We'll compromise, we'll eat in a resterrant and I'll call up till I find one that has liver and onions on the menu if I have to exhawst the telefone.

It's a deal, pop said.

Proving you can fix anything by arbitration if nobody keeps on insisting.

Picton

Picton, June 1.—A new industry seems assured for this town. Thomas D. Dumont, who has been with a textile manufacturing plant at St. Catharines for some years, stated yesterday that he had taken an option on three acres of and here and proposed to erect a plant where he would manufacture various kinds of textiles. The firm would be known as the Dumo Textile Co.

It is possible that the plant may operate in a few months' time, and there would be thirty-five hands required at the opening with others added later. Mr. Dumont is taking up permanent residence in Picton this week-end.

This is apple blossom time in Prince Edward County and a drive through the apple orchard districts is well worth while. It is a very lovely sight to see the trees in bloom, and there is every evidence of a bumper crop this year. Districts where trees are most abundant include Rednersville, Carryng Place and Waupoos. There are also several large orchards on the Picton-Belleville highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cole of Picton this week celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. This occasion was marked by a family gathering when a dinner was served. There were present on this occasion four generations, Mr. and Mrs. Cole, their only daughter, Mrs. H. V. Clarke of Greenbush, their granddaughter, Mrs. Cecil Thompson of Cherry Valley and their great-granddaughter, Betty Louise Thompson.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cole are enjoying good health. They recently spent a few days visiting relatives at Campbellford and Mr. Cole, who is 82, drove his car. Mrs. Cole is two years his junior and continues to live an active life.

Interest in outboard motor boats grows yearly in Picton, and many new craft are being tried out this year. The new sailing yacht built to order for George Publow is attracting much attention in the harbor, equipped with a cabin. The cost is said to have been in the neighborhood of $5,000. Mr. Publow and Herbert Daubney went to Kingston on Monday and took delivery of the boat which is one of the finest sailing boats ever seen in these waters.

Mrs. Albert Mohhis and daughter Helen are expected soon from their home in Saskatchewan to spend the summer with Mr. and Mrs. James Bond and family.

Mrs. Hanson Huff underwent an operation for appendicitis in P. E. County Hospital on Sunday and is progressing favorably.

Mrs. Rose Brooks and daughters Doris, Delaphine and Beverley of Chicago, arrived on Monday to spend the summer months with Mr. and Mrs. N. Katz.

Birth—In Prince Edward County Hospital on Sunday, May 28, to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Warren, a son.

A visit to the New York World's Fair has been chosen as a honeymoon by Mr. Dayton Wark and Miss Gena Pearsall whose marriage takes place on Sunday.

Apparently hobbies which are so popular nowadays, are even encouraged in Picton gaol. One youthful offender left a colony of bees when he was incarcerated. His family did not understand their care, and the young prisoner worried. Finally the authorities allowed him to transfer his bees to the gaol premises where he may care for them while he is confined.

BRITAIN SETS UP TWO ARMY POSTS

London, May 31 —(CP)— The War Office today announced re-establishment of two army posts in an effort to bring the military organization to a high point of preparedness while invitations went out to chiefs of Allied army staffs to watch Britain's autumn military manoeuvres.

The revised army posts—Inspector General of the Overseas Forces and Inspector General of the Home Forces—will be filled respectively by General Sir Edmund Ironside, now Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, and General Sir Walter Kirke, Director-General of the Territorial Army. The posts formerly existed before the Great War.

Sir Edmund, considered one of Britain's greatest soldiers, will conduct relations with foreign staffs which have now assumed great importance, and will organise all training preparations under the Imperial General Staff for the sending of an expeditionary force in the event of war.

Sir Edmund was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar March 31, 1938, in recognition of a distinguished career on three continents. Before that he was Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern Command. He joined the army at 19 and saw service in Africa, Asia and Europe. Now 58, he knows 15 languages.

JUST A BIG, PLAYFUL BOY

Premier Benito Mussolini doesn't ordinarily play with dolls, but on this occasion Il Duce felt in an expansive mood while inspecting a parade of mothers and children, so he toyed with the doll just to prove that he's just a big boy at heart and no bogeyman.

WAR PREPARATIONS STILL GOING ON

It is now generally recognized that in the next war, if any, there will be no non-combatants and that the rule of "women and children first" will apply when bombing planes begin to unload their cargoes of death and terror. So science is striving to find a way to protect women and babies. Here is one of the devices recently tried out in Paris. The baby is in a gas-tight bag into which the mother draws air for herself and the little one. Independent chambers of this type for baby alone failed to work because the baby could not breathe strongly enough to suck clean air through the valve.

VANCOUVER WELCOMES KING AND QUEEN

Mayor J. Lyle Telford, of Vancouver, was the only Canadian mayor to greet Their Majesties in ceremonial robes reminiscent of a British chief magistrate. Mayor Telford is pictured RIGHT, garbed in a long black gown and wearing his chain of office as he greeted the King and Queen.

SOUP'S ON

Well, not exactly, but these three husky robin youngsters have sighted a mess of food comin' up, with ma robin acting as the delivery agent. The robin family built a nest on the top of a mop which Mrs. W. C. Hitchens, of McKeysport, Pa., happened to lean against the wall of the back porch. When the mop became a bird hotel, Mrs. Hitchens bought another one, and found herself amply repaid for it, in watching the antics of the feathered "squatters."

MALAY PRINCE TO WED ENGLISH CHIROPODIST

Prince Mahmud, of the Malay State of Trengganu, whose romance with Miss Joyce Blencowe, 25-year-old Oxford (England) chiropodist was blighted by his family's disapproval, has now reached his majority and intends to marry the comely English girl without delay. Last August the Prince announced his impending marriage, but his brother, the Sultan of Trengganu, ordered him to return home unmarried. Since then an understanding has been reached and it is understood that the ast-west romance will no longer be faced with royal frowns. The Prince and Miss Blencowe are pictured here.

A scene from "Arizona Legion" which features George O'Brien and is now playing on the same program with Sally Ellers in "Tarnished Angel" at the McCarthy Theatre.

Military honors were paid the Maharajah of Kapurthala when he visited the Golden Gate Exposition at San Francisco. He is shown here reviewing the guard of honor drawn up in his honor. The Maharajah is at present on a world cruise.

THE QUEEN WATCHES THE TROOPING OF THE COLOR

VANC OUVER'S HIGHLANDERS WELCOME THE KING AND QUEEN

AT THE McCARTHY

"Arizona Legion"

Frequently seen in the role of a sheriff or other law-enforcement officer, George O'Brien plays a new kind of role in his latest action-packed outdoor drama, "Arizona Legion", which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The story goes back to early Arizona histoy for its basic idea, bringing to light forgotten historical events of the West that was.

O'Brien is cast as a patriotic young Arizonian who organizes a secret group of rangers under equally secret state authority to combat a rising tide of banditry. When he allies himself with the outlaw group in an effort to learn the identity of their chief, his sweetheart, played by Laraine Johnson, and other members of the community, believe he is actually one of the gang and ostracise him from their society.

The exciting story traces O'Brien's adventures in obtaining evidence against the bandits by participating n several daring hold-ups, during all of which he still cannot learn the name of the chief.

Sworn to secrecy, along with fourteen other men, O'Brien is unable to defend himself against the insinuations of Miss Johnson and of a lieutenant in the U.S. Cavalry. However, when he leads the bandit group into an ambush and they are all captured by the lieutenant and his soldiers, O'Brien reveals his real identity. He is not believed. O'Bien is sent to jail, while Tom Chatterton, a U.S. Commissioner, is appointed to investigate O'Brien's story.

Knowing that Chatterton himself is the bandit chief, O'Brien makes a daring jail break and overtakes him just as he is making his getaway aboard a stage coach with a large sum of money. An exciting hand-to-hand battle atop the swaying stage coach takes place to bring to a climax one of the most thrilling of all O'Brien Westerns.

"Tarnished Angel"

The second feature which is also now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, "Tarnished Angel", presents a stirring dramatic novelty in screen entertainment — one in which the heroine wages a titanic struggle between her bad and her better selves. Renowned for her emotional portrayals, Sally Eilers, star of the production, finds regeneration at the end of her conflict. This conflict occurs in a spectacular and unique atmosphere, that of a campaign of religious fakery in which faith healing is done, not only on a money-making basis, but with the startling aid of sham cripples who walk at the command of the healer at a price. In a stunning climax remorse seizes the heroine, for an ending in which she wins forgiveness and turns to her true love in the person of Lee Bowman, the engaging young leading man whose recent pictures have made him a big screen asset. Ann Miller, clever singer, dancer and actress, Alma Kruger, Jack Arnold and Cecil Kellaway, complete the featured support in a picture that lacks nothing in supreme entertainment, or screen enjoyment. A clever all technicolor Walt Disney cartoon entitled "Donald's Ostrich" and another episode of "Flying G-Men" completes the above excellent program offering.

AT THE BELLE

"Pygmalion"

"Pygmalion", film adaptation of Bernard Shaw's famous rib-tickling stage farce, which returns to the Belle screen by popular demand and is now playing with Leslie Howard starred in the role of the phonetics professor who on a bet transforms a London guttersnipe into a duchess with hilarious consequences both for himself and the girl.

Howard comes to his new role fresh from his successful work in "Stand-In" and "It's Love I'm After." The part of the Cockney flower-seller who is made into a lady almost against her will is played by Wendy Hiller who became an overnight sensation as the result of her performance on the London stage in 'Love on the Dole.' "Pygmalion" introduces her to American audiences for the first time.

The picture is unique in respect to being the production which persuaded Bernard Shaw to change his mind regarding the filmization of his stage plays, for four years ago the celebrated playwright vowed he would never again part with the screen rights of any of his dramas.

The man who persuaded Shaw to relent in his attitude against film versions of his plays after Hollywood had long given up trying, is Gabriel Pascal, producer of "Pygmalion." The direction was in the hands of Anthony Asquith and Leslie Howard, who in this production made in England, combined his acting talents with that of the direction. Featured in prominent supporting roles are Wilfrid Lawson who scored in the Broadway hit, "Libel", and Marie Lohr, one of London's best-known character actresses.

The story of "Pygmalion" revolves about Professor Henry Higgins, world-famous expert on phonetics, who is convinced that his method of teaching can turn the most ill-bred, untutored person into a suave sophisticate, and gets an opportunity to prove his point when a Cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle, asks him to accept her as a pupil in elocution and deportment. He does so on condition that she obey his orders implicitly and ultimately passes her off as a duchess at an ambassadorial reception. In the interim, however, Eliza falls in love with her professor, bringing about unexpected and hilarious complications.

"All right, children, one more question and the geography lesson is finished. Who can tell me from where, and to where, does the Lincoln Highway go? Well, well, that's fine, you children have studied. Now tomorrow I want you all to study the road map of the next eight counties and memorize all detours.

"Now we'll go on with the arithmetic assignment. Edgar, I'm going to give you the hard one. What is the bill of three adults and two children in two rooms for one night, all of them eat dinner, and only the two children get up and eat breakfast the next morning? Be careful of that one; it's catchy —remember, the garage is free. Robert, you may give your solution of the five and one-half gallons of gas at 21 cents, two quarts heavy oil, one puncture repair, and a new spark plug.

"Very well, you children are doing exceptionally well, and I'm proud to——

"Edward Jones! Young man, are you whispering again? You'll have to stay after school and write 'Rooms for Tourists' 250 times before leaving the building!"—Montreal Star.

His Holiness Has Hopes That Way of Peace Will be Found to Safeguard Liberty and Honor of Nations

Vatican City, June 2 (AP)—Pope Pius told his Cardinals today he had received "assurances of goodwill and of the resolve to maintain peace" from Europe's principal statesmen as a result of his recent overtures through Papal Nuncios.

The Pope said he also had "other information" which had given "greater hope that the considerations of noble humanity, the consciousness of inevitable responsibility before God and before history and the right judgment of the true interests of their people would have strength and weight to induce the governments, in their efforts to reach a stable peace which would safeguard the liberty and the honor of nations, to think and to act in a manner calculated to reduce and conquer all obstacles to understanding."

Earthbeams! These are not mentioned much in a popular way principally because they can ot be seen as are the sunbeams. But the earthbeams do exist, and consist of the solar energy which the earth absorbs and then reradiates. Earthbeams do not have the power of penetration that the sunbeams have as the air absorbs about four-fifths of the earth radiations. The earth radiates most effectively when there is a cloudless sky, dry air, no wind, and the heat conductivity of the ground is low. The appearance of dew is an indication that conditions were favorable for the passage of earthbeams and that rapid cooling resulted.

Queen is Thrilled By Life in Log Cabin In Natural Park

By A. E. FULFORD

Jasper Park Lodge, Alta., June 2 (CP) — King George and Queen Elizabeth bade farewell today to a cosy cabin home of logs and to the western mountains.

Freed for a day from the press of formal functions, from the loyal din of cheering crowds, their Majesties yesterday explored the beauties of Jasper National Park. After daylight hours of sight-seeing and an evening of quiet relaxation they were ready today for the trip to Edmonton and a new start on the Royal program.

Living In Log Cabin.

The Queen was thrilled by the novelty of living in a log cabin with her husband and their two servants. She told Robert Sommerville, manager of Jasper Park Lodge, how much she liked living like an ordinary couple in a cabin.

Their Majesties were at home for a day in luxuriously-furnished outlook cabin, integral part of the mountain lodge.

Arriving in Jasper at noon yesterday from the Pacific coast, their Majesties made two afternoon exploration drives, gathered wild flowers, photographed animals of the National Game Sanctuary and even were caught in a brief snowstorm at the edge of a giant glacier.

Last Rest Spell Ends.

The 21-hour stay amid Jasper's rugged beauty before departure for Edmonton at 9.30 a.m. (12.30 p.m. E.D.T.) today was the last long rest spell for their Majesties until arrival at Hyde Park, N.Y., 10 days hence.

Before them lies the Edmonton visit of 6½ hours, starting at 3.30 p.m. today, two hours in Saskatoon tomorrow afternoon and ten minutes at Melville, Sask., at night.

From there the Royal train speeds on across the Prairies, through Winnipeg to Sioux Lookout, Ont., for a brief stop Sunday evening. In the next fewa days they visit Sudbury, Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford, Windsor, Ingersoll and other cities and towns in Ontario.

Annexation of Austria by Germany 'Easy to Swallow but Hard to Digest'

London, Ont., June 2 (CP)—Dr. Richard Maresch, exiled Austrian educationist, speaking before the London Conference of the United Church, told delegates that with neither money nor natural resources, "Germany is economically ruined".

Making his first appearance on a public platform since coming to Canada, Dr. Maresch last night said that in annexing Austria, Chancellor Hitler "found something easy to swallow but hard to digest".

"A mulish resistance is going on all the time and some observers feel that assimilation is not only far from being realized, but that Hitler will have to withdraw in less than ten years," he said. "The irreconcilable difference between Bavarians and Prussians — a difference now grown to outright hatred—will never be outgrown.

Music and Art Vanish.

"All the glorious culture," the music and are of Vienna, all that has vanished since the anschluss," he continued. "The world-famed Vienna philharmonic, was now a "miserable thing" with its 50 per cent Jewish personnel dismissed and exiled. Actors and artists had all been replaced with Germans and only Nazi films could be shown in cinemas.

Dr. Maresch said war was "far from inevitable". The "Blitzerkreig" or lightning-war, by which Germany would strike at England and France, was just a story continually fed to German people to keep them hoping for a tomorrow that will never come. The country lacked resources to fall back on.

"Still Hitler was underestimated once and the world can not afford to make that mistake again," he said. "Should England ever lose—and God forbid that she will—then the ocean would be no security for Canada. So, please be careful."

A FINAL EFFORT TO BRING SOVIET INTO PEACE BLOC

British Government May Drop All References to League of Nations from Plan

NO SPECIFIC PLEDGES

Britain Will Also Refuse to Extend Pact to Cover the Far East

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 2—(CP Cable)—In a final effort to bring Russia into the European peace bloc, the British Government may drop all references to the League of Nations from its plan of a mutual defence pact linking Great Britain, France and Russia, it was reported in diplomatic circles today.

While making a concession to Russian demands on this point, Britain probably will stand firm on the determination not to give specific pledges of military aid to the three Balkan countries—Finland, Estonia and Latvia— which Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff demanded in his speech to the Supreme Soviet Wednesday.

Britain also will refuse to extend the pact to cover the far east, should the Soviet make that demand.

Not Escape Clause

The British formula which Molotoff criticized as "inadequate' contained a reference to the League of Nations and this aroused suspicions in the Kremlin. Britain and France agreed the pact should be linked with the principle of the League covenant but not to its machinery for dealing with aggressors.

McGeer States British Army Using Old Type Enfield Rifle

Lt.-Col. Drew in Reply Says McGeer's Information is Wrong

Ottawa, June 2—(CP)—No new model Lee Enfield rifle has been manufactured since the Great War and the British Army is still equipped with the standard Lee Enfield used in the war, G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) said in the Commons Public Accounts Committee yesterday.

He was examining Lt. Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, who told the committee Tuesday, the Canadian Militia carried rifles that were obsolete and had not a single modern rifle.

Mr. McGeer said the British Army was entirely armed with war-time rifles. "Have you any suggestions to make to that?"

"I suggest your information is wrong," Col. Drew said. "There is a new Lee Enfield rifle now being

END OF SESSION SEEN SATURDAY BY THE MEMBERS

Whirlwind Cleanup of Estimates Sets Stage for Closing

HASTE PROTESTED

Ottawa, June 2— (CP)— The House of Commons is racing down the stretch today apparently determined to get it over with tomorrow—provided no one throws a wrench into the machinery.

On paper chances look bright. Sole business before the House today is the report of the Banking and Commerce Committee on the Mortgage Discount Bank Bill, involving a series of proposed amendments. On the horizon is only the Senate's disposal of the Salt Fish Board Bill, undergoing substantial change there.

Routine third reading of the general Supply Bill was first thing on the program today, after a whirlwind cleanup of estimates totalling $98,000,000 yesterday. That cleanup of estimates was not only so rapid that John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) repeatedly complained he "could not turn the pages that fast," but it left the House with nothing to do last night. Members not attending the Public Accounts Committee had a welcome night off after three weeks of sittings from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

MORTGAGE BANK BILL TO BENEFIT

Will Effect Thousands of Mortgages on Canadian Farms and Homes

Ottawa, June 2 (CP)—The Central Mortgage Bank Bill, in committee of the whole stage in the Commons today after being amended by the Banking and Commerce Committee, will affect thousands of mortgages on Canadian farms and non-farm homes held by loan, trust and insurance companies eligible for membership in the Central Mortgage Bank that would be created.

Mortgages held by individuals or by companies ineligible for membership in the Mortgage Bank, such as land companies and railway companies, will not be affected by the legislation except insofar as it has the effect anticipated by Finance Minister Dunning of driving down mortgage interest rates generally.

The bill provides for the writing down, where necessary, of affected mortgages to 80 per cent of the approved appraised value of the property. The term of the revised Farm Mortgages will be 20 years from date of revision and interest will be at five per cent a year.

On mortgages on non-farm homes, the revised contracts will be at 5½ per cent interest, but the present term of the mortgage may or may not be extended.

Interest more than two years in arrears will be wiped out as far as the mortgage is concerned. Interest two years or less in arrears will be incorporated into the principal, which even with interest arrears included must not exceed 80 per cent of the appraisal.

CUT THROUGH HULL

This Would Allow Attachment of Air Line to Reventilate Atmosphere — Powerful Winches Being Used

By Guy Rhoades

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Great Ormes Head, Wales, June 2—(CP Cable) — Anxiety mounted late today for 90 men trapped since 1.40 p.m. (8.40 a.m. E.D.T.) yesterday in the submarine Thetis as the hours ticked by and only four reached the surface with the Davis 'lung' a modified diving suit invented by Sir Robert Davis, British engineer.

The vessel is lying 16 miles off this holiday resort. She is at an angle of about 45 degrees with her nose on the bottom and about 18 feet of her stern rising above the waves.

Race Against Time

Rescuers raced against time in an effort to raise the hull or cut through it to release the men before the air supply inside is exhausted. It is estimated that the existing air supply will last until about 1.40 a.m. tomorrow (8.40 p.m. E.D.T.)

The four men who reached the surface were said to be "all right", and the admiralty stated all those remaining aboard were alive.

Confusion arose during early efforts to establish how many men were in the sunken submarine as the builders were unable to say immediately how many of their men sailed on the acceptance trials, which started yesterday. The original list of 79 aboard has now been raised to 94, including the four who reached the surface.

Loses Too Much Air

Early cessation of escapes with teh Davis apparatus was unexplained, but it is believed those aboard the submarine might have found the ship losing too much air, or taking in too much water as men plunged through the hatch into the sea.

Big salvage vessels with powerful winches were sent to the scene in the hope it might be possible to get lines around the submarine and haul her to the surface.

In the event that this proves impossible, it is believed it would be necessary to cut through the hull at least enough to allow attachment of an air line to reventilate the atmosphere within.

The receding tide exposed more of the stern this afternoon and officials hoped there would be increased opportunity to use acetylene torches effectively.

Robin Builds Nest in Airplane Defying Efforts of Airport Attendants

By GUY RHOADES

London, June 2 (CP)—The dignified London Times was moved to editorial rapture today by the Amersham Robin who built her nest in an airplane and produced six eggs.

The stubborn bird defied airport attendants in the Bucks County town of Amersham who repeatedly demolished the nest. She rebuilt it each time until the attendant gave up and let the robin have her own way.

The fact that Percy Horden, the plane's owner, frequently uses the machine, appears not to disturb the bird. She vacates the nest when the plane takes off but remains on hand to pounce on the eggs as soon as it returns.

Horden believes the flights will not harm the eggs as the robin was clever enough to build the nest right behind the engine which keeps the eggs warm when the machine is in the air.

Said the Times:

"The latest development (in nesting habits) was inevitable. It became so when some ancient Briton in an access of sentiment failed to evict a robin which had nested in his (Arrow) Quiver.

"From that moment (or one most like it), it could have been foreseen that as fast as man invented things, robins would nest in them if it was at all possible."

"The choice of an airplane is even a little tardy. There is, however, nothing old-fashioned about a robin who has made that choice.

"She went about building her nest with pertinacity, ignoring its repeated demolition by people who failed to realize she was interested in publicity first and procreation second."

According to the youth, the father owl visits the birds each night and sits on the top of the house overlooking the pen in which they are kept. The finder intends to liberate the young birds to shift for themselves as soon as he believes they are old enough.

Lilac Foliage Infested With 'Lilac Leaf Miner'

Insect Attacks the Leaves Causing Them to Curl Up and Die

SHOULD BE SPRAYED

The "Lilac Leaf Miner, or leaf roller, as it is more commonly known, a small white grub that has been causing considerable damage to lilac bushes of the city, can be successfully combated if the necessary precautions are taken early enough in the season, according to a communication received by Mr. E. T. Pritchard of this city, from the Dominion Entomological Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

The "miner" is widespread throughout Canada, the communication states. It feeds on the juicy leaves of the bushes causing them to curl up and turn black as the moisture is gradually withdrawn. By August, the entire foliage of the bushes is generally destroyed.

Recommendations in the communication indicate that the leaves of the affected bushes should be picked and burned as soon as the "miner" depredations are noticed. A nicotine sulphate solution, forty per cent strength in the ratio of 1 1-2 tablespoonfuls to one gallon of water is a useful spray, but the first application should be made early in June, and a second application of two tablespoonfuls of nicotine sulphate to one gallon of water, made two weeks later.

Both sides of the foliage should be covered with the spray, the Bureau states.

RAINFALL IN MAY HALF OF LAST YEAR

Despite the fact that May of this year was anything but Springlike, less than fifty percent. rainfall was experienced during that month as compared to May of a year ago, according to statistics released yesterday by the City Filtration plant.

Rainfall for the month just ended was exactly one inch, while that of May, 1938, was 2.42 inches.

Officials of Park Board Warn Against False Cries for Help

Swimmers using the waters of the bay at the end of Victoria Park since the bathing season opened a week or so ago, have received the season's first warning regarding "foolish acts" as described by Parks Board officials, which acts consist of crying for the services of the life guard when not needed.

This week, following the taking over of the duties of lifeguard by Ben. Ritchie, one unidentified youth reportedly swam to deep water, then shouted lustily for help. A man in a row boat near by hauled the swimmer to safety before the lifeguard could swim to the scene, but events afterwards indicated that such a "rescue" was an entirely unnecessary one.

REPAIR CITY CLOCK

In order that custodian Jack Roblin may find his way up the dim stairs after dark a survey is being made this week to determine the possibility of installing electric lights in the clock tower of the city hall. At the present time considerable repairs are being given the clock, and many badly worn pieces are being replaced. A large rack gear, whose teeth had become chipped and worn, has been responsible for the erratic striking of the clock recently.

GEORGE A. WEAVER TO HEAD BOARD

Third Vice - President of Cheese Board Unanimous Choice of Members

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board on Thursday evening, Geo. A. Weaver, R. R. 3, Stirling, third vice-president during 1938 was elected president for the current year.

Originally proposed for the office of president, Herbert Burke, Ivanhoe, first vice-president last year, was forced to refuse the nomination due to illness in the home. William H. Bedell, second vice-president last year, also refused the nomination for the office of president in favor of Mr. Weaver, in spite of the latter's objection to the refusal.

Mr. Weaver, in being appointed president this year, has been given the chief office of an industry in which he has been so actively interested for more years probably than any recent president of the Board. For over thirty-five years he has been auditor, president and secretary of Central Factory of Stirling, and assisted in the organization of this well-known factory in the year 1893.

In his acceptance of the office of president he voiced the hope that members of the Board would give the same co-operation that has been extended previous presidents, and assured members, that he would try to fulfill every expectation of unexpected office.

Other officers elected for the year are: Wm. McLaren, Shannonville, first vice-president; Carman Grills, R.R. 5, Trenton, second vice-president, H. L. Adams, R.R. 7, Belleville, third vice-president.

Fred R. Mallory was unanimous choice for re-election as secretary and Frank Wessels and Chas. Mumby were re-elected auditors.

In retiring from office, Mr. Geo. White who served efficiently as president last year thanked all the members for the excellent help and co-operation he had been given during the year.

The auditors' report presented by Mr. Frank Wessels revealed 50 factories had traded on the board last year and a satisfactory balance remained.

A motion of thanks, which was heartily moved by the Board was extended by James Cook for the fair and impartial manner Mr. White had conducted the affairs of the Board during the term.

Despite the objections of Chas. Mitts, Ivanhoe. that nine o'clock Thursday evening of each week was too late an hour for the cheese board meeting, it was decided that no action be taken on the matter. Mr. Montgomery pointed out that it was not worth the farmer's time to "break up an afternoon for the sale at the price cheese was just now."

Every Car But One Stolen in Belleville Later Recovered

When Chief Kidd informed Edgar Rutherford, well known Belleville contractor whose automobile was stolen from his private garage on the night of May 24th last, that the vehicle had been recovered in Montreal yesterday, the recovery of the Rutherford motor car left a near perfect record, insofar as automobile thefts are concerned in Belleville.

"With the lone exception of Vernon Weirs automobile, stolen from in front of the Y.M.C.A., Campbell St., early in 1925, every automobile reported stolen in Belleville has been subsequently recovered and returned to its owner", Chief Kidd revealed today. The sole exception occurred one summer's evening, when Mr. Weir drove his new Chevrolet coach up in front of the Y.M.C.A. and left the keys in the ignition, while he ran into the building to deposit a paper. Mr. Weir claims he was not gone over 60 seconds, but that proved ample time for car thieves to swing into action. The vehicle completely disappeared and was never heard of since.

"There was the case of Frank (Duke) Smith's car that was stolen some years ago. We did not recover that motor car for over a year and only after it had been sold on three different occasions did the serial number eventually come out and the car was found in Northern Ontario", revealed Chief Kidd today as he seemed quite proud of the fact that only one automobile had ever been stolen in Belleville and not recovered. That's a very good and remarkable record", suggested Chief Kidd.

When Mr. Rutherford's Plymouth sedan was recovered in Montreal yesterday it was found that the licence plates had been changed. The vehicle was identified through the serial number. Montreal police informed Chief Kidd that the vehicle was in good running condition and had not been apparently damaged. The insurance company is returning the vehicle from Montreal today.

600 NEW DRIVERS TO GET PERMITS

An estimated six hundred new drivers will be added this year to the existing list of ten thousand of more carrying licences to drive in Belleville and district, last year, it is reported by the local office of issuer Major E. Vermilyea. A new supply of licences was received this week, when it was revealed that last year's quota would not be sufficient.

It is estimated by the office that two driver's licences are needed for each car licence issued. Annually the local issue numbers an estimated 5,000 new plates, the majority of which have already been given out.

Col. W. N. Ponton, Grateful for Pipe Band Serenade

Pipe Major Foster of the Kilties Pipe Band, A.L.I., has received a grateful letter from Col. W. N. Ponton, expressing his appreciation of the serenade which the pipe band gave him the other evening. Col. Ponton's whose interest is as keen as ever in anything Scottish, wrote as follows to Pipe Major Foster—

Belleville, May 30, 1939.

A. I. Foster, Esq.
Manager, Secretary,
Kilties Band of Belleville,
Pipe Band A. L. I.
City.

Dear Pipe Major Foster:

Never, except on one occasion when the Municipal Band under Lieut. Jobson, and numbering among its members several of my own old Boys of the A. L. I., have I been so delighted and honoured, as I was on Monday night when you, and your and my comrades together, paid me and my household the friendly, charming and musical visit, and shared with us the stirring skirl of the pipes and beat of the drums. To hear the Cock O' the North, Flowers of the Forest, the Highland Marches, and the Scottish dances, and old tunes, kindled my old heart and warmed every red corpuscle of Scottish blood (frae Inverness and Edinburgh), so there was something different after all.

The serenade has helped me wonderfully, and when you come again, as Browning and you promised you would, I hope to be able to dance the Highland Fling with the Boys of the Tartan, and to drink with one another the old Toast—

"Here's tae us!
What's like us?
Dom few!"

I thank you all from the centre of my heart for your thoughtful and inspiring kindness and surprise.

Yours faithfully and sincerely,
W. N. Ponton.

King and Queen May Use Room Used by Edward VII

Location of Royal Suite in White House is Kept Secret

Washington, June 1 (CP)—When King George and Queen Elizabeth come to Washington next week His Majesty may occupy a room of the White House that served as the bedroom of King Edward VII more than 75 years ago.

Location of rooms assigned to the Royal party is not being made public at the request of the Secret Service. However, persons familiar with the official residence of the United States President consider it probable the so-called Royal suite will be just that June 8 and 9.

The room came by its regal name after it had been used by Edward. It was at the end of his journey to Canada in 1860 that the then Prince of Wales, travelling as Lord Renfrew, occupied the room. It is one of the White House's most famous rooms.

Among other historic rooms that will be at the disposal of the King and Queen and their party are the Lincoln bedroom, Lincoln study and Monroe room.

The Lincoln bedroom contains all the furniture known to have been used by the great emancipator and Mrs. Lincoln while they were in the White House. The feature of the room is the famous Lincoln bed, nine feet long, heavily carved and with an enormous headboard. It may be that Sir Arthur Edward Erskine, equerry and tallest man of the King's household, will be given this bed to ensure his comfort.

One of the rooms which may be used by Queen Elizabeth is the Lincoln study in which the emancipation proclamation, abolishing slavery, was signed. When Mrs. Roosevelt moved in with her large family the Lincoln study again became an enormous bedroom. The young Roosevelts complained about the uncomfortable furnishing of all the White House beds so new mattresses and springs have been installed, especially for the Royal visit.

SUICIDE ATTEMPTS FEARED ON LINER

917 German Jewish Passengers Denied Entrance to Cuba

Havana, Cuba, June 1 (AP)—Police in launches and aboard the German liner Saint Luis kept close guard today at the request of the captain who feared a series of suicide attempts among 917 German Jewish passengers denied entrance to Cuba.

The passenger refugees were to start back to Germany this afternoon, unless a last minute decision permitted their immigration here.

The ship's representative was instructed to deliver a memorandum signed by women and children aboard the Saint Luis to the wife of President Federico Laredo Bru, requesting her aid in seeking permission for all to land.

One refugee slashed his wrists and jumped overboard Tuesday. He was rescued, but Captain Gustav Shroeder informed authorities he feared a "collective suicide pact" was being considered.

They were refused permission to land when it was found they carried only provisional permits of the immigration department to land as travellers en route to the United States where they hoped to gain admission later. They had no visas.

U. S. PREPARES WELCOME

The people of the United States who are through their President and Mrs. Roosevelt to be hosts to Their Majesties King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth from the night of June 7th., to Sunday June 11th., have not only been showing great interest as their press reveals, in the royal tour of Canada, but have also demonstrated their quickness of interest in the brief visit the Sovereigns are to pay to Washington and to New York and to the Roosevelt home at Hyde Park.

Prominent folk of the United States who are to be presented have been studying the question of presentation and Sir Ronald Lindsay, who is ambassador to the United States, has been persistently interviewed on the bow and curtsey.

Ottawa Journal refers to a recent series of queries propounded to by U.S. reporters, touching all manner of matters concerning the royal visit, even to the question as to whether Their Majesties have to carry passports when travelling abroad and whether they would accept gifts from prominent Americans. There were other questions, so many of them, including references to the much talked of garden party on the Embassy grounds and the picnic which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are to give Their Majesties at Hyde Park.

These but show the intense zeal of the people of the Republic in the great event when the King and Queen, first British Sovereigns to visit them, come to American soil.

How spontaneous their welcome will be, Canadians who know the United States well and who hold the American people in the highest regard, know.

The King and the Queen are fortunate in their hosts-to-be in the United States and everyone believes that they will have a most happy time together, these heads of the two greatest democracies. They are very human and democratic.

Canada has seen ample proof of the freedom with which the rulers move among the people.

SHEETS OF MANUSCRIPT

Because William Shakespeare left behind him some six signatures on legal documents while none of his plays have been found in manuscript, having probably disappeared in the destruction of the theatre where they were staged and in which he had an interest, that group of students, known as the Bacon Society, have urged that Shakespeare did not write the plays but that for political and personal reasons Bacon, who they claim wrote them, allowed them to pass as Shakespeare's. Those loyal to the Shakespeare tradition, have fought the Baconians with what most students think reasonable arguments, that Bacon was not of the spirit and type of mind who could write drama and that Bacon himself, great public man and scientist as he was, wrote only very indifferent poetry while the verse which goes by the name of Shakespeare is the highest flowering of genius.

If there could only be found a known Shakespeare manuscript, there would be proof enough to rout the Baconians.

Now it is believed that three faded sheets of manuscript in the British museum may be such as to prove conclusively that Shakespeare did write the plays. The sheets are three pages of a play on Sir Thomas More, which Shakespeare had been called upon by his company to rewrite for fear of censorship.

Dr. Flower, Deputy Keeper of Manuscripts in the British Museum has compared the signatures of Shakespeare with the writing on the sheets and announced his conviction that they were the only extant manuscripts of the English playwright, Shakespeare.

JUNE

June is here, the month of the beginning of summer, of examinations and holidays in the schools, of graduation and of honeymoon tours.

June brings the loveliest days and balmiest nights, it brings the sun to its height in the heavens and sees the beginning of its descent. After June comes the warm weather of July and August. June speeds up growth in all the land, and bring nearer the first harvest and the first fruits of the field and garden. Young stock, the fowl are growing; in the trees, which have reached full foliage, are heard nestlings, the beginning of new flocks of birds which will bless with their songs and their service in the field and in the air and in their association with the home and garden.

June is the month of leaves and roses, the month of pleasant scents. It is the month of rare days as J. Russell Lowell, the poet says:

"What is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
So blithe and gay the humming-bird a-going
From flower to flower, a-hunting with the bee."

It is the month when man likes to be near the pleasant waters and to enjoy the delights of bathing and swimming, a month of the moderate way of life, just before the steady heat breaks in on nature's retreats.

"IN PRINCIPLE"

How often delegations go
To interview some potentate.
They chatter in his anteroom.
Maliciously he makes them wait.
At length the door is opened wide.
In single file they step inside.

Their spokesman, with apparent calm,
In phrases chosen carefully,
Outlines the reasons "why we're here."
His colleagues listen, fearfully.
The potentate, with fountain pen,
Draws pictures on his blotter. Then

When cornered by a mass of fact,
Or argument invincible,
He, nonchalantly, with a smile, says
"I agree, in principle."
This wraps the issue in a mist,
And makes the delegates desist.

"In Principle"—the phrase is used,
Depending upon circumstance,
To hinder or facilitate,
To kill a project, or advance.
It is the statesman's master-key,
The oil poured on a stormy sea.

RICHARD CALLAN.

BE LOYAL—IT PAYS

EVERY MAN OR WOMAN employed by business is a salesman regardless of title or nature of the work — a salesman, good or bad, according to the state of mind, and where is the customer who likes to buy the goods of one who is not loyal to his house? And where is the one who can be consistently successful if his state of mind is out of tune with the policies and personnel of his institution?

x

Disloyalty never did build business, or make money for anyone, but honest loyalty has always been the hub of the wheel of success. Judas betrayed his Master for thirty pieces of silver. Did it pay Judas? Yet many a modern business organization consisting of a dozen men or more, has within it at least one man who will pat the boss on the back, tell him what a good fellow he is, and proceed at once to tell someone else a contradictory story—Judas stuff in every sense. His attitude is usually expressed by the words "What is there in it for me?"

x

Why in Heaven's name the dissatisfied one does not get himself another job or get his state of mind straightened out to tune with his present job is one of the mysteries of modern business, but from the time of Judas to the present moment this state of affairs has existed and usually at the expense of the disloyal one.

x

Loyalty promotes confidence, and confidence is a great little sales-getter and job-holder—and money maker for anyone who works.

x

If for no other reason on earth, be loyal because it pays—pays the loyal one in real dollars and cents, and will continue to pay during all that indefinite period of time we speak of as the future.

x x x

THE TORONTO GLOBE AND MAIL describes as the meanest effort of the "easy money getters" the conduct of a man in an automobile who went about the streets last Saturday, professing to be a tag day official engaged to gather up the boxes from the taggers. On the same day in Montreal a similar attempt to rob charity was made not only by a man but by a couple of women. This is a degree worse than the robbery of messenger boys, an all too common offence. Evidently, the modern thieves have no conscience whatever.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

There is Always Some Cause for Indigestion

Among the commonest conditions of which patients complain is indigestion. There is no use trying to tell a patient that his indigestion is caused by mental or emotional disturbances unless a complete or thorough examination is made by test meals and by Xrays. And even in cases where no possible cause can be found for the indigestion, years later a real or organic cause is often found.

When patients go to the Mayo Clinic for examination and treatment, in most cases they have been examined and treated elsewhere and finally go to the Mayo Clinic as a last resort.

Drs. D. L. Wilbur and J. H. Mills of the Mayo Clinic, in the Annals of Internal Medicine, record their study of 354 patients who after examination at the Mayo Clinic were told that their indigestion was functional or nervous, that is, not due to any organic trouble. These cases were examined about seven years later and it was found that real trouble —not nervous or functional—was present in about one in six cases, most cases being due to ulcer of the stomach or intestine or to inflammation of the gall bladder. Other conditions found which were causing the digestion in some cases were heart disease, hardening of the arteries, kidney stone, inflammation of the kidneys, pernicious anaemia, tuberculosis and syphilis.

The point then is that in the case of a patient suffering with indigestion from no apparent cause, his indigestion must not be considered of the nervous or emotional type unless a complete examination is made and a full history of the case has been well considered. If the Mayo Clinic can be wrong in one of every six or seven cases, it shows how watchful both patient and physician must be in cases of indigestion due to no apparent cause. A longer and more thorough search would appear to be necessary before calling the condition nervous or functional indigestion.

A check-up every three or four months might catch the condition in time and prevent the need of operation, or, if operation were necessary, it could be done in time to save life.

Letters to the Editor

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM

60 Dundas Street,
Belleville, Ont.

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—

A. A. Heap (C.C.F., Winnipeg North) said that the interest charges on the C.N.R. should be reduced as they were largely responsible for the C.N.R. deficit.

Transport Minister Howe told the House that every possible step, short of repudiation, is being taken to reduce the interest charges on the C.N.R.

"My friend has put his finger on the real Railway Problem of Canada," said Mr. Howe.

The C.N.R. has failed in only two years to earn its operating expenses. In all other years the deficit was due to interest charges.

The man on the street says that the country cannot stand the C.N.R. going behind $50,000,000 a year. He does not seem to understand that it is not the C.N.R. that is going behind, but that it is the interest on the debt that was saddled on the C.N.R. and that if the C.N.R. was got rid of, the debt would still remain. Unification, co-operation, amalgamation or enforced co-operation, it's all the same—the debt would still be there and the taxpayer would have to settle.

Mr. C. George McCullagh, president and proprietor of the Globe and Mail put the whole railway question in a nutshell when he said that the first practical step in working out a cure would be to put the C.N.R. on its own.

I have talked with a great number of business men since I saw Mr. McCullagh's editorial and everyone that I have spoken to says that Mr. McCullagh is on the right track and that his idea would be sure to settle the railway problem.

MCGEER STATES

produced in England and the General Staff in Canada wanted to manufacture it here." Col. Drew said the committee had heard no witnesses from the General Staff and should call them for detailed evidence on this point.

Commenting on Col. Drew's statement that the British War Office entered into a contract for 5,000 Bren machine guns with the John Inglis Company of Toronto without having direct knowledge of the company or plant, Mr. McGeer asked the witness if he did not know the British War Office inspected the plant.

Col. Drew said there was nothing in the records to indicate any war office officials had examined the Inglis plant.

"Major J. E. Hahn (head of the Inglis Company) testified here that such an inspection was made" Mr. McGeer said. "Don't you accept his evidence?"

"I don't accept Hahn's statement on anything."

"When did you develop this disrespect of Hahn's word?"

"When I heard the evidence before the Davis Commission."

(After Col. Drew published an article in Maclean's magazine last September attacking the Canadian Government's contract with the Inglis plant for 7,000 machine guns the contract was investigated by a Royal commission headed by Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada.)

Mr. McGeer drew from the witness that he and Major Hahn had exchanged books of their own authorship some years ago and drew attention to the inscription "sincerely yours" Col. Drew placed in his gift to Hahn.

"We have been disillusioned before now," Col. Drew said.

"And you tore off his decorations," Mr. McGeer said, referring to the fact that the Drew article named Hahn without listing the medals he won in the Great War.

Col. Drew replied that it was not customary to list a man's decorations in a non-military article.

"And this was not a military article. It was a political article," Mr. McGeer suggested.

"It was an article written to bring before the people of Canada one of the greatest abuses that exists under the system of obtaining munitions," Col. Drew said.

"Col. Drew, you are not an impartial witness," Mr. McGeer said. "You were paid to write this article. You were paid to prosecute the Defence Department. You said yesterday this was an abominable contract and that went out in headlines all across Canada. Now I want you to answer me 'yes' or 'no.'"

"You are paid by the people of Canada to be here," Col. Drew replied, "but that does not detract from your right to conduct this examination."

There followed a loud clamor of interruption during which Mr. McGeer and Col. Drew exchanged challenges for debates in public platforms in Toronto and Vancouver.

Members in Clash

Several clashes involving numerous members of the committee, followed, but all ended in laughter, particularly when Rev. T. C. Douglas (C. C. F. Weyburn) invited a member who had said "shut up" to "come out in the corridor and say it."

W. H. Taylor (Lib. Norfolk) said he had remarked to his neighbor that "the preacher should shut up" but that he had not meant it to go on record.

When Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) and Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) attempted to enter the argument on Col. Drew's behalf, Mr. McGeer said: "Col. Drew is quite able to take care of himself."

To Mr. Green he said "I am inclined to think you are a small town lawyer even if we are both from Vancouver.'"

Mr. McGeer read a letter from H. P. Skey, Toronto manager of the Bank of Montreal, written during early negotiation of the Bren contract, highly recommending Major Hahn from a banker's standpoint.

"I am afraid that letter leaves me with the same impression of some bankers that you have displayed on some occasions," Col. Drew said. "It conveyed an impression that was not justified at that time."

"After all, the Bank of Montreal is a fine institution," Mr. McGeer said.

"They will be glad to hear that from you," Col. Drew interjected.

"If you think I have any idea our merchant banks are untruthful, I want to deny it right now, and to dissociate myself from the smirch you have placed upon Canadian bankers," Mr. McGeer exclaimed.

"That is a good speech," Col. Drew retorted, "but it has nothing to do with this issue, the statement is not false but the banker relied on statements by Major Hahn."

"When investigating a manufacturing plant do you know any better place to go than the firm's bankers and Dunn and Bradstreet?" Mr. McGeer asked.

"I do so."

"Where is that?"

"I would suggest the thing that was asked for—a financial statement prepared by a chartered accountant."

Col. Drew said the financial setup of the company was "an interesting case of stock watering" and declared 76 per cent of the stock was "pure water" and was ultimately saleable to the public.

Tulips in deep red tones, with ivory tapers, formed a colorful centrepiece for the tea table at which Mrs. W. Hughes and Mrs. J. Lynch presided. Those who assisted in serving were Mrs. A. J. Wilkinson, Mrs. R. A. Flynn, Mrs. E. G. Kennedy, Mrs. J. Chappelle, Mrs. A. Morrell, Mrs. T. R. Dolan and Mrs. J. E. Logan. Mrs. J. Lafferty and Mrs. P. Donavon were in charge of the home cooking table and Mrs. D. Donoghue was treasurer.

Mrs. Ruby Fleming, District Deputy Grand Matron, Order of the Eastern Star, for this district inspected Lindsay Chapter, O.E.S., Wedneday night. Mrs. J. W. Barlow of this city accompanied her.

Mother and Daughter Banquet Held By Bridge St. C. G. I. T.

A very successful Mother-Daughter banquet was held in Bridge St Church Sunday School rooms by the C.G.I.T. on Wednesday evening. Blue and white, the C.G.I.T. colors were used in the decorations, with baskets of purple and white lilacs and tulips.

Members of the Junior group presented their mothers with wicker baskets they had made while the mothers of the senior girls and other guests received Talisman or red roses as favors. A sing song led by Mrs. C. A. Holmes was enjoyed during the banquet.

A cordial welcome was extended the guests by Miss Elaine Cook, president of the C.G.I.T. who acted as toast master. The toast to the church was proposed by Miss Betty Truman and responced to by Mrs. J. Semple. Miss Nellie Davidson proposed the toast to the Mothers to which Mrs. W. J. Morrison responded.

Interesting numbers on the evening's program were a reading by Miss Mary Lou Lazier, a selection on the Chimes by Miss Dorothy Alderman accompanied by Miss Dorothy Mitchell, and a reading, J. M. Barrie's tribute to his mother, by Miss Kathleen Morrison.

Mrs. C. A. Holmes introduced the guest speaker, Miss Sigurdson of Vancouver, who spoke on "Iceland" the birthplace of her parents. Miss Sigurdson held her audience spell-bound by her descriptions of the geography, habits and peculiarities of the isle of the midnight sun.

A selection by Miss Alderman on the chimes and taps brought the interesting evening to a close.

Weddings

CHILES—ALLISON

Picton, June 2.— Grace United Church parsonage, Napanee, was the scene of a quiet wedding, Monday, May 29th., when Marjorie McCready, daughter of Arthur Allison and the late Mrs. Arthur Allison of Adolphustown, became the bride of Mr. George Leslie Chiles, Picton, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Chiles of Havelock. Rev. R. T. Richards officiated.

The bride wore a frock of Royal Blue with white accessories.

The bride and groom left on a short honeymoon to Ottawa and other eastern points. Upon their return they will reside in Picton.

30 Costumes Worn By Queen in First Half of Journey

(By Muriel Adams)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Jasper Park Lodge, Alta., June 2—(CP) — Queen Elizabeth has changed her clothes 30 times and all but once has worn different costumes during the first half of the royal journey across Canada. She will make as many changes again before the Empress of Britain, carrying the royal guests, sails from Halifax for England June 15.

Blues have predominated in her daytime clothes, varying from palest bluey-white through grey to deep crocus blue. Her jewels have been pearls and diamonds.

To save worries with regard to packing, pressing and climatic changes, Her Majesty included in her wardrobe gowns of the simplest style with long straight coats and touches of fur for warmth and adornment to meet the daily engagements on her Canadian calendar. Washington, which promises to be warm, doubtless will disclose clothes of a cooler nature.

In the evening, when time permits a little extra fussing, Her Majesty presents a queenly figure in Her Majestic robes and picture gowns.

Although her hats are designed not to conceal her face, they are styled distinctively. A splash of feathers here, a flippant touch of veiling there or a tricky bow-knot or flowers add the feminine touch.

Queen Elizabeth has two maids to dress her and keep her wardrobe in order. But for a day or so, after one of her English maids was left behind with an infected finger, she got along with only one. A substitute arrived in Banff from Government House in Ottawa by plane to join the royal party.

Furs in a smoky shade have complemented the majority of Her Majesty's ensembles. As a knee-throw while driving she sometimes uses a wide smoky fur rug. White fox capes top her evening gowns.

Several images stand out in the minds of daily observers of the Queen: her fairy-like, palest pink crinoline gown, with clusters of roses caught on the panniered skirt worn in Quebec her exquisite white satin robe de style patterned on the wide skirts with gold lace worn in the Senate Chamber at Ottawa; her chic, dusky blue dress, wool coat and perky fuchsia-trimmed hat worn on her departure from Banff; the graceful picture she made carrying a large grey silk umbrella with her short-jacketted orchid afternoon gown worn at a naval ceremony at Victoria.

For mountain climates the Queen wears tailored woollen frocks and suits and soft felt hats and usually ties a brightly-colored kerchief about her throat. Her shoes are mostly high-heeled pumps in suede, but she packed along some low-heeled walking shoes for mountain hikes.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

There's formality about many of the hats seen about town this year. One woman wears a sailor fashioned of striped taffeta in silver gray, pink and lilac. At the back is a cloud or pink sheer veiling.

A sure visitor to the Fairs is the fur bolero for its beautifies daytime costumes and is indispensable at night. A beauty of a coat is a cardigan of silver fox, its big sleeves in swirled manipulation of the pelts.

A big hit has been scored by lime green. As a pick up for black, navy or beige, there is a handsome belt and handbag of lime kidskin. The wide belt has a double clasp consisting of two big leather-covered hooks and eyes. The bag has a similar clasp.

There's a laugh in many of the prints shown this season. A pretty chartreuse, white and marine blue has a design of seals balancing balls or blowing trumpets. The silk crepe frock is worn with a chiffon redingote printed in the same design.

Go in to dinner and attract attention with a beautiful princess frock. An exquisite evening gown is of pale gray taffeta with an all-over print of huge, fantastic orchids in the beautiful mauve tones. Wheels of the plain gray fabric tightly pleated mark the bodice.

Taking a walk are many smart little high-waisted skirt and bolero suits. A beauty in marine blue, very light weight wool, has a wide crushed waistband of the fabric joined to the skirt. This is topped by a pleated front shirtwaist of flat white crepe.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Relatives May Be Wrong

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last year I spent my vacation with some relatives who live in a smaller town than mine. They took me to quite a few parties, and at one of these I met a young man who seemed interested in me. I liked him too, and at their suggestion I invited him to supper one night. Soon we were good friends.

Well all of a sudden the neighbours began talking about our seeing each other so often, and my relatives said I should drop him at once—that he wasn't good enough for me. I had just graduated from high school, and he was 20, and I didn't see why small town gossip should stop us.

You see, after I came home we corresponded, and as the distance between the two towns isn't very great, he comes here to see me, and I see him when I visit my relatives. I think he's fine and I am old enough to know my own mind. I'm 19 now and he's 21.

Madge

If he is of good character, I don't see why you shouldn't go with him, even if the people in the country are apt to gossip. You took your relatives suggestion to have him call in the first place and I can readily understand your embarrassment at their sudden change of mind. However, if there's any real objection, I can see their point of view. Talk it over with them.

Never Alone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've recently become acquainted with a very nice young girl, going to see her every Sunday. I have a job with long hours and can't see her during the week, which we don't seem to mind at all. But every time I do go to see her, her parents sit in the same room. They won't even let her go for a drive with be. Can you suggest how I can win her parents' confidence in me, and where we could on Sundays?

In doubt

Why not take the entire family for a Sunday outing? After you've done this a few times, and they feel better acquainted with you, they may raise no objections to you taking daughter out, sometimes alone. The best of luck to you.

Unnecessary

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A friend of mine, not intimate, who is being married very soon sent me an invitation to the church wedding, but not to the reception at her home. I am not sure whether to send a present or not. Will you help me out, please?

Lyle

When the invitation is to the church only, and not to the wedding reception, a present is unnecessary.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Child Assimilates Manners By Home Precept

Teaching children to be poised and mannerly when they meet or are with adult friends of the family is a constant joy to parents who themselves are poised and mannerly. Well-bred children enjoy acquiring these niceties of behaviour, for with them this is a simple and natural extension of the daily "home manners". If the ogres of self-consciousness, shyness and self-assertiveness have been overcome and in their places have been substituted a mannerly naturalness, the child will respond charmingly to the pleasant formalities appropriate to the occasion.

In his home the child is taught not to say the abrupt 'no' and 'yes' when speaking to his parents. When this politeness has crystallized into a habit, he naturally says, to a guest or to a stranger, "Yes, Mrs. Smith", "Yes, Mr. Brown", or "Yes sir." When he is introduced to a grown-up, he looks directly at the person, and says, "How do you do, Mrs. Smith", just as an older person would.

That a child should be seen and not heard is no longer expected. The mannerly mother and the mannerly guest bring him into the conversation, but he should never be allowed to monopolize the conversation. Pleasant grown-ups give him a chance to talk, and he gives them a chance to talk! It is difficult to teach him never to talk while adults are talking, but if he does interrupt he should be taught to apologize for the interruption. But he will remember these courtesies only if the parents show him the example in his home.

Courtesy Tip

Don't always take the centre of the stage, in the self-appointed role of being "the life of the party". Let the other actors in the play of conversation speak their lines too!

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Five Years of Quints' Lives Tell Story of Progressive Physical Development

A year ago, when the Quintuplets celebrated their fourth birthday, they had progressed amazingly in comparison to the year before. Their vocabulary had increased to four or five hundred words; their art work was becoming much more detailed—where they used to draw the mere outlines of houses, they now supplied doors, steps, windows and chimneys. They were showing a great interest in natural objects around them. They were particularly attached to birds, and they saved every crumb of food they could to feed them and their little toad in the garden.

On their fourth birthday the Quints had their first ice cream, and they were terribly excited about it. About then, too, they began that generous habit they still have of running to the nurse to give her any objects they happened to pick up.

Their fifth year is a very eventful one for the Quints. This year they had their tonsils out and they met the King and Queen.

I am asked often if the Quints change much physically. The answer is definitely affirmative. For instance, when first we weighed them we found that the whole five weighed nine pounds, fourteen ounces. Their first year they gained a total of 75 pounds, to tip the scales at 84 pounds, 14 ounces. The next year they didn't gain nearly as much; but on their second birthday, they weighed 118 pounds, 14 ounces; their third birthday found them weighing in at 151 pounds, eight ounces. Last birthday they weighed 179 pounds, twelve ounces. But their big gain came this year, when they added 79 pounds the most they've gained any year, to bring the weight up to 258 pounds, ten ounces.

You know it's pretty hard for me to look at Marie these days and think that the first time I saw her she weighed only one pound twelve ounces. Yvonne was the heaviest Quint for quite some time, but today she's the second lightest. It has been remarkable how the Quints have kept together in their weight gaining. The only one who hasn't see-sawed back and forth with the others is Marie—she has always been the lightest. But Marie is gaining faster than any of them now, so the day may not be far away when she will be up with the leaders.

In her first year of life, Cecile gained 15 pounds, 13 ounces so that on their first birthday she was the heaviest Quint. Second biggest gainer was Annette, who took on fifteen pounds, five ounces, to hold second place. Little Yvonne, who had been heaviest of all, dropped to third place when she gained only 15 pounds, one ounce. But the one to gain least, and the one who needed it most, was Marie. She only put on 13 pounds, 11 ounces. Emilie took on 14 pounds, 10 ounces to keep her in fourth place, just ahead of Marie.

In the year before their second birthday, they gained an average of six pounds, 13 ounces; the following year, their average gain was six pounds, eight ounces; their fourth year they gained only an average of five pounds, 11 ounces. But this last year, with a total of about 70 pounds gained, their average weight increase is about 16 pounds each.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

"And Wylde sent me to plead with you—to tell you how much he loved you! I'll admit our situation is desperate, but you two young people are in love, and it would be a crime to allow your silly attitude about your father's money to separate you."

So Wylde had sent her to plead for him! No, Janice could not believe that. Mrs. Greene herself had determined that she could make a final plea better than Wylde.

"Think it over, Janice dear, and I'm sure you will realise that you are being hasty. I'll give you the money to join your father in New York if you don't wish to write to him for some."

"I do not need to write to my father for money—nor to borrow it from you." Janice's chin was high.

"But Wylde loves you — he is foolish about you! I'm afraid he will lose his head, marry you, anyway, and not think of the consequences," pleaded Mrs. Greene.

"You need not fear that. I won't marry Wylde. I would not subject my father to the problem of supporting a son-in-law."

Mrs. Greene drew herself up to her full height.

"You shall regret this! You treat me this way after I took you from that miserable rooming house and gave you a position in my home! I never thought Lois Flagg's daughter could be so ungrateful to one who has tried to be so good a friend."

"You mean you did not expect Lois Flagg's daughter to see through your scheming. You did not expect to find that I was more Ogden Flagg's daughter and could not have the wool pulled over my eyes."

Janice was on her feet now, blue eyes almost black with anger. Her whole body trembled with rage.

"After such talk, you cannot expect me to keep you on as my secretary!" Frustration was plainly written on Mrs. Greene's florid face.

"I shall leave immediately," Janice replied quickly. "It will not take me long to pack."

"I'll draw a check for your wages."

"Don't bother! I'm sure you need the money more than I do," Janice replied scathingly. "Just get out of here before I tell you what I think of a woman like you."

Mrs. Greene withdrew with as much dignity as she could muster.

Before Janice began to pack, she looked into her purse. Silly to carry one hundred and fifty dollars around this way, but now she was glad that it was here, at hand. She could leave without any delay.

But where could she go? New York would be icy cold, and jobs scarce. Perhaps she could wander through the South, stopping to pick up work where it offered. Yes, that was what she would do ....

CHAPTER XX

During the months that followed Janice's departure from Mrs. Greene's employ, she faithfully kept her promise to her father, writing to him every few weeks from a different town—or a different State. They were casual letters, never mentioning money, but telling of this fews days of work as a typist, a week as a demonstrator behind a counter in a drug store, a month running a house and taking care of three small children while the mother went to the hospital for an operation.

In late April, she was in Colorado, behind the counter of a roadstand, an expert at cooking hamburgers and frankfurters. She lived with the young couple who owned the stand, and who paid her eight dollars a week, plus board. The job had held for six weeks. She had rosy cheeks and bright eyes, and had taken on weight.

She had forgotten Wylde, forgotten everything but her happiness in this life in the open, with friendly Westerners stopping to drink her good coffee and eat her tasty sandwiches.

Her only link to the past was in the brief letters she received from her father. She warmed each time she recived on. They were friendly letters, interesting.

On her birthday, came a letter enclosing a check for one hundred dollars. It came at an opportune moment.

For several days now, people bound for Montana had been stopping at the roadstand. "There's gold in the streams, and we're after it," some of the old-timers had assured her as they chugged off.

Montana! Gold in the streams. Panning gold in the Tobacco Root Mountains. All that Peter Hathaway had told her about his summers on his claim there became vivid pictures in her mind.

Suddenly, she knew why she had been steadily making her way westward. Suddenly, everything formed into a pattern. She was going to the Tobacco Root Mountains and pan gold! It would be glorious during the summer and, if she were lucky, she might locate near Peter's claim and see something of him.

She began to question passing prospectors. How much did she need to grub-stake herself for the summer? She searched the newspapers assiduously for news about the spring pilgrimages to sources of gold. A Sunday newspaper had a long article in the magazine section, telling her about sluices, panning, the hard work and implements needed to grasp a few dollars a day from the streams flowing down from the mountain summits.

She realised she hadn't enough money to get to Montana and grub-stake herself for the alluring adventure. Long she pondered this. She could not go into the mountains, a lone girl, without all that she would need. And then, with a confidence born of those letters that had gone back and forth between her father and herself, she wrote him of the plan she had in mind.

"If you'd like to invest about fifty dollars in my venture, I'd be mighty glad, and would try to make it a paying proposition for you. Of course, you know what gold in the blood means...."

Her letter was the longest she had ever written him but, in this venture, she felt akin to him. She knew he would understand the urge that took her to the gold fields, even though he might heartily disapprove. She suggested that he write to her, General Delivery, in a small town at the foot of the Tobacco Root Mountains, sending her a money order instead of a check if he would help grubstake her.

Never for a moment did she doubt that he would send the money. She knew he would understand that this request for a loan was a step toward the cementing of thei rreconciliation—a step toward her return to his home in the near future. Reading her letter over, before mailing it, she realized that just that suggestion had crept between the lines, and smiled a little to herself.

And now, how to get to Montana?

But Lady Luck, who had seemed to desert her for a while, was again at her side. An elderly couple bound for Montana, came along in their car. They would take Janice with them for very little money.

So Janice packed her suitcase, and departed the next morning. She waved gaily to the roadstand couple. There were tears in her eyes. She had grown very fond of them, they had been so kind to her.

"Your name's Jan?" the old prospector asked, with a puzzled frown. "Kind of a funny name for a girl, ain't it?"

"Jan," she repeated firmly. "May be funny for a girl, but that's what my father calls me, and what he calls me is good enough."

So Jan Flagg went northward with a song in her heart, and with a vision of gold and of Peter Hathaway dancing before her eyes.

In the meantime, in New York, her worried father walked the floor of his study, reading her letter over and over. A huge German shepherd dog watched him, with troubled eyes, at last rising from his place and following up and down the room.

"Rex, do you understand?" The man turned suddenly to the dog. "That child is going into the mountains with the scum of the world, to pan gold—and I can't stop her!" He stooped and patted the dog's head. "I won't stop her. There's the promise of a homecoming between the lines. I have to play the game as she calls it."

Again, he paced up and down the room, deep in thought.

Suddenly, he spoke sharply. "Rex, you are going to Jan! You are going to protect Jan! Do you understand? I love her more than anything in this world, and you are going to take care of her and bring her home to me some day very soon!"

CHAPTER XXI

The letter from her father that awaited Jan upon her arrival in the little town at the foot of the mountains, was long. It contained a money order for a hundred dollars, and a glove, much worn and soiled, but one which would identify her to Rex as the one to whom his master was sending him.

"Rex is one of my dearest possessions," the letter concluded. "I'm sending him to you to be your companion and protector in this latest venture of yours. I am not giving him to you, I could not part with him, and I'm secretly hoping that Rex is going to bring you home to me—soon."

The dog arrived by express a few days later, his brown eyes sad, as though he were unable to understand what had happened to him to separate him from the master he adored. He was not vicious, but he was not friendly to anyone who neared his crate.

When Jan approached he looked at her with speculative eyes. He sniffed at her offered hand, and then, when she brought forth his master's glove from her purse, he sniffed it and barked excitedly.

"Rex, dear Rex!" As the door of the crate dropped, Jan's arms went about the big animal, hugging his head to her. And Rex licked her face with a long, moist tongue.

Jan bought her supplies, two burros, a sturdy tent, and everything that the garrulous storekeeper suggested. She learned where Peter Hathaway's claim was staked out, and learned that, just below it, was a claim that hadn't been worked the past two summers.

She soon felt at home in khaki breeches, shirt open at the neck, and heavy leather boots, but she looked upon the gun in a holster at her hip with a little feeling of panic. She could never use it! She would use the rifle she had purchased—she needed that to shoot game, wild rabbits. But for protection—well, Rex would be far better than the gun in the holster!

On her last morning in town, she bought the paper brought in from a near-by city. She bought it because Ivonne's picture was on the society page.

Ivonne, it seemed, was flying to California with a group of friends. Among them was Bradish Braxton, wealthy young scion of a Philadelphia family whose name was being linked with Ivonne's — and Wylde Greene.

Where was Corinne? Was Wylde still attaching his wagon to the Flagg star—now setting out to win Ivonne? Well, she—Janice —was very glad she had put him out of her life. Let him marry Ivonne for her money—if he could. She found she felt no malice toward him, nor envy of her sister.

Most of the prospectors went into the mountains by canoe, along the streams, but with a strong current and numerous small waterfalls, Janice could not undertake this alone. For her, burro travel was better.

For the whole first day, with the exception of short stops to rest and eat, Jan drove her burros ahead of her along the bank of the stream she was following. Rex, in holiday spirit, excitedly barked and ran about, like a scatter-brained pup instead of the huge dignified dog of five years which he was.

At night, Jan spread her blankets under the stars. The second day, she was stiff and lame but, by the third, she had limbered up.

The fifth day, she found what appeared to be the claim below Peter Hathaway's. Leaving her burros tied, she went a short distance farther up the stream until she found a cabin in a clearing a hundred feet from the stream. Yes, here was where Peter would be coming within the next month, when his summer vacation began. She returned to the other claim.

The droning of an airplane flying low made her pause in unpacking her ladened beasts. It was dipping still lower. There must be a landing field near by.

The plane disappeared from view, and the hum of the engine abruptly ceased. Everything was quiet, except for the babbling of the stream.

Then, suddenly, Rex growled, long and low, facing in the direction in which the airplane had disappeared. His fangs showed, and the hair along his back stood straight up.

"Wait a minute, boy," Jan warned, but her hand stole toward the revolver at her hip, and she suddenly wished she was not a woman alone—even with Rex to protect her, and a gun at hand.

Into the clearing came a man, dressed in corduroy trousers tucked into high boots and a flannel short open at the throat—a big fellow, with fiery red hair and a broad, infectious grin.

"Call off your dog, ma'am," he suggested, halting. "I'm only the forest ranger, and he'll have to get used to me sooner or later — sooner, the better. I'm Red Buckner."

"All right, Rex," Jan told the dog, but she realized, even as she spoke, that Rex liked the man standing before him.

"Aim to pan gold?" the young man asked, offering his hand to Rex, then patting the dog's head.

"Yes. I've just arrived. I'm setting up housekeeping," and Jan smiled at him in a sudden feeling of companionship.

"You won't need that tent— the shack's habitable," he told her. "Just air it out a few days. Wait, I'll lug that heavy stuff."

"My name is Jan Flagg," Jan paused to offer, in the midst of their tasks.

The man nodded. "Nice name—Jan."

Address of Welcome to Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth

TO THEIR MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTIES
THE KING AND QUEEN.
MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTIES.

The members of the Branch Churches and Societies of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, in the Dominion of Canada, and the Christian Science Assistant Committees on Publication for Newfoundland and the Yukon Territory have united in presenting an illuminated address of welcome to Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on the occasion of Their Majesties' first visit to the Dominion of Canada.

The illuminated address is in the form of a scroll. On the top of the first page is the "King's" Crown. In the filigree panel of the rose, thistle, shamrock and maple leaf, which appears below, is the year of Their Majesties' visit to Canada, together with Their Majesties' monogram in the centre. The British Coat of Arms occupies the top of the principal border on the dexter side, and is supported by the first initial of the address, in which is enclosed a sketch of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. The stem of the whole involution of the design continues without a break to the Coat of Arms of Canada at the top of the opposite side. The artist endeavors to express the loyalty and devotion of Christian Scientists, in line and color, as verbally expressed in the text of the address itself.

The scroll is enclosed in a royal blue morocco case with gold rolled edge and lined with royal blue watered silk, the parchment being fastened with morocco thongs.

Deseronto

Deseronto—The pupils of the High School staged a pageant of patriotic nature on Thursday afternoon at the High School grounds in front of the school. There was a large audience in attendance, the pupils and teachers of the Public Schools attended. The title of the pageant was 'Confederation' and consisted of two parts and at the close 'Rule Britannia' and 'God Save the King' were sung.

Deseronto lost an aged resident on Sunday afternoon, May 28th, when Mr. William Wilson passed away in his 83rd year at his home here. The deceased has been in ailing health for the past several months and for two months has been confined to his bed. Surviving to mourn his loss are his widow, one son and two daughters, Mrs. Francis McAlpine of Montreal and Mrs. Donohue. Belleville Intermediates Drop Opening Game of Loop To Gibbards of Napanee 8-6

Contest Viewed by Only a Handful of Fans Despite Importance of Game

LUSTY HITTING

Empson, Brilliant Outfielder for Locals, Likely Out for Season With Wrenched Knee

Two successive errors, after two hands had been retired in the third inning, proved costly and subsequently resulted in four unearned runs being scored by Napanee and the ultimate downfall of Belleville as the Gibbards stepped into the local ball yard at the Fair Grounds and literally spoiled the Bay of Quinte League opener for a mere handful of local fans as the Gerowites left town on the long end of an 8 to 6 score last evening. Aside from costly errors on the part of the Wilkins-led homesters, however, the game was productive of some lusty hitting by both nines.

Joe Kelleher started for the homesters, but following the third inning bobbles and a trio of lusty extra base hits that followed, Kelleher gave way to Lefty Weeks, who finished the pastime, while Jack Switzer hurled for the Gibbards and struck out no less than 13 Belleville batters, but walked six in his wildness.

Assume Good Lead

A walk, an error and hits by Jarrell and Empson gave the homesters a three run lead in the initial frame, but this advantage was eradicated in the fourth when Napanee scored four unearned runs on two hits, two errors, a walk and some generally poor baseball. Napanee added three more in the fourth after Curry tripled to right, Kinkley singled and Lucas cuffed a stinging double to centre. Napanee added single runs in the seventh and ninth. Jarrell's double and Ellis' single were good for a Belleville run in the fifth, while a hit and an error gave the locals another in the eighth. In the ninth Belleville rallied as Empson doubled and McDonald singled, Empson wrenching his knee forcing him out of the game at third. Austin, running for Empson, scored on a wild pitch, but the money hits were not present as Switzer struck out Ellis, with one out and made Plummer roll to first.

Kinkley Led Hitters

Kinkley, Napanee second sacker, led the hitters of the game with four for five, one being a double. H. Leary collected three safties and McCutcheon two, including a triple. For Belleville Jack Empson led the attack with two doubles and a single, but his unfortunate knee injury in the ninth proved most costly as Empson, the leading batter of the team last year, will be laid up for the remainder of the season. His loss will prove a serious blow to the local attack. Jarrell clipped a double and single while McQuade and Ellis came through with timely hits.

McDonald's running stab of Lucas' drive in the eighth was the fielding feature, while Ellis, McCutcheon and Kinkley fielded well, the latter having six tries bobbling but one.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 2 (AP)— Those who didn't make it missed a whale of a fight....Mike Jacobs said: "looks like I'll have to take the big ones out of New York." ....Signor Galento was there and gave the fotogs a lesson in pressional courtesy.....While Baer and Nova tore into each other, Tony politely refused to pose with his thumb firmly grasped between the thumb and forefinger of his left hand... Baer tried to look stern and determined while they were tieing on his gloves, but before the ceremony was over he had either bowed or winked at everybody in the gallery.... That will give you an idea of the size of the crowd. Webster says: "Nov" a new star, which flashes up to increase its brilliance, etc., by 10,000 times in a week or two but usually short lived." Lou says the last part "ain't so."

While Galento and Louis were in there being introduced, one guy said, "This is a history making scene, gents"....It is the only time you'll ever seen Galento in the same ring with Louis and walk out".... Max Marek, one of the few lads who beat Louis in the amateurs, took a licking in one of the prelims ....When Mello Bettina, he's the world's light heavyweight champion in New York state, was introduced as champion of the world, he was so certain they were calling for some other guy, he waited a good minute to get into the ring.

Here and there: Chicago is higher than a kite on an 18-year-old heavy, Altus Allen, who has just turned pro....Don't miss the centennial edition of baseball magazine—a honey.....Maurice Morrison, San Francisco Chronicle cartoonist, here for the fight, is police commissioner of Belmont, Cal., and also a member of the burg's volunteer fire department....Who can remember when a Yankee losing streak lasted longer than one game?

Power, Science Demonstrated By Cincinnati and Brooklyn In Defeating Boston, Chicago

Reds Put on Power to Score Five Runs to Defeat Bees 9-4

TAMULIS VICTOR

Dodgers Go Fourteen Frames to Win Over Cubs by Triple and Stolen Base

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

In the won and lost column it all looks the same, but there are two ways to break up an extra inning baseball game—power or science.

Both methods were demonstrated spectacularly yesterday. Cincinnati Reds who have virtually surpassed New York Yankees as exponents of the power play, exploded five runs in the faces of Boston Bees to win 9-4 in the 13th inning. Brooklyn Dodgers downed Chicago Cubs 3-2 in their night game when Gene Moore tripled and stole home in the 14th.

There is no fault to be found with either system but the Reds' way causes less fretting. They simply loaded the bases in the fourth overtime period and followed this up with a single by Will Hershberger and a home run, his fifth of the season, by Harry Craft.

The Dodgers went in for more drama. A near-capacity crowd of 32,574 was on hand to see the rivals who had played a 9-9 tie in 19 innings before darkness fell at Chicago May 17. They tossed in a triple play at midnight—which must be something new in the annals of baseball—and presented the victory to Vito Tamulis, the hard luck pitcher, who had worked the last 11 innings of their previous stalemate with the Cubs as well as an 11-inning tie with Philadelphia in the third game of the season.

Passed Crisis

Tamulis, fourth Brooklyn hurler, took over with the bases loaded in the ninth and worked effectively thereafter, passing his crisis in the 12th when the first two men singled and were erasd by the triple killing. Attempting to bunt, Jim Gleeson popped to Harry Lavagetto, who trapped the ball and threw to Dolph Camilli at first. One runner was tagged, the base touched and the other runner nabbed between second and third.

The loss dropped Chicago into fourth place in the National League as Pittsburgh Pirates pounded on the Phillies 5-2 in another night game and climbed into third place. A home run by Bill Brubaker broke a tie in the eighth inning and gave the Pirates their winning impetus.

Giants Nosed Out

In another thriller, St. Louis Cardinals nosed out New York Giants 1-0 on a disputed double by Johnny Mize and a hit and an error in the ninth inning. The Giants argued so violently Mize was out at second that two of them were ordered out of the game.

The Yankees pounded out their customary big inning—a four-run rumpus in the eighth—to beat Cleveland Indians 8-3. Lefty Gomez had one of his better days and gave up only one hit for seven innings.

Boston Red Sox walloped Detroit Tigers 14-5 with Eldon Auker keeping his former teammates under control on eight hits—one of them Hank Greenberg's 10th homer of the year.

Washington Senators beat Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics stopped St. Louis Browns by identical scores, 10-7. Both were hitting battles with six pitchers being used in each game.

LUCKINS TAKE KIWANIS 26-25

Meatmen Forced Into Overtime to Defeat Service Club Squad

Jack Cook's Luckin's meatmen carved the Kiwanis mushballers into small slices and were forced into overtime to win 26 to 25 over the service club nine in a "No Kick" softball league fixture last evening. Tied at a quarter of a century each, in the matter of runs, Fitzgibbon scored the winning tally in the tenth that chalked up the Kiwanis Club's second consecutive loss in the loop.

"Doc" Flynn's service club lads were enjoying a splendid lead in the ninth, but faltered and Luckins scored four to knot the count, forcing the issue into overtime. Frank Follwell hurled for the losers and his support is said to have been shaky at times, while two hurlers ascended the mound for the meatcleavers, Sager starting and Hanna finishing the chore. Fitzgibbon and Sager wielded potent bats for the winners and scored many runs.

When Prexy "Doc" Flynn only scored two runs in five innings, he was replaced by Jim Cowan, who got aboard, but was given no outward material assistance in the ninth, when the K-boys left two stranded and therein lies the cause of defeat. Bill Cook and Herb Fox tightened up in the field, and also found their muscles tightened up after the game. There are no more games in the "No Kick" loop until Wednesday when the Kinsmen and Barbers meet.

HERMAN SCHULTE OF NEWARK BEARS SETS NEW RECORD

Second Baseman Had Twelve Assists Without an Error in Contest

LEAFS LOSE

Inability to Hit in Pinches Cost Toronto Game to Montreal 4-3

(By The Associated Press)

It's traditional in baseball that no team really can be good unless it's strong "down the middle" — from the catcher through the pitcher's box and second base and out to centre field. And if you asked this year's Newark Bears about it, they'd probably agree and point to Herman Schulte as proof.

Schulte set an International League fielding record yesterday when he made 12 assists—without an error—in the Bear's impressive 3-2 victory over Syracuse Chiefs. But that's just one example of his value to Newark.

Last year he compiled a .970 fielding average, the best of any International League second sacker who played 75 games or more. Newark is third now, three games behind Rochester Red Wings, and yesterday's victory enabled them to gain a half game on Jersey Giants, whose game at Baltimore was rained out.

In addition to his new record for assists, Schulte cracked out three hits, but on two occasions he was thrown out trying to stretch singles.

Wings Maintain Lead

Rochester maintained its lead over Jersey City and Newark by snapping a pair of Buffalo winning streaks. They beat the Bisons 8-7 with a ninth inning rally that gave Buffalo its first defeat in four games and pitcher Art Jacobs his first in a relief role after five victorious appearances. John Grodzicki, Rochester's second moundsman, singled home Cardin Gillenwater from second with the winning run after holding the Bisons hitless after the sixth inning.

Montreal Royals won last night's other tilt, edging out Toronto 4-3 mostly because of the last-place Leaf's inability to hit in the pinches. The Leafs touched lanky Bill Crouch for 12 hits and drew six passes but left 15 runners stranded.

The Royals bunched their hits off Pretzels Pezzullo to score all their runs in the third.

Jim Braddock and Joe Gould will toss a birthday party for Tex Sullivan, their secretary, Saturday night .....Wes Ferrell is out of luck so far as the Giants are concerned.. Colorado Springs' Fourth of July fight between Henry Armstrong and Pedro Montanez is definitely off.

Nova In Technical Knockout Over Maxie Baer in Eleventh Of Bloody Duel at New York

Referee Stops Fight, When Baer Almost Choked from Blood of Cut Lip

A CRUEL BEATING

17,000 Watch Nova Survive Bushel of Hard Rights in Early Rounds

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, June 2 (AP)—Victor over Max Baer by a technical knockout in the 11th round of a bloody duel at Yankee stadium, Lou Nova of California stands qualified today to fight either Joe Louis or Tony Galento for the heavyweight championship in September or early next summer.

The 24-year old ex-collegian, fighting only his 27th professional bout, cut the e-champion down steadily and methodically until referee Frank Lullam stopped it in 1.21 of the 11th when Baer was choked and unable to continue from the blood that poured from a lacerated lip.

Almost 17,000 fans banked in the great arena saw the younger man survive a bushel of Baer's thunderous rights in the early rounds and come back to give him a cruel beating. Baer bled from the third round on.

Hurt Right Hand

Nova, his left ear blooming like an eggplant from Baer's despairing rights said in the dressing room he would have stopped his rival clean as a whistle if he had not hurt his right hand in the third round. Maxie, looking and feeling terrible, said he didn't know whether he ever would fight again.

At the same time he mumbled a warning to Nova:

"He's a good, strong boy, but he's a long way off. He gets hit too much".

His listeners nodded agreement.

From the start, last night's fight was a rip-roaring, brutal exhibition that kept the spectators on their feet. They slugged and grunted and scowled, hitting on the breaks and after the bell. The referee took two rounds from Nova for hitting low and one from Maxie when he clouted Lou an awful smash after the bell.

Blood All Over Ring

During the ninth and 10th rounds Nova hit his tired, distressed rival almost at will, smashing his bloody features with both hands as Max spewed crimson all over the ring. Fullam wanted to stop it earlier in the 11th, but Maxie refused the reprieve and took a dozen more blows before he consented to retire.

The fight really was decided in the second, when Baer suddenly lashed out with his famous old right and caught Nova cold with a half dozen in fast succession. That was when Baer's followers had expected the bout to end. But Nova wobbled and staggered a bit from the fusillade, but he stuck to his feet and came back fighting.

In the long run, it was Nova's straight left delivered with all his 202 pounds behind it, that ruined Baer's comeback. The veteran didn't know how to escape the stabbing leather and gradually as the rounds went on it cut him to pieces.

Although it was errors that actually beat Belleville in the Bay of Quinte opener last night, when Napanee downed the locals 8-6, the few fans present saw a fairly good intermediate baseball game, aside from the fatal third when errors really hurt. However, it must be admitted that the nucleus of a good intermediate team was fielded by Coach Wilkins. Give them a shortstop, catcher and one hard hitting outfielder and Belleville will be the team to beat in the Quinte loop. The unfortunate part of the baseball picture in Belleville, however, is the lack of executive interest in assisting the kids with the front office workings. Another unfortunate feature was the amount of the gate receipts—exactly $11.05. No town or city can operate a baseball club on such financial takings through the turnstiles and the question remains—do the fans of Belleville want baseball?

Not only did Belleville lose the game, but the locals lost the services of Jack Empson, who turned his knee going into third in the eighth inning last night and will be a total loss to the Belleville ball club for the remainder of the season. Last night Empson led his team mates with the willow, getting two doubles and a single in three tries. He led the team in hitting last year and his loss will be keenly felt. However, there were several youngsters playing their first game of intermediate ball who impressed the few fans present. For instance Bill McQuade won his spurs, but should be playing short. Jarrell in right misjudged a bad one, but came though otherwise with flying colors, while Ellis, who is a pitcher of promise, showed his prowess as an outfielder. The Belleville pitching staff in general seems well balanced and will improve, but there is a need of an experienced catcher, an infielder and an outer gardener, one who can hit.

Turning the page over and looking at Walt Gerow's side of the picture we found the Gibbards hitting the ball with consistency but they had ten left stranded as Belleville left an even dozen on the runways. Kinkley and McCutcheon were the most feared hitters the former getting four hits in five tries which is no mean effrt in any man's park. It might be well to mention that Kinkley, Cairns and Walt Gerow Jr., all have had the benefit of senior ball experience in the C.O.B.L., while there was not a Belleville player in the line-up with that background. The locals are home brews, the majority coming up from last year's junior team. Jack Switzer, the Napanee pitcher struck out no less than 13 local batters, even if Belleville did wiggle out the hits, four for extra bases

Wrestling fans always crave action and their cravings should be well appeased tonight when Joe Conkle and Frankie Slavick meet at the arena. Both of these boys are fast, agile matmen and action personified can be assured. However, the ladies' white-haired boy of the grappling business is back tonight in the person of George Richards, the Jewish champion. Whenever Richards is scheduled to appear in Belleville it is a certainty that a goodly number of the fair sex will be out, vocally supporting the lithe Jewish lad, who is as handsome as Clark Gable, Robert Taylor or any of the other Hollywood celluloid flicker stars. Just let "that horrid Denchuck" mess Richards' hair and the lassies will be on Denchuck tonight like bees around a posey and the fair sex are anything but fair when it comes to wrestling, as a matter of fact "they're more serious than the male sex ever hoped to be.

Do you remember when Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe passed out of major league baseball one year ago today. His hurling collapse, result of an arm ailment, was shown in his record of 24 wins in the American League of 1934, and none in 1938. He won 19 games in '35 and '36. Rowe is in the midst of a comeback with the Tigers now

Todate the Kingston Minor Baseball Leagues has spent something like $378. for uniforms for their newly organized minor baseball clubs. Aside from this those sponsoring minor league baseball in Kingston have supplied bats, balls and a catcher's outfit for every junior club in the league. Each junior team is coached by a former Kingston Pony senior player. It is expected that over $500.00 will be spent on the fostering of baseball along the teen-aged boys in Kingston before the season is far advanced. As the schedule advances, however, the receipts are expected to defray these expenses and as the Kingston scribe points out—"there will not be splits among players or clubs at the end of the season." Apparently they are bringing the kids up right in Kingston, namely to play the game for the game's sake, something that is not as yet recognized in Belleville, but is rapidly approaching, if one will peek beneath the scenes. Incidentally Joe Daley, Kingston's veteran baseball mentor, was named the Judge Landis of the Kingston Junior loop, a selection that could not be bettered, regardless.

Track and field athletes from all parts of the Bay of Quinte district will compete in the annual district C.O.S.S.A. track and field meet at the O.S.D. on Saturday. Interscholastic track and field lads from Napanee, Trenton, Picton, Marmora, Madoc, Tweed, Albert College, the O.S.D. and intermediate points. We understand that the Belleville Collegiate will not be represented, as the track and field athletes at the local seat of learning have not attained the required 50 percent in academic endeavours throughout the year. Actually it seems too bad that athletes the type of Bill Pigden and others who show track and field promise are denied the chance to compete and thereby improve their status as track and field aspirants.

The old saying of 'they don't come back' was again proven last night when Lou Nova, the blond Alameda, Cal. heavyweight, kept his gloves in Maxie Baer's face so long and often that Baer's mug resembled a mess of hamburg steak along about the 11th round forcing Referee Frankie Fullam to stop the proceedings and declare Nova the winenr on a T.K.O. Baer was attempting a comeback to regain his lost heavyweight title, but today it's Nova who will meet Joe Louis, the Detroit Brown Bomber in September, but we don't think the California boy hits hard enough to dint the champ's chin, now or in September In the meantime Louis meets "Two Ton Tony" Galento later this month—why, we don't know.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM .. ..
ROSE—In sad and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Roy Rose, who lost his life, June 2nd., 1933.

When the shades of night are falling
And we are sitting all alone
To our hearts there comes the longing
If Roy only could come home
But some day we all shall gather
Round that sacred Throne on High
Where there'll be no more sad parting
And no tears shall dim the eye.

Sadly missed by his mother, father and sister. j2-1t

AT THE BELLE

"DODGE CITY"

The roughest and toughest cattle town in the history of the western frontier is the setting for the vigorous tale of virile adventure told in "Dodge City," the Warner Bros. production in Technicolor, starring Errol Flynn, which is next at the Belle Theatre.

Other members of what is undoubtedly the most notable cast ever assembled for a picture dealing with western pioneer days include Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, John Litel, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill, Victor Jory, William Lundigan and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams.

Aside from its brilliant and obviously impressive cast, the picture is distinguished by its magnificent and authentic re-creation of the scene and the times depicted. The lavish detail with which the Dodge City of 1870's and the great plains which surrounded it are vividly brought to life on the screen make it easily believable that, as reported, the studio spent a million and a half dollars on the production. In brilliant, natural technicolor, the vast production is said to give the spectators the feeling that history is being relived before their eyes.

Putting the manifestly British Errol Flynn into a tale of frontier America may seem a little strange to those who are not too well acquainted with the actual history of the old west. As a matter of fact, the annals of those times record more than one venturesome Briton who acquired distinction as a he-man in a region where a man without virility and courage could not long survive.

The story of "Dodge City" is laid in the period when this little community in the southwestern corner of Kansas, as the northern terminus of the famous old Chisholm Trail and the western terminus of the Santa Fe Railway, became the west's greatest cattle shipping centre.

At the opening of the picture, a great herd of longhorn steers is shown moving up the Chisholm Trail toward Dodge City, the trail boss of the big herd is Errol Flynn, an Irish soldier-of-fortune who had drifted out west after fighting for the South in the Civil War.

Dodge City, when Flynn arrives there, is under the domination of a group of murderous thugs headed by Bruce Cabot. Right after Flynn's arrival he has an angry encounter with Cabot and the small but brave law-abiding element, impressed by Flynn's temerity, urges Flynn to become sheriff and help clean up the town.

The supporting cast of featured players and thousands of extras is one of the best assembled for an important picture this year.

Teamed with Flynn in the lead is Olivia de Havilland who has become identified as the screen sweetheart of the adventuring Irishman through a parade of hits. Starring with "Captain Blood" a few years ago, the star pair continued through such smash films as "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Four's a Crowd," and "The Adventures of Robin Hood."

AT THE McCARTHY

"ARIZONA LEGION" "TARNISHED ANGEL"

George O'Brien, foremost outdoor star on the screen today and now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, is portraying his sixtieth characterization in "Arizona Legion", a fast-paced action-packed drama which brings to life an almost forgotten chapter of early Arizona history.

Making his debut in "The Iron Horse" in 1924 O'Brien, during his fourteen years as a film actor, has appeared in both drama and comedy with equal success. Since 1928 he has appeared only in action films. In some, such as "Ever Since Eve" and "Park Avenue Logger," comedy was interwoven with drama, but beginning with Harold Bell Wright's "When a Man's a Man" in 1935, O'Brien turned to the rough-riding, fast - shooting Westerns which have established him as the most popular outdoor star.

In "Arizona Legion," an actual happening from the pages of history is incorporated in the story idea to make it one of the most exciting and most interesting of all George O'Brien's vehicles. It deals with the secret formation of the "Arizona Rangers," a band of men commissioned under equally secret state authority, to rid the future state of Arizona of outlaws. Territorial Governor Oakes Murphy in 1901 actually commissioned such a group of patriotic men.

"Tarnished Angel"

Romance, adventure, underworld scheming, an ingenious jewel robbery and sham faith-healing are combined in "Tarnished Angel" second feature hit also now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. Sally Eilers and Lee Bowman have the romantic leads in this exciting picture, with the dark-haired actress in the role of a night club girl who becomes a fake revivalist.

There is a powerful crisis in which the "miracle worker", realizes the enormity of her fraud when she fails to cure a poor little crippled girl whom she sincerely desires to aid.

Ann Miller, Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Alma Kruger, Hamilton MacFadden and other players have important roles in the offering, as well as a new child "discovery, Janet Dempsey.

In addition to the two feature program, an extremely funny Walt Disney all technicolor cartoon of Donald Duck in "Donald's Ostrich" and another thrill-packed episode of "Flying G-Men" are more treats now showing on the screen at the McCarthy Theatre and all-in-all, it is one of the finest family programs, one could possibly choose to attend.

TRUCKLOAD HORSES GET TREATMENT FOR ROADSICKNESS

A large truck carrying six heavy draft horses lumbered to a stop in front of the Ontario Intelligencer office early today.

The driver and his companion hurriedly reached beneath the seat of the cab and came forth with bottles of medicinal fluid. Jumping on the truck they quickly dosed their equine cargo with a generous supply of the medicine.

"Anything wrong?" queried a bystander. "Just a touch of roadsickness," came the reply. Further inquiries revealed the fact that Dobbin's roadsickness is equivalent to that uncomfortable feeling experienced by humans when being tossed about in a boat on the ocean.

The horses were in transit from Eastern Ontario to a Quebec point.

FERGUS THISTLES TAKEN FOR RIDE

Drop From First to Third Place, When Defeated by Orillia

(By The Canadin Press)

A fight to the finish was apparent in the Ontario Lacrosse Senior League after last night's games.

Orillia Terriers, whose every game brings them closer to the return of five suspended players on June 15, dropped Fergus Thistles from first to third place by defeating them 13-8 at Orillia.

Surprised by a vicious scoring attack early in the game, the Thistles didn't recover until late in the last period. Even with an advantage of three players on one occasion, the Scots could not overcome the 9-2 lead set up by the Orillians at half time.

St. Catharines and Mimico stepped in to share the spot vacated by Fergus when the Athletics whipped the Mountaineers 15-7. The 2,500 St. Catharines fans who turned out to see renewal of hostilities between the two teams were disappointed if they were looking for fights. Only 11 minor penalties were handed out in comparison to 96 minutes when Mimico laced St Kitts 15-5 in the Toronto suburb earlier in the week.

Morton cut loose with four goals for the Athletics who led 2-1, 9-3, and 12-5 by quarters.

GIRL COMPLETES JOB OF WRITING BIBLE BY HAND

Toronto, June 2 (CP)—A Bible, written by hand by Marjorie Griffin, Glanford Station, will be an outstanding feature of an exhibit on display during the olden Jubilee Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec here June 8-14. OFF FOR WIMBLEDON

Off for England and the tennis wars of Wimbledon, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, one of Uncle Sam's better feminine racquet-wielders, makes a pretty picture as she waves good-by from the rail of the Normandie.

George O'Brien in a scene from "Arizona Legion," now playing with the second feature Sally Eilers in "Tarnished Angel," at the McCarthy Theatre.

WARRINGTON AND WENSTOB DRAW

15-Round Bout in Edmonton for Heavyweight Title of Canada, a Good One

Edmonton, June 2 (CP)—Eddie Wenstob of Viking, Alta., and Terry (Tiger) Warrington, Liverpool, N.S. negro, fought to a 15-round draw in a fight last night that was billed as for the Canadian heavyweight championship. Wenstob weighed 174 and Warrington 175.

There were no knockdowns although Wenstob went to his knees in the last round when he swung a wild right—and missed

Expected to clear up the heavyweight and lightweight picture in the Dominion, the bout only further complicated the situation as neither was able to take a decided margin at any stage.

A crowd of about 3,200 saw Warrington force the fight most of the way but the Westerner had the edge in the long-range sparring.

Referee Jerry Delane of Edmonton voted for Wenstob, John Smith one judge, for Warrington and Roy Haliburton, the other, called for a draw decision. Both judges are Edmonton residents.

TWO TOP TEAMS DROP CONTESTS

Rugmakers Lose Chance to Cut Into Lead Secured by Oswego

(By The Canadian Press)

Although plenty more probably will present themselves before the season changes to long pants, Amsterdam Rugmakers counted as as lost today one opportunity to cut into Oswego Netherland's margin at the head of the Canadian-American baseball league's young pennant chase.

With both winning games at a regular clip, the Nets have held a two game edge over Rugmakers for the better part of a week. Yesterday Oswego faltered, dropping an 8-7 decision to Ogdensburg Colts. Nothing outdone, Amsterdam kept their distance by losing 3-0 to Rome Colonels

The results served to tighten first division standings, however, for Ogdensburg and Rome are the third and fourth place clubs. Colts now are only one game behind Rugmakers with Colonels another game and a half back

Too Good For Rugmakers

At Rome, southpaw Roy Smith from Collingwood, Ont., was too good for Amsterdam, shutting out the New York Yankees' farm club with a pair of scratch hits. His mates meanwhile pounded Vince Ventura for eight blows that gained them single runs in the third, fifth and eighth frames.

KEEPS ON RIDING

London, June 2 (AP)—A wizened little fellow named Billy Bullock scrambled off Ridley, winner of the Northern Stakes, yesterday. It was 31 years to the day since he rode the filly Signoretta, a 100-1 chance to triumph in the 1908 Derby.

No one knows his age or how he does it. Every one knows why. For although he rode Signoretta to triumph first in the Derby, then in the Oaks, he never became a really fashionable jockey.

So he just keeps riding for ham and eggs.

Nancy's Little Bag

By ESTHER MUGGNES

Ella Caldwell ran to the door, smiling. Her husband was coming home from a three-day trip. Ella had been watching the elevated trains for twenty minutes before she saw his signal—the newspaper held crosswise on the window of the train.

Just as he opened the lower door of the hallway Ella heard Mrs. Mink's door open. Mrs. Mink was a new tenant in the apartment below. The agent of the building and the janitor said she was a well-to-do widow, jolly and generous to a degree. It turned out when Mrs. Mink's household goods were being moved into the apartment that Ed and she had been classmates at grammar school.

On the strength of this ancient acquaintance Mrs. Mink had cheerfully called in Ed to settle a difference of opinion between her tallying of the hours it had taken the moving men and the hours set down by the men themselves. And every time that Ed had gone in or out of the building since that first day Mrs. Mink had managed to have some excellent reason for stopping him. Now Ella heard the soft voice of Mrs. Mink say gently:

"Oh, Neddy! Could you stop for a moment? My gold clock simply won't go and I've been poking at it all day just waiting for you to come in. I knew you'd be able to make it run!"

"Why—why, sure thing." Ed's voice answered.

Neddy! Ella herself never called him Neddy; he always complained that it was a sissy name for a he-man. It was all right to be neighborly, of course. But when a man has been away for three days it is laying it on a bit thick to stop him before he has had time for a marital kiss. There was scant time to think much about this, however, for the door across the hall opened and Alicia Graves ran across with her baby in her arms.

"The dentist just telephoned to me that if I come right away he can pull those two impacted wisdom teeth for me. I'd have asked you before I made the appointment definitely only I saw Ed coming and he has such a way with Nancy—" Alicia's voice trailed away into nothingness.

"It's all right, of course," said Ella mechanically.

"I like to be neighborly back and forth," said Alicia brightly.

It ran across Ella's mind—Ella had no babies to leave with neighbors—that most of the neighborliness lay just forth and never back.

When twenty minutes had passed and Ed had not come upstairs a plan formed itself in Ella's mind. Had Mrs. Mink been elderly and plain and poor, Ella would have thought nothing of Ed's staying so long. But Mrs. Mink was right up to the minute or a jump ahead into the next minute; her hair was always beautifully waved and her nails were glossy and rosy.

Ella had tried to call on the newcomer since Ed had once been a classmate, but no one had answered the door.

And now she rose to her feet, determined to carry out the plan that had come, unbidden, into her mind.

Downstairs she rapped at the door smartly and then, the door being ajar, walked boldly in through the hallway to the living-room, where she heard Ed's voice. On one hip she carried the neighbor child, Nancy, who was still clutching her bottle and in need of sundry attentions. In her free hand Ella carried a bag of baby necessities.

Her face was serene and happy as she spoke to Ed without a glance toward Mrs. Mink.

"I'm going up to the movie matinee, Neddy darling," she murmured. "Here's Nancy and the baby things, dearest. I knew you'd be glad to take care of Baby for your friend will while you fix her clock. I'm coming to call on you one of these days," she finished, turning toward Mrs. Mink brightly. "I think it's so nice to be neighborly—back and forth, don't you?" There was a brief glance toward the baby that betokened coming afternoons with Mrs. Mink watching the child.

"Please don't leave the child here," said Mrs. Mink in a chilly voice, entirely unlike the voice with which she had greeted Ed. "I dislike babies intensely. I didn't know Neddy had babies!"

"Oh, do you?" drawled Ella gently, her eyes wide with horror and surprise. "Well, fix it any way you like, Neddy dearest. If I'm not back for dinner you'll know I met Irene at the show. She has been asking me over to dinner for weeks."

It was barely six o'clock when Ella returned to the apartment. Ed was sheepishly preparing dinner, Nancy sitting on the big dictionary propped with pillows. A little one-sided grin was on his face as Ella greeted him cheerfully.

"You stuck a knife blade into her heart, all right," he laughed, as he tilted her head back for the long-delayed kiss. "Funny, too, I'd thought she was quite—attractive until she glared at poor little Nancy that way. Kind of unfeminine, I call her!" he finished as Ella busied herself over the gas range.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, Do you believe in first impressions, Willyum?

Well yes, anything up to a 5 doller bill, after that I give it a couple of pulls and hold it up to the light, not that I ever find out anything, pop said and ma said. I mean people, Willyum, do you believe in first impressions of a stranger?

Absilutely, pop said. If a man makes a point of looking me straight in the eyes when he meets me, it always makes me a little sispicious, he said, and ma said, I declare I still think I wasn't mistaken, he had such soft dark eyes and such beautiful clean wavy hair he couldn't possibly of been dishonest.

There's something in that, I believe, pop said. A recent survey of all forgers and crooked bank clerks has shown that the dark eyed and wavy haired type repprents only 49 per cent, and that's less than half, he said, and ma said, I believe it, too, he told me he was working his way through college by selling subscriptions for Home and Table Magazine, and he had such a gentle caressing voice and such a trusting smile I didn't see how I could refuse.

So you didn't refuse, pop said, and ma said No, though it's really against my policy to pay in advance unless I'm certain. That was some time ago, and when the first copy of Home and Table failed to arrive, and then the 2nd and 3rd. I wrote to them and they answered promptly that they have no representatives of any kind soliciting subscriptions, so what do you think," Willyum? ma said.

I think I'd wait 2 more years, and if no copy arrives by that time I'd certainly think twice before I gave that young man any more money, I'm afraid he may be one of the 49 per cent, pop said, and ma said, O deer I'm afraid he may be.

Wich there's proberly no maybe about it.

It was one of those slow convalescences, however, with the ticker tape frequently coming to a halt. Near the fourth hour steels and motors were about the best.

Among prominent advancing stocks were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, American Telephone, Anaconda, Philip Morris, Dunhill International, Union Carbide, N.Y. Central and U. S. Rubber.

Edging ahead in the Canadian group were C.P.R., Dome and International Nickel. Dominion 4s were neglected.

Further Strength In Butter Displayed

Toronto, June 2—Further strength was displayed by butter and eggs traded at previous prices on the Toronto open produce market on Thursday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Offerings cleared readily under fair demand on the butter market. Fresh receipts are not arriving in any heavy volume, and, while offerings appeared more freely in late trading, holders were not pressing supplies on the market. Ontario creamery solids ended the day at 21¼c for No. 1 grades and 20⅞c for 38 score. Some sellers endeavoured to obtain ½c above these levels, but buyers were not willing to pay the higher figure. Prints moved in retail channels at 22½c to 23¼c for top grades and 21⅞c to 22½c for 38 score.

A steady undertone prevailed on the egg market, with fresh receipts moving fairly well. Demand was centred principally on top grades. Graded shipments sold at 19½c to 20c for grade A-large, 17½c to 18c for medium, 15½c to 16c for B's and 15c for C grades.

Montreal, June 2—Prices generally were steady to a shade easier on open produce markets here, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21⅞c. Receipts 836 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese brought 10¼c a pound. Receipts 959 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21-21½c a dozen for A-large; 18½-19 for A-medium; 18 for B-large and 16 for C. Receipts 1468 cases, including 500 for export.

King, Queen to Attend Divine Service at Portage La Prairie

Winnipeg, une 2 (CP)—The Winnipeg Free Press yesterday said it had learned unofficially that King George and Queen Elizabeth will attend divine service Sunday in Portage la Prairie, 50 miles west of Winnipeg.

The newspaper added: "Following the service the Royal couple and members of their entourage will drive into Winnipeg and pay an informal visit to the Deer Lodge Military Hospital.

"Both arrangements mark changes in the Royal visit schedule. Originally only a 10-minute service stop was intended for Portage la Prairie. . .

"While their Majesties drive into the city, the Royal train will travel on into Winnipeg and await them at the Canadian National Railways station. . .

"Members of the general public will not be admitted to the service at Portage la Prairie."

The Winnipeg Tribune said officials here and at Portage la Prairie would neither deny nor confirm the report that preparations are being made for a stop at Portage la Prairie. Officials, however, definitely denied the Royal party would drive to Winnipeg, the Tribune stated.

(Last week Mayor John Queen asked Premier John Bracken of Manitoba to seek a visit by Their Majesties to Deer Lodge when the Royal train returned from its visit to Western Canada. His request was more because veterans had expressed disappointment because a stop at the hospital was not included in Their Majesties' itinerary when they visited Winnipeg May 24.)

Mr. Houston retired last midnight. His wife and three children were on hand to greet him as he "checked out" for the last time.

A FATAL EFFORT

The Soviets, according to the view taken here, mistook this reference to the League as an "escape clause" to permit Britain and France to dodge responsibilities by invoking the slow and cumbersome League of Nations machinery.

It would not surprise observers here if Britain dropped this suggestion, which is not considered essential to carry out the objects of the Anti-Aggression Pact. It has been described by some as a device used by Prime Minister Chamberlain to make a military tieup with the Soviet more acceptable to his followers.

The British formula would cover the three Baltic countries in its general terms. It would commit Britain, France and Russia to go to the assistance of any of them if they requested aid in repelling an invader.

CAPTAIN ORDERED

It was stated at the Company's headquarters that the captain was instructed not to try to land at any other port unless the Jewish passengers themselves managed to get permission to disembark.

Havana, June 2—(AP)—The German liner St. Louis took on fuel and provisions to start back to Germany today with 917 German Jewish refugees forbidden to set foot on Cuban soil—an order backed by a threat to tow the vessel outside territorial waters with a gunboat.

The refugees, most of whom had hoped to land pending entrance into the United States, thronged the decks of the vessel, women wailing at the growing indications of enforced return to the land from which they had fled.

Unaware of Orders

Efforts were made to keep the passengers unaware of the actual sailing orders for the master of the ship had expressed fear of a "collective suicide pact."

Cuban Marines were held in readiness for any emergency that might arise in carrying out President Federico Laredo Bru's order that the St. Louis leave Havana.

Captain Gustave Schroeder of the St. Louis had expressed fear of mutiny among the passengers if he put out to sea again and one passenger had attempted suicide. He slashed his wrists and leaped overboard but was saved.

The refugees, including 500 women and 150 children, were forbidden to land because they lacked Cuban Consular visas

MISS MARY JANE BLACK

After an illness of eighteen months' duration Miss Mary Jane Black passed away at her late residence, 20 Hillside Street, Thursday evening, June 1st.

The late Miss Black, who was in her 75th. year, was born in Madoc, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John Black. Practically all her life was passed in this city. By many friends and acquaintances she was held in high esteem for the many fine traits of character which she possessed. Four sisters and three brothers deeply mourn the loss of a true sister, and friends in Vancouver, B.C., Kenora, Ont., Kingston and Ottawa will mourn the loss of a true friend.

In religion Miss Black was a faithful member of the Church of England, and was associated with the parish of Christ Church. When able she took an active part in all church work and was a member of the Woman's Auxiliary and at one time she was a valued teacher in the Sunday School.

HOLIDAY SPIRIT

The holiday spit is at fever pitch.

Hotels Crowded

Hotels are crowded. Special trains ran from rural centres. Buses and private cars brought their quota of 100,000 visitors to join Edmonton's 89,000 population in a welcome to the King and Queen. Twelve hundred Indians from the foothills and plains camped in a teepee village.

Sunshine blessed Their Majesties' hours of relaxation yesterday at Jasper Park Lodge 250 miles west of Edmonton, and continued sunshin was forecast here today.

A 21-gun salute heralds arrival of the royal train. The welcoming party at the station includes Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen and Mrs. Bowen, Premier Aberhart and Mrs. Aberhart, Mayor J. W. Fry and Mrs. Fry and Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, Federal Minister without portfolio, and Mrs. MacKinnon.

The royal route leads over Edmonton's wide streets, down famed Portage Avenue, past an Indian encampment to the civic airport, through the business section and across the half-mile, high-level bridge over the North Saskatchewan River.

Two Ceremonies

Two ceremonies mark the one-hour stop at the Legislature Buildings, entered through a big white arch with "Welcome" in block letters.

The Province's address of welcome by Premier Aberhart and Mayor Fry's greetings on behalf of the city precede the presentation to Their Majesties of seven Victoria Cross holders.

A red carpet leads up the steps, past a flower-banked fountain, into the Legislative Assembly Chamber, newly carpeted and redecorated for the occasion of presenting 175 persons. On one side of the Chamber hang new portraits of the King and Queen.

In the evening the Government will tender a dinner in the Macdonald Hotel, with Premier Aberhart and Mrs. Aberhart as host and hostess and guests numbering 175. Beautiful gold dinner service will be used for those at the head table.

DYNAMITE STICKS AND CAPS FOUND NEAR STATION ST.

Left Lying Beside Sidewalk by Workman Blasting Near Intersection

ALL CONFISCATED

Left abandoned to the wiles of mischievous children, four sticks of dynamite and seven dynamite caps were found lying along the sidewalk on a lot at the corner of Pinnacle and Station Sts., yesterday afternoon. A passerby saw the packages and notified the police following which it was discovered that the dynamite had been lying loose for some considerable time, having been forgotten by workmen.

The dynamite was being used by workmen who were blasting in the lot, where a gasoline station is to be erected. The blasting was necessary in order to excavate for the large gasoline drums to be placed on the property.

Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard confiscated the dynamite and caps, after finding them abandoned on the ground. Later it was stated to police the man in charge of the dynamiting had left for Toronto, apparently forgetting his explosives. "Fortunately these explosvies were seen before they fell into the hands of children, who might not realize the danger of dynamite," stated Chief Kidd today as he refused to give the dynamite to the owner of the gasoline station until the man responsible had returned from Toronto and gave accountings for his carelessness. The dynamite is being held by police.

POLICE COURT

Alfred Hamilton, Toronto photographer, was sentenced to serve one month in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today after being convicted of assaulting a 'teen-aged boy in a Moira Street residence, recently.

Hamilton admitted the offence in a statement and also told the court he had been convicted of a similar offence in Windsor five years ago. "I don't know what came over me to do such a thing," he assured the court. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated he had been informed the man was of a nervous temperament.

"This is a serious matter and I had intended sending this man to the Reformatory, but perhaps a month in the common jail and medical treatment will prove more to his advantage," stated the magistrate. In speaking to the crew manager of the accused, Mr. Donnan admonished the latter for suggesting he take a picture of the little boy to be assaulted.

"It was a rather foolish thing to do, especially when one of your men was being held for a serious charge of this nature," Mr. Donnan stated to the crew manager who sat in the body of court which was held in camera.

Two charges of obtaining money under false pretences, to wit: worthless cheques, were dismissed against R. M. Jacko, of the Trenton R.C.A.F.

Jacko had given two cheques to a local taxi concern and requested the taxi man to hold them until the Air Force pay day. "This is not a criminal offence, these cheques are in the form of a promissory note but I'd advise Jacko not to continue this practice in the future," revealed Crown Attorney Donnan, after it had been revealed that Jacko had been detailed to Ottawa for the royal visit and had not deposited the money to meet the cheques. Restitution having subsequently been made the case was dismissed.

A man and his wife, who reside near Moneymore and who were arrested on charges of intoxication in Belleville recently, today admitted their state of intoxication before the court and were assessed the convention ten and costs. They were given a fortnight in which to raise the fines.

Wooler Sunday School Holds a Get-Together

Seventieth Anniversary of Founding of S. S. Celebrated by Sunday Services and Field Day on Monday

Wooler, June 2 (Special)— The seventieth anniversary of the beginning of the Wooler Sunday School was held on Sunday, May 28th and Monday the 29th 1939.

It was indeed an important milestone in the history of the church, as well as in the religious life of the whole community, and as old friends and acquaintances together with past workers and associates were reunited in one great happy family, it was agreed by all that the occasion was all that could be expected.

Both services on Sunday were of special interest, one guest speaker being Dr. J. R. Watts of Queen's Theological College of Kingston. Dr. Watts being a very gifted speaker the messages were inspiring and helpful.

The Wooler choir gave fine singing in the morning service assisted by Miss Flora MacDonald. In the evening the choir was filled with former members who served in this capacity twenty to forty-five years ago. Dr. McQuade of Trenton a former member sang at this time. The attendance on Sunday was 110 former members and 296 home folk. This day will long be remembered as a great Spiritual Rally.

At eight o'clock all gathered in the church auditorium where a programme of singing and speeches was heard, also some forty letters from former members were read or made mention of. The old records were reviewed with interest and showed that seven men had served as Superintendents of this school since the organization in 1870. Their names were Peter MacPhail, T. R. Garratt, William Hall, S. H. McColl, W. W. Gould, W. C. Dorland and the present Superintendent, C. P. Wessel. Before closing the Superintendent was called to the platform and was presented with an address and a beautiful Bible as a remembrance of thirty years continuous service as Superintendent of Wooler Sunday School. Mrs. Wessel was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers after which Mr. Poulter closed with prayer.

His Intervention.

The Cardinals had come to pay homage to the Pontiff on his Saint's Day.

The Holy Father disclosed that his intervention took place "towards the beginning of last month" when "international dissensions" appeared "aggravated to the point of degenerating into bloody conflict".

He told the Cardinals that "this step met in general with the sympathy of the governments" and "we received assurances of good will and of the resolve to maintain the peace which was so much desired by the people."

ROYALTY TO GREET

The afternoon sightseeing tour planned for the King and Queen will have to be brief, so that they can get to the British Embassy garden party. They will not go to the latter, however, until all 1,350 guests—officials and private citizens such as Colonel Charles Lindbergh and Henry Ford—have gathered.

President's State Dinner.

The Dolly Madison china and the gold flatware will shine on a horseshoe table at the President's state dinner for their Majesties that night. Fewer than 100 guests will be present, but about 200 others will come in later to see folk-dancing and listen to folk-singing by Marian Anderson, contralto; Lawrence Tibbett, opera star; Kate Smith, singer; a negro chorus, and four girl musicians from Coon Creek, Ky. All the guests will be presented to their Majesties.

Some members of the Senate and House of Representatives are worrying about formal morning clothes for their presentation to the King and Queen in the capital rotunda Friday before their Majesties leave on the U.S.S. Potomac for lunch and sail to Mount Vernon. High officials say everyday business suits will be all right.

Arab Band Slays Railroad Patrol of 7

6 Arabs Killed as Buried Time Bombs Burst Near Jaffa Gate

Jerusalem, June 2.—(AP)—Thirteen persons were killed and scores injured today in Palestine disorders. Casualties included Britons, Jews and Arabs.

A railroad patrol of four British policemen and three Jews was wiped out by an Arab band near Kalkilieh, 35 miles northwest of Jerusalem. The outlaws seized a machine gun and other arms.

Six Arabs, including a policeman, were killed and a score injured when time bombs buried in the market place near Jerusalem's Jaffa Gate exploded as thousands of Arabs were making their daily food purchases.

SHARP PAINS SHOT THROUGH KNEES

Woman Suffered 10 Years

"Since coming here from England 10 years ago," writes a married woman, "I have suffered badly from rheumatic pains. I bought medicine, lotions, liniments, and have taken concoctions until I was tired spending my money. I heard of Kruschen Salts so often, that I thought one day I'd try that. By this time my knees were frequently full of terrible pains. I bought a bottle of Kruschen, and took a teaspoonful every morning. It had no effect. But my husband said 'Persevere! Give it a chance to act.' Well, I did and before long my knees were nearly normal. I kept on, and believe me I am not like the same woman. I walked four miles the other day and felt fine, whereas before I could hardly walk across the floor."—(Mrs.) E. A.

What more need be said about the relief that Kruschen Salts can bring to sufferers from the pains and stiffness of rheumatism?

Protests Haste

Hon. H. A. Stewart (Con. Leeds) acting opposition leader, rose to protest at the haste as the House was about to polish off the Supply Bill. He claimed the Government had been running a "three-ring circus" these last few days with the House and two major committees, public accounts and banking, all sitting simultaneously. With only a slim attendance in the House estimates had been flowing through with little debate.

Justice Minister Lapoint, acting Government leader, agreed much had been accomplished the last two or three weeks but controversial items had all been debated extensively. Most of the estimates passed yesterday, he said, were merely routine matters.

Estimates voted yesterday included remaining Labor and Public Works, Secretary of State, Finance and Justice Departments, none of which aroused any material debate. A. A. Heaps (C. C. F. Winnipeg North) and Denton Massey (Con. Toronto-Greenwood) both voiced appreciation of the efforts of Labor Minister Rogers in trying to cope with the unemployment situation but they drew the line at approving government policy in that regard.

QUEEN IS THRILLED

Although Jasper was a scheduled rest visit, their Majesties were most active. Untired by 6,000 miles of travelling, they motored 23 miles to Maligne Canyon before having lunch. They strolled around the canyon where they saw a mule deer and the King took pictures of a mother bear and her cub.

King's Own Films Shown.

After luncheon they were shown hundreds of yards of motion picture films the King has taken during the Canadian tour, and then they set out by motor for the Glacier of the Angels on Mount Edith Cavell. They walked several hundred yards to the ice, its narrow fissures revealing beautiful shades of blue and white.

There Nature tossed in a brief snowstorm to complete their Majesties' experience of Canadian weather. "Something we wanted but hadn't expected," said the King.

Queen Elizabeth wore a light grey suit with blue-grey blouse and off-the-face hat of matching shade and the King a grey tweed top coat and lounge suit of worsted grey when they arrived in Jasper. On the trip to Maligne Canyon, the Queen wore a light blue-grey woollen suit and the King a tweed jacket and grey flannels. They both wore heavy clothes for the glacier trip.

Enjoyed Splendor.

Throughout the day their Majesties enjoyed the splendor of Jasper's towering mountains and the chill invigorating air. Jasper lies at an altitude of only 3,250 feet but mountains surrounding the quaint little village tower 10,000 feet and more.

After dinner, evening was spent quietly. While their Majesties sat alone, William Glass, gardener at the Lodge, shyly stepped to the cabin door and knocked. He appeared at Royal command and it was the Queen who opened the door. They talked for more than 15 minutes about flowers, the Queen showing an almost professional knowledge of all varieties.

A Cheery Smile.

The Royal couple had a cheery smile and greeting for all they met on their informal visit. Their cabin virtually was unguarded but guests respected their wishes to be left alone. The Queen was greatly impressed because she and the King could be alone in outlook cabin and still have hotel service. The cabin is self-contained and the Queen had many questions to ask about the kitchen.

They slept last night in snug bedrooms. The master bedroom, occupied by the King, is finished in blue with antique parchment shades. The Queen's bedroom is finished in pink with matching carpet, spreads and draperies.

Their Majesties seemed to enjoy the chill mountain air and appeared energetic after the day of rest and ready to resume their travels.

ANXIETY

By JAMES RESTON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Birkenhead, England, June 2 (AP)—Strapped in oxygen rescue masks, four of 87 men trapped in the partially submerged British submarine Thetis escaped safely this morning to the sun-flecked surface of the Irish Sea.

While the Thetis lay with her nose in the mud and her great, fin-like rudder glinting above the surface, Admiralty workmen scrambled up her slippery slopes and considered cutting off her tail with acetylene torches to expedite the rescue of the others aboard.

One way or another, Admiralty officials were confident all would be saved, and until a decision was reached about attempting a mass rescue, officers and men were ordered to escape two at a time in their oxygen masks—the Davis "lung" device.

Placed at 87

The number of men trapped in the submarine was placed at 87 this afternoon when Cammell Laird, Limited, the builders, issued a list of its men aboard.

It gave a total of 26 company men, instead of 20 as in earlier reports. In addition there were 58 officers and men of the crew, a pilot and two members of the Liverpool City Catering Staff.

By mid-afternoon there were no reports of rescues beyond the escape of four men from the submarine in the morning.

Sighted Early Today

The destroyer Brazen first sighted the Thetis' stern at 8.20 a.m. (3.20 a.m. E.D.T.) far out in Liverpool Bay and soon small, fat-bellied boats let down from a ring of warships bobbed around the big gray tail. Experts clambered up her sides and tapped out reassuring messages to the men below.

First to reach the surface were Captain H.P.K. Oram, commander of the fifth British submarine Flotilla, and Lieutenant H. G. Woods. They had climbed a steel ladder into the submarine's aft air lock and fastened on their Davis "lungs" waiting for equalization of pressure which would permit them to escape.

The "lung" apparatus looks something like a gas mask. Thick goggles cover the wearer's eyes, pincers close his nose and a wide covering fits over the mouth with a tube carrying oxygen from a container strapped to the man's chest.

Indicated by Bubbles

Messages tapped through the submarine's thick walls told Oram and Wood when to quit the escape chamber. Their position was indicated by a burst of bubbles on the surface. Both ascended safely and were taken aboard the destroyer Brazen.

An hour or so later Chief Stoker Arnold and F. Shaw, a member of the crew, came to the surface in the same way.

The slowness of getting men out by the Davis escape method led the Admiralty to consider cutting through the exposed tail of the submarine.

It was estimated there was a sufficient air supply in the submarine to last until tomorrow morning.

18 Feet Above Water

Eighteen feet of the 265-foot submarine were above water, but both of the escape hatches—one fore and one aft—were under sea. The hatch in the stern, nearest the surface, was being used for escape.

The Thetis left Birkenhead and submerged in Liverpool Bay at 1.40 p.m. yesterday for a test before being accepted from the builders, Cammell Laird Ltd. She did not come to the surface on schedule three hours later, and search was started by 25 warships, Royal Air Force planes, salvage vessels and two submarines.

The destroyer Brazen came upon the stern part above water this morning 18½ hours after the dive started, and shortly afterward the Admiralty announced that, "The crew are at present safe," that there was "every hope of getting them all out" by the lung device, and salvage equipment was being sent to the spot.

In 130 Feet of Water

This was about 14 miles northwest of Great Ormes Head, a Welsh promontory not far from where the craft dived. The Thetis was in 130 feet of water.

An official of the Mersey Docks and Harbor Board said the "work of rescue continues, and there is a good prospect of salvaging the submarine."

The Admiralty's announcement that the Thetis was found was made about 8.20 a.m. (3.20 a.m. E.D.T.). This was followed by statements from both the builders and from the Admiralty that the men were safe.

Reports that the craft had been found brought a great rush of relatives to the little office of the builders in Birkenhead. The employee in charge shook his head and said "No news." Then he made several telephone calls in quick succession.

Suddenly he wheeled around, dropped the telephone receiver and cried, "Yes, she has been located, 14 miles from Great Ormes Head, and everyone on board is quite safe."

White-faced women staggered back against the wall, faint with joy.

"My little boy has been asking for his daddy all the time," said the wife of one seaman.

"My God! That's good news," said one Cammell Laird official.

No Indication as to Cause

There was no indication as to the cause of the trouble which befell the Thetis. Glistening in the warm sun she cast off at high tide Thursday morning from the dock of her builders at Birkenhead.

Accompanied by a tug she cruised on the surface past the bar lightship at the mouth of the channel and made for Point Lynas, Anglesey, about 30 miles west of the mouth of the Mersey. She dived at 1.40 p.m. She was not due to come up until nearly 5 p.m., and when she did not reappear, the tug's crew advised the Admiralty.

Swiftly the search started the length of Wales' shelf-like northern coast and north as far as Southport. In Weymouth, Portsmouth and other ports men ashore were called to warships and submarines by notices on movie screens, bulletin boards, telephone and semaphore.

Weymouth cinema audiences saw this notice flashed before them: "Service Notice S.O.S.: All ratings of first anti-submarine Flotilla and sixth destroyer Flotilla must return to their ships immediately."

Grim Parallels

Grim parallels exist between the Thetis and the United States submersible Squalus, still on the ocean floor off Portsmouth, N.H., with 26 dead.

The ships were commissioned within four days of each other—the Thetis on March 4, the Squalus on March 1. Both were on test trials.

The Thetis was the smaller ship. She is of 1,095-ton displacement, 265 feet long and cost $1,638,000. The Squalus is 1,450 tons, 290 feet and cost $4,000,000.

Both carried escape equipment—including signals to display to surface craft when in trouble, escape hatches and apparatus to supply oxygen to occupants while rising to the surface from the escape hatch.

The British Navy, however, is not equipped with the diving bell such as used to rescue 33 of the Squalus personnel.

All hands aboard the Thetis are equipped with the Davis escape apparatus—similar to the Momsen "lung" used by United States submarines.

"No more steel tombs—save yourselves," was the admonition given the Royal Navy in 1934 when the David apparatus was issued to underseas vessels.

Quite Interested

Portsmouth, N.H., June 2 (AP)—Officers and men laboring at the task of salvaging the sunken United States submarine Squalus and its crew of 26 dead followed with interest today news of the sinking of the British submersible Thetis in the Irish Sea.

Officers at the navy yard, including Lieut. O. F. Naquin, commander of the Squalus when she sank May 23, ducked in and out of the press headquarters set up during the Squalus' disaster to learn the latest developments. There was no comment from any of them, however.

Birkenhead, England, June 2 (CP)—Mrs. H. G. Bolus, wife of the captain of the disabled submarine Thetis, gave a remarkable demonstration today of the stoicism associated with the term "sailor's wife".

Mrs. Bolus came to the Cammell, Laird Shipbuilders' offices here where relatives and friends of men trapped in the Thetis were waiting for news. They had kept vigil there for hours.

Persuaded To Go Home

Mrs. Bolus went from one to another, consoling them and in the end persuading them to return to their homes in the certain knowledge that everything possible was being done for the men. She took some of them to their homes in her own car. It was dawn when she finally returned to her own home to await news of her husband.

"I have rarely seen a more splendid action," said an official.

First news that Captain H.P.K. Oram was safe was conveyed to his wife in Cosham, Hampshire, by a Press Association reporter. "Naturally anxiety has been great and I am very relieved at the news," she said. "What about everyone else?" When told that all aboard were believed to be safe, she added "It is wonderful news indeed."

RESCUE OF 98 IN SUB OFFICIALLY ABANDONED

24 Battleships Ordered at Once by United States Navy

Japan's Sea Power Said to be Leading In Total of Ships

$350,000,000 Order, Given by United States, is Largest Since World War

QUESTION OF RATIO

Mounting Naval Strength of Japan Said to Have Caused Official Concern in United States

Washington, June 3—(AP)—The United State navy's action in ordering 24 warships at once, aimed at lopping months off the time required to build them, appeared today to reflect official concern over Japan's mounting sea power.

'Announcing the $350,000,000 order—the largest since the Great War—Assistant Secretary Charles Edison expressed belief Japan already had shortened to about 5 to 4 the 5 to 3 margin of United States superiority in total tonnage, which was established by now defunct treaties.

"Even with our 10-year building program we won't be able to restore the treaty 5-5-3 ratio in all categories and total tonnage," he predicted. "Japan and Great Britain were building ships in the year when we were idle."

10-Year Program

The 10-year building program was laid out by the $1,000,000,000 fleet expansion bill which the United States Congress approved last year, authorizing a 20 per cent increase in tonnage.

In the number of combatant ships in full commission or fully manned, Japan leads both the United States and Great Britain, Congress heard recently Admiral William Leahy, chief of operations. On Jan. 1, Japan had 223 warcraft in service, compared with 199 American and 204 British, he said.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Lightning! How thick is a lightning stroke? It is very difficult to determine this from effects of the stroke on the earth. But it has been satisfactorily measured by a moving camera that separated the stroke images. The most difficult requirement is that the picture must be taken fairly close to the flash. This was done at Johannesburg, South Africa. The observer was stunned, the flash being only between 700 and 900 feet away. The average diameter of the strokes was 6.4 inches, varying between 4.4 inches and 9.2 inches.

FALSE IN DETAIL SAYS LAFLECHE OF DREW ARTICLE

'More Vicious is the Falsehood That Comes Out of it in Innuendo' Says Witness

NOT TOLD HOW TO ACT

Ottawa, June 3 (CP)—Whether the parliamentary inquiry into the Bren Gun contract between the National Defence Department and John Inglis Company, Limited, Toronto, is to die with prorogation or whether a means will be found to continue it, was the question uppermost as the Public Accounts Committee resumed today.

The inquiry, which followed a Royal Commission investigation started by a Maclean's Magazine article last September by Col. Geo. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, has been running for weeks, and last night Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) said not half the witnesses the opposition wanted called had been heard.

Gerald McGreer (Lib. Vancouver Burrard) found no support either from Chairman William Fraser (Lib. Northumberland) nor from Conservative and C.C.F. members that interim reports, majority and minority if necessry, should be made in regard to the accusations made by Col. Drew against General L. R. LaFleche, Deputy Defence Minister.

Earlier Mr. McGreer suggested the suspension of General LaFleche might be necessary if no finding were returned. But in the light of General LaFleche's evidence yesterday, Mr. McGreer said he wished to make it clear there was no justification for suspension.

"False in Every Detail

"False in detail and even more vicious is the falsehood that comes out of it in innuendo," was how General LaFleche described the Drew article, "Canada's Armament Mystery."

Columbia University Retains Crown As One of Its Heraldic Symbols

By LEON EDEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, June 3—(CP)—When King George and Queen Elizabeth visit Columbia University on Morningside Heights next week they will set foot inside a college which despite 155 years of allegiance to the Stars and Stripes has retained a crown as one of its heraldic symbols.

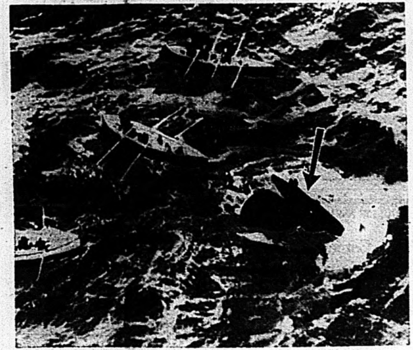
Atop the flagpole at the University, which in the days when New York was a province of Great Britain was called King's College, is set a substantial-looking gold-painted crown, and a crown is traced in white against the blue background of Columbia's flag.

It is a replica of the iron crown which was set on top of the weathervane of the first King's College building at Park Place where New York's veteran skyscraper, the Woolworth building, now casts its shadow.

The crown, one of Columbia's treasures, will be shown to the King and Queen by President Nicholas Murray Butler during their 15-minute visit to the university June 10. With this relic they will see the lengthy document by which King George 11 on Oct. 31, 1754, granted King's College a charter creating "a body politick and corporate, in deeds act and name" and appointing the college "for the Instruction and Education of youth in the Learned Languages and Liberal Arts and Sciences."

Columbia University uses the crown design as a watermark for its official stationary and the Royal symbol figures likewise in the colophon printed on the title pages of books published by the Columbia University press.

RESCUERS APPROACH TRAPPED SUBMARINE THETIS IN IRISH SEA



The stern of the British submarine Thetis (TOP) can be seen protruding above the surface of the Irish Sea, lower right. All but 18 feet of its 265-foot length slants sharply towards the bottom where its nose is caught in the mud. Aboard when it went down were 90 men, but four of these bobbed to the surface by means of the Davis "lung" escape apparatus. Authorities say all will be rescued. Naval men working swiftly for their release can be seen approaching in small boats.

A British sailor is shown demonstrating the Davis "Third Lung" device (BOTTOM) by which four members of the crew of the submarine Thetis were able to reach the surface in safety after the submarine struck a mud bank during a practice dive in the Irish Sea. Fears were expressed for the safety of the remaining 86 persons aboard the ill-fated Thetis.

Royal Visit to Edmonton Packed With Enthusiasm And Loyalty for Monarchs

By SAM G. ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, June 3 (CP)—Thrilled by the Northwest's rousing welcome and the sight of Portage Avenue with its crowded bleachers, King George and Queen Elizabeth moved today to Saskatoon in the blue and silver royal train.

Their Majesties were kept busy from the time they alighted from the train here yesterday to start the 12-mile royal procession through the city until they left at night after driving from a government dinner through crowd-packed streets.

Historic Scene

The historic scene on Portage Avenue, 2¼ mile stretch of pavement without a building on either side, its bleachers packed with 68,000 men, women and children on either side, brought the Queen's last comment before boarding the train.

"I never saw anything like Portage Avenue before in my life," she said to Mrs. P. W. Abbott, wife of the chairman of the royal visit committee.

"Are you responsible for Portage Avenue decorations?" the Queen asked Mr. Abbott. He smiled and answered, "possibly yes."

"It has made us very very happy," said the King. "Thank you very much for all you have done. It was a splendid sight."

Edmonton, farthest-north city visited on the tour and seat of Alberta's Social Credit Government, went wild with excitement.

From the time Premier Aberhart extended the province's greetings until he waved farewell the day was spirited, active and loud in expression of loyalty.

The Ontario Intelligencer is publishing today, on page 12, a questionnaire designed to provide information about the purchasing habits of the Canadian people: information which will be of value to consumers and manufacturers alike.

It will help Canadian industries in their efforts to establish and maintain a more even distribution of employment and production. This in itself should do much toward encouraging the establishment of new industries and the expansion of present operations.

Thus every reader who completes this questionnaire will be helping to perform a public service, and in addition will have an opportunity to win one of the many cash prizes.

Beyond this, each will be assisting industry accurately to appraise the potentialities of the Canadian market.

The Ontario Intelligencer, realizing the significance of this survey, hopes its readers will co-operate gladly by sending in their completed questionnaires as promptly as possible.

Earl Lawson, M.P. for York west told the meeting about Canada's problems of unemployment, taxes and agricultural prices were due to lack of leadership and misdirection by the government.

Stern Inquiry, Rigorous Judgment In Thetis Disaster Asked by Press

London, June 3 (CP)—Demands for a "stern inquiry and rigorous judgment" concerning the Thetis submarine disaster and the probable death of 97 seamen, officers and civilians were voiced today in the British press.

The question asked most frequently was: Why was the Thetis allowed to go on a test run unaccompanied by a "mother ship?"

The Daily Mail said: "At a later date there are many questions which must be answered. The nation will want to know: Why the Thetis crashed; why she was allowed to do her tests in a bay notorious for sunken wreckage; why no escort vessel was attached to this new type submarine during the perils of early diving trials; why she was allowed to be lost for over 15 hours These matters await a stern inquiry and a rigorous judgment. For the present the only criticism holds a voice muted in an overwhelming sense of loss."

The Daily Telegraph referred to the diving bell used in rescue work on the United States submarine Squalus, which went down off Portsmouth, N.H., May 23, with 26 lost and 33 saved, the latter by means of the diving bell.

"It is pardonable to wonder whether such apparatus would have been of service in the case of the Thetis." The Daily Telegraph said editorially. "But its efficacy depends on conditions which are not present in Liverpool Bay. That is a fact beyond doubt and well to remember at such a moment"

The Daily Sketch also asked whether a diving bell might have been used and concluded, "but these are matters for experts who may decide that the circumstances were by no means parallel . . ."

The Daily Mail and The Daily Herald made much of the point that the Thetis should never have been allowed to take the trip alone.

"Submarines do not go on trials every day, and it should not therefore be difficult to have them attended by vessels able to render the most prompt and complete assistance in case of mishap," said The Herald.

The Express and Mirror both were amazed that the hull was above the surface and yet no one was saved except four men escaping with the Davis lung apparatus.

Men Probably Died From Chlorine Gas In Submerged Sub

Defeat for the Rescuers Means Heaviest Loss in Life in History in an Undersea Craft

NO TAPPINGS HEARD

Hope Slightly Raised by Reports Dashed When Seaman Explains What Might Have Been Cause of Noise

London, June 3—(CP)—The Admiralty officially abandoned hope for the men aboard the submarine Thetis at 4:30 p.m. (11:30 a.m. EDT) today.

The Admiralty issued the following statement:—

"The Admiralty regret that there is now no longer justification for hope that any further lives can be saved from the Thetis. Salvage work proceeds."

Birkenhead, England, June 3 (CP) —Hope of rescuing any of the 87 men in the wrecked submarine Thetis was officially abandoned today at the offices of Cammell Laird Limited, which built the vessel, and it was stated the men probably had died from chlorine gas.

Defeat for the rescuers meant the heaviest loss of life in history in an undersea craft.

An official of Cammell Laird announced shortly after 3 p.m. (10 a.m. E.D.T.):

"We have now no hope of saving further lives

"We consider that the men died from chlorine gas. The ship carried a large quantity of chlorine which we think would have escaped owing to the angle at which she laid."

Seaman Discounts

Hope of averting the world's greatest undersea disaster—slightly raised by reports that tappings had been heard coming from the sunken hull at 2 a.m. (8.30 p.m. E.D.T. Friday)—were dashed again when a seaman, who had been on hand when four members of the crew escaped with Davis "lungs" discounted significance of the sounds.

"I don't think that the 2 a.m. tappings can have been made by any of the men inside the submarine," he said. "It is more likely that the noises were caused by spanners and other tools rattling inside the ship.

Probably all Unconscious

"The men probably were all unconscious by that time and if they weren't, they would be too weak to make any intelligent signals."

The number trapped in the craft was raised to 97 when the British Admiralty disclosed seven civilian technicians not previously listed were aboard for the trial run.

The wife of F. Shaw, one of the four men who escaped, quoted him as saying that even when he left the submarine yesterday the air was foul "and getting dreadful."

An Admiralty spokesman who came ashore at 10 a.m. (5 a.m. E.D.T.) maintained a glimmer—and only a glimmer—of hope existed for the hardiest of the 97 men, but acknowledged he was without specific advices of what progress was made in the big rescue effort.

DUNNING DEFENDS DEPUTY MINISTER IN PARLIAMENT

Tells House Government Has Complete Confidence in Dr. W. C. Clark

PROROGATION NEAR

Ottawa, June 3 (CP)—Parliament today is on the verge of prorogation after a five-months session—but no one can be certain the final ceremonies actually will take place today until they are under way.

The House of Commons is waiting to see what changes the Senate will make in the Central Mortgage Bank Bill, which finally got its third reading in the Commons yesterday. The House is prepared to dispose in quick time of those expected amendments and the Senate changes in the Salt Fish Board Bill this afternoon when both Houses are scheduled to reconvene.

Whether extended debate would develop on the amendments in either case, only time could tell, but Government officials optimistically prepared for the traditional prorogation ceremonies with Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff taking the place of the absent Governor-General.

Sharp Clashes

Debate on the Mortgage Bank Bill yesterday provided two sharp clashes between J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) and Finance Minister Dunning, the dispute apparently centring around Mr. Pouliot's blunt reference to the fitness of Dr. W. C. Clark for his post of Deputy Minister of Finance. Mr. Dunning asserted Dr. Clark had the complete confidence of the entire Government, all of whom were familiar with his detailed record. He accused Mr. Pouliot of "vilely slandering" his deputy.

FIREMEN UNABLE TO RELEASE KITTEN

City firemen were summoned to release a cat which was lodged in a tall tree on John Street last evening. As the firemen raised their long ladders in order to reach the feline, the kitty apparently became frightened and scampered higher into the small branches of the tall tree with the result it was impossible to reach it and release the cat. After many futile attempts to reach the animal the firemen abandoned their efforts. Children throwing stones at the kitten frightened it into the tree in the first instance, city firemen were informed. Early today the cat had reached lower branches in the tree, but still refused to come down out of its perch, despite the efforts of kindly neighbors.

CONSIDERABLE SMOKE FROM BURNING MOTOR

When the motor of a refrigeration plant at Black's meat store, Bridge Street, burned out last night considerable smoke was seen emanating from the building. The city fire department hastened to the scene shortly after 1.30 a.m. today and rapidly extinguished the burning motor with little difficulty. Considerable smoke filled the premises, however, but as all perishable goods had been secured inside the refrigeration plant, no damage resulted to these goods, the fire department was informed today.

IMPROVED HARBOR WALL TO BE BUILT ON VICTORIA PARK

In order to accommodate visiting craft which annually enter Belleville harbor from many points on the Great Lakes on the Canadian and United States sides, a more permanent harbor wall will be erected on the east and south sides of Victoria Park by the Belleville Parks Commission with the assistance of city council. Work is expected to be started on this project next week.

The new wall will replace the present badly rotted timbers which have been torn loose in many places.

CROAKING BULLFROGS ANNOY RESIDENTS

A new problem has arisen to plague residents of Coleman Street on the west bank of the Moira River above the upper bridge. This year, according to reports, there has been an exceptional crop of healthy, active bullfrogs which have madeir ht have made their homes in the miniature bits of marsh at the river's edge along this location. Their deep, bellowing love serenades at night have been so loud that official complaints with requests for the city to do something about it" have been registered.

LIGHTNING STRIKES BARN, KILLS TEAM

Farmer and Two Men, Also in Barn at Time, Escape Injury

BUILDING DESTROYED

A narrow escape from serious injury or death was experienced by E. R. Ireland, and two of his hired men during a brief but severe electrical storm which visited Brighton district on Thursday evening.

The three men working in the large barn on the Ireland farm near Brighton had just left the building when a bolt of lightning hit the structure killing a valuable team of horses and setting fire to the place.

In spite of the assistance of many volunteer firemen of the district and motorists who were passing by, the barn was completely destroyed, together with a large crop of hay and feed grain.

Cutting Hole In Sunken Sub Not Practicable

Birkenhead, June 3 (CP)—A semi-official explanation issued today said rescue workers considered cutting a hole in the stern of the sunken submarine Thetis during the many hours it was exposed yesterday "but this was not found practicable".

Only a tiny compartment was in that part of the stern exposed, the statement said, and if a hole had been cut and a water tight manhole inserted, it woul dhave taken "some time".

"Then the trapped men, many of whom by that time must have been in a weakened condition, would have had to climb up a steel incline and be dragged through the hole cut out of the compartment," the statement added. "The tide allowed an hour or two for this work and it was not possible in the time.

"An airline was ready in a rescue ship but the operation of cutting even a small hole in the stern and welding this line into it so that fresh air could be pumped to the men on board also would have taken longer than tidal conditions allowed."

PRICES ARE FIRM ON SMALL MARKET

Poultry Offering Slim With Prices 65c to $1.50 for Spring Chickens

Dropping to the lowest level on record last week when it was offered in large quantities at three bunches for ten cents, asparagus prices maintained a little stronger tone on the city market today with half-pound bunches selling at 5c each. In some quarters it was available at six bunches for 25c, but generally vendors refused to drop to the prices that featured the market a week ago.

The vegetables was plentiful and business was brisk during the early hours with Saturday morning shoppers having a large variety to choose from.

The market generally was dull for this time of the year, with a smaller than usual display of farm and garden produce offered. Prices however, were fairly firm with little or no changes being noted from last week's levels.

New Spring vegetables, flowering plants, with a sprinkling of winter produce provided the main features while the dairy offering was slight, as was the chicken display.

Egg prices were steady with extra "A" selects quoted at 22c per dozen. Slightly inferior qualities were offered at 21c with a fair display of "mediums" going at 19c and 20c per dozen.

Broiler chickens headed a weaker-than-usual fowl offering with prices ranging from $1.25 for choice weighty birds to 65c per pair for smaller birds. Three-months'-old chickens were quoted at $1.25 per pair, although in some quarters quotations ranged as high as $1.50. Fowl was scarce with fairly good quality chickens offered at from 55c each.

Spring Vegetables In Demand.

Spring vegetable lovers had a wide variety to choose from at prices that were attractive. Onions, fresh from the gardens of the district were in fair demand and sold at 5 cents per bunch. Radishes, lettuce and watercress, the latter offered by two youthful vendors, were in popular demand and sold in bunch lots at five cents. Rhubarb in generous bunches sold easily at the same price.

Flowering plants and vegetable shoots added a colorful touch to the market in general. Cabbage and cauliflower as well as onion shoots were offered at 40 cents per flat with tomato plant prices noting a decrease from 75 cents of a week ago to 40 and 50 cents per large flat today.

Flowers Plentiful.

Zinnias and petunias were quoted at 15 cents per small box with brilliantly colored pansies, the majority of them in full bloom, demanding 20 cents for the same amount.

Winter vegetables slowly disappearing from the market were scarce with parsnips, carrots and beets quoted at 40 cents the bushel. Potatoes were as plentiful as they were last week with vendors offering choice stocks at $1.35 per 90-pound bag.

Fresh whitefish and lake trout were available in good quantities with prices steady at 30 cents per pound, or in case you wanted it filleted, a few cents extra. Panfish were offered at six for 25 cents with a few pike quoted at 10 cents the poung.

Young pigs were as plentiful as ever with few buyers taking advantage of the prices quoted at between five and six dollars each.

ALLEGED THIEVES HELD IN MONTREAL

John Duncan and Harry Switzer Also Wanted in Scotland, Ontario

Montreal police today notified Belleville authorities that the two men alleged to have stolen Edgar Rutherford's automobile on May 25th last were John Duncan and Harry Switzer, both of Western Ontario. The two car thieves are being held by Montreal police for the authorities at Scotland, Ont., a small village near Brantford.

According to the Montreal authorities Duncan and Switzer are alleged to have stolen a motor car at Scotland before taking Mr. Rutherford's automobile from his private garage. Sergeant Arthur Harman was also informed the heater and spare tire of Mr. Rutherford's car had been sold by Duncan and Switzer in exchange for gasoline and oil enroute to Montreal. The men will face the Scotland charges before being brought to Belleville, while Mr. Rutherford's car will be returned to him by the insurance company with which he does business.

THREE ONE-ACT PLAYS PRESENTED AT COLLEGE

Students of Dramatic Department of Albert College Show Marked Acting Ability in Widely Differing Short Dramas

In a day when the value of the drama is more and more understood as entertainment, as a social force bringing people of all ranks together, as a means of satisfying an insatiable appetite planted by nature in the human soul for knowledge of how others live and move and have their being in this complicated world of society, as a study in the vast range of motives of men and women in all ages and races, and as a means of acting out theories of society and life, the colleges and schools have not been slow to be associated with this powerful agency. Every child is a born imitator and actor; one has only to watch his or her play to see that fact, or the mimicking and pantomime and little dramas imitative of adult life which children present. So the institutions of learning have taken this art and have helped to develop the sense of drama very highly among all ranks and classes of society. In this of course has been associated the moving picture, which has in some measure supplanted the stage performance. It is here that the college is helping to maintain the acted drama and to extend public understanding of the essence of the play.

Albert College this year has made its dramatic contribution most successfully. Three one-act plays of very different types, one a fairy story in a modern setting but with a fairy queen, an elf and a fairy; the second, a farce study of the revolt of a grandmother against modernism in which the effort of her daughter to cultivate the modern art in her home, proves a failure; and the third, a tragic story of Cavalier and Roundhead times, in which is told a gripping tale of a young soldier who finally receives strength to "play the man" even unto death, were played in the Memorial Hall last evening before a large and thrilled audience of students and citizens. These plays under the direction of Miss Jessie Tuite, in charge of dramatics at the college, were presented by students of Albert Conservatory and resident students of the college.

"The Fairy Gifts"

The younger pupils were the first to appear in "The Fairy Gifts." It was the old story in a new and intriguing dress—with fairy gifts of wealth, beauty and the power to desirable happiness. Those who choose beauty will find they are losers, while the one who chooses the power to make others happy is able to save the others.

The young players spoke their lines clearly, showed distinct ability in acting and succeeded under the fine direction of Miss Tuite in making the lesson clear to everyone in the rise and flow of the plot. It was an interesting story, true to life in its elements.

The parts and the young actors in this play were:—

Titania	Mary Lu Lazier
Elf	Hugh Cameron
Mopee	Ann Marie McCullough
Cynthia	Phyllis Trusdale
Violet	Helen Welsh
Vera	Aileen Cameron
Rupert	Philip Flagler
Brian	Roderick Cameron

"The Revolt of Gram"

The second playlet, "The Revolt of Gram" broke through the limits of comedy and became a moving satirical farce through the fine acting which was brought into play. Miss Mildred Lloyd as Agnes had the role of the housewife who made her home over in the modern manner with a lack of comfort so that as one of the characters said, the room in which the play was set looked like a verandah with modernistic styles and colorings, while the old furniture was reposing in the attic or the basement. Miss Helen Sulman as 'Gram' or the grandmother had the most important of the roles as she reacted to the new settings and decorations. The situation was prolific of a thousand laughs the clever shafts which were shot at the impressionist and modern styles of decoration and art. Anne LaRue made a very fine impression as Cynthia, as did Audrey Alyea as Minnie, Mary Lu Lazier as Susan, Isabel Sharpe as Mamie, Theda Cole as Lizzie and Kathleen Morrison as Etta. Miss Lloyd has the very difficult role of the woman who is constantly being attracted by everything new. The audience was kept in an uproar of laughter throughout the progress of the play as Gram proceeded to upset the carefully planned new order of things. Miss Sulman played this part with a great deal of realism.

"Allison's Lad"

"Allison's Lad," a story of 1648 in an inn where Cavaliers were held prisoner, was last put on. In the subdued light of a few candles adroitly placed, the scene made a very fine replica of an inn in the days of the English Civil War. Though the scene opens quietly this very calm suggests tragedy. The men are prisoners of the Cromwell forces and are playing at a table while near the fireplace is sitting the wounded Colonel Strickland of the Cavalier party. N. A. Beach played the part of the elderly officer with fine sense of the situations which developed. His lines were spoken thoroughly in character and were impressively done. It fell to Col. Strickland to make the irresistible appeal to Tom Winwood, a gentleman volunteer, who had broken his pledge to the Cromwellians, when once a captive, not to engage in further fighting on the offer of his freedom. Winwood and two others who had broken their promise to the Cromwell army officers had been taken and were faced by Col. Drummond of the Parliamentary forces. Two would be allowed to go, the other would die, said Drummond, and a shake of the dice would decide who would be the ill-fated one. Winwood drew the small number. Then began the battle in the soul of the young man between life and death in the dark of night. Fred Beatty playing this part was very successful. The struggle of Col. Strickland to make the young soldier face his death heroically, not like his father but as his mother would have him die, as "Allison's Lad" was dramatic in the extreme and his triumph as Tom Winwood stood erect, accepted the challenge and went out to face his death, saw the curtain descend. The other roles were also well taken. The roles and players were:

Col. Strickland (of Cavalier Party)	N. A. Beach
Capt. Bowyer (of Cavalier Party)	Edward Burley
Lieut. Goring (of Cavalier Party)	Wm. Freeman
Lieut. Hopton (Gentleman Volunteer)	Vernon Lougheed
Tom Winwood (Gentleman Volunteer)	Fred Beatty
Col. Drummond (of Cromwell's Army	Ernest Suter

The work of Ralph Musgrove and his assistants in the staging of the plays was excellent.

Interludes between the plays were provided by the students of the vocal department. These numbers which were all vocal, were very well done. They were:

Song—The Magic Month of May (Newton)—Phyllis May.

Song—The Yeoman of England (German)—Bill Brennan.

Song—Asleep in the Deep (Petrie)—Jack Crank.

Song—Du bist wie eine Blume (Smith)—Harry Atkinson.

Small Monkey Enjoys Sweet Freedom for Short Time

One of Animals Riding Small Racing Cars at Sims Shows Gets Away During Afternoon

MATE USED AS DECOY

It's a pretty tough grind driving one of those miniature autos around the track day after day. It soon gets to be monotonous and any change at all is welcome.

These thoughts must have been running through the mind of "Bobby", star monkey driver of the automobile races at Sims' Greater Shows yesterday, for no sooner had his mistress loosened the chain around Robert's neck than he was gone.

The halloo echoed around the Cricket Field. "Monkey lost". Children and grownups instituted a search while a worried mistress hurriedly organized searching parties from the personnel of the show.

One, two, three, four and even five hours passed, and no sign of "Bobby". The race was run periodically, but without its star performer.

Now the scene changes. A few hundred yards away from the cricket field, C.P.R. employees were working in one of the large coal-sheds. Conversation was ordinary and the men worked enjoying the fine warm afternoon.

Then one rubbed his eyes.

"Bill," he gasped, "do you see what I see?"

"Where?" queried his companion.

"Up there,' pointing to a large pile of coal.

His componion blinked. "That's a monkey or I'm a Dutchman's uncle," be said.

Sitting On Coal Pile.

Both men stared. Filmed with a fine coating of coal dust, "Bobby" sat balanced on three large pieces of coal enjoying himself.

Word was sent to Mr. Fred Sims, owner of the shows. The trainer of the monkeys arrived shortly after, but all the cajolery and enticement in the world failed to bring "Bobby" down from his perch.

Then the trainer had an idea. "Wait here a minute," he said. A few minutes later she returned holding in her arms "Babe", a female monkey and special girl friend of "Bobby".

Her mistress held her high. Bright eyes swept over the coal pile finally resting on the blackened form of the star auto driver of the shows.

A signal of joy emanated from "Babe's" mouth. She struggled in the arms of her trainer. High on the coal pile "Bobby" suddenly came to life. His bright eyes grew brighter. Then with a leap (it only took a minute) he hopped down from his perch high on the coal pile and with a squeal of joy jumped into the arms of his mistress and snuggled close to "Babe".

A few minutes later a very tired "Bobby" was again at the wheel of his favorite miniature auto, wheeling around the track to the delight of a large crowd of grownups and kiddies.

Police Blotter

As he stepped from the Hastings County jail, after serving a month's sentence on a conviction of theft, John McMurray, transient, was today re-arrested on a warrant issued by the Kingston police. McMurray was arrested by the city police and held in custody pending the arrival of Kingston police. The accused is charged with the theft of a valuable fur coat at Kingston, Chief Kidd revealed. McMurray was convicted of the theft of a windbreaker in the local police court and given a month's sentence here. His jail term terminated today, but was followed by his being arrested on the Kingston warrant.

Believed to have been the work of mischievous boys, the basement of the premises of the Belleville Yacht Club was entered some time last night and several bottles of soft drinks reported missing. A chain and padlock fastening the basement door, were forced.

Arthur Johns, tinsmith at the Smith Hardware Company, reported the theft of a valuable set of pipe dies, taken from the company premises some time during the past fortnight. Sergeant Arthur Booth investigated but when informed the set of dies had not been seen or used by the hardware employees since early in May, the Sergeant immediately turned his investigations toward junk shops, but without results.

City police were informed to warn the public against transacting business with two men who are travelling around Ontario representing themselves as bonafide rug and expensive carpet peddlers.

CHARGE IS LAID AFTER ACCIDENT

Alex C. Carrick Faces Criminal Negligence Charge in Man's Death

Toronto, June 2—(CP)— Joseph Simosky, 72, Milton, one of six persons injured in a two-car crash three miles west of here yesterday, died in hospital early today. A charge of criminal negligence was laid last night against Alex C. Carrick, Toronto broker and former University of Toronto football star, driver of one of the cars.

Simosky, most seriously injured when Carrick's car collided with one driven by Harry Rotenberg, Milton, suffered scalp wounds from flying pieces of glass which required 64 stitches to close.

Carrick suffered a fractured collarbone and head cuts. Dr. Malcolm Harley, Hamilton, only other occupant of Carrick's car suffered a fractured leg and extensive forehead cuts.

The others, passengers in Rotenbergs' machine, were released from hospital yesterday.

Ace of Gardeners Chats With King And Queen in Cabin

Jasper Park Lodge, Alta, June 2—(CP)—A tall, shy Scotsman trembled for a moment, then knocked at the door of a cabin here last night and found the King and Queen at home.

Ace of gardeners for Canadian National Hotels across Canada, William Glass had been summoned by Their Majesties to drop in for a chat while they were in this mountain resort.

The King and Queen greeted him at the door and asked him to come in. They talked for more than 15 minutes about flowers peculiar to this country and those easy to grow here. The Queen astounded the Scotsman for she knew the technical names of all varieties and talked professionally with the learned flower man.

Although Mr. Glass comes from Fochabers in Morayshore County, Scotland, some distance from the Queen's native Angus, they found mutual topics to discuss in scenery and country habits. The shyness vanished and the occasion he had dreaded all day found him right at home with people he knew and understood.

Sulfapyridine Changes Entire Aspect of Childhood Pneumonia

New York, June 2—(AP)— Sulfapyridine, medicine's new remedy for pneumonia, has changed the entire aspect of this disease in childhood, Dr. Charles Hendee Smith of New York told the American Academy of Pediatrics today. He and other physicians told of more than 100 child lives saved in the last winter by sulfapyridine.

Among children Dr. Smith said the death rate has been high in infants, low in older children. The sulfapyridine saves many infants and shortens the course of illness of the older children.

Type 19 is the pneumonia most deadly for infants, he said. The sulfapyridine is just as effective against this type as any other.

He told of 50 cases of child pneumonia in which the sulfapyridine reduced temperature to normal in 24 hours. It is not very effective against pneumonias caused by streptococci and pertussis or whooping cough infections.

Former Master General Of Ordnance Dies

Ottawa, June 2 (CP)—Major General Alexander C. Caldwell, 64, former Master General of the Ordnance at the Department of National Defence and a former Quarter Master General of Canada, died in hospital here last night. A soldier of exceptional military ability, serving in the Boer War and the Great War and from 1918 to 1922 was general staff officer with the rank of Colonel. He was made Director of Engineer Services in 1922 and held the post until 1929.

Promoted to rank of Brigadier, he was named Quarter Master General of Canada in 1930 and in 1935 was appointed Master General of the Ordnance. He was born in Lanark.

1,390 United Church Charges Not Contributing to M. & M.

Kingston, June 3.—"We are now in the sixth month of our church year," said Rev. Denzil G. Ridout, F.R.G.S., speaking on the Missonary and Maintenance Fund at the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church, "and there are 1,390 charges in the United Church of Canada who have not sent one solitary nickel to Rev. Dr. Laird for the carrying on of this work. Of these charges have mentioned, 600 are using the duplex envelope. There are 127 charges in this conference who so far this year have not sent one copper to the fund. There are 74 of these charges using the duplex envelope. Where is the money going that is required to carry on this great enterprise?"

Rev. Mr. Ridout referred to a letter which he had received from a churchman who charged that the church was making "more out of the dollar than saving of souls and that no church could prosper when dollars were posted on the mast head."

"The man who wrote that letter is not aware of the purposes of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund," said Dr. Ridout. "We do need the money. We live in an age when money is essential for this work. We need money for the extension of God's work but the money required has not been placed on the altar for God's service. Should we not feel ashamed?"

Big Decrease.

The speaker referred to the fact that in the last ten years there had been a decrease in the givings in Canada amounting to $1,214,000.

"And in the face of this a man writes stating that the church is posting money at its mast head," said the speaker. "I appeal to you for the sake of the Kingdom of God to check up on these matters, and see if we can raise sufficient money to carry on the work of Christ in a proper manner."

Mr. Ridout pointed out that there had been an increase in membership of 74,000 in the last ten years, but during the same period there had been a decrease of 14,000 using the duplex envelope.

"If the new members had given 5 cents per week during these ten years we would have been able to meet this decrease. We would have been able to increase the givings by one million dollars."

'Absolute Drought' In S. E. England

London, June 2 (CP Cable)— A large area of southeast England today began to experience what was officially recognized as an "absolute drought" as the country reached its 23rd successive rainless day.

Instead of the usual wet early summer, Britons during the last three months have enjoyed what locally is called a "heat wave," meaning to Canadians that the weather has been pleasantly warm with lots of sunshine.

Farmers in the southeast, however, have begun to frown at the hard, blue sky.

Religion is Dying, Churches Lose Hold Say Hon. E. C. Drury

Toronto, June 3 (CP)—Religion is dying and churches are losing their hold on people, Hon. E. C. Drury, former Premier of Ontario, told the Toronto Conference of the United Church in Canada.

"We have seen the decline of religion till our country churches are practically empty and our town churches are but little better," he said. "I wonder what will happen in the next thirty years because the growth is not equal to the decay."

Mr. Drury told the conference the recession in religion had been caused because old-fashioned worship had died out and a new one hadn't been created to grasp the tasks of the world today.

"The church must expose the things that are wrong," he said.

IN A LOG CABIN

The thrill of living in a log cabin in Jasper National Park was experienced by King George and Queen Elizabeth and their two servants. The Queen told the keeper of the Jasper Park Lodge how much she liked living like an ordinary couple in a cabin. The outlook cabin was luxuriously furnished and is an integral part of the mountain lodge.

Many millions in the world look to palaces as the beau ideal places of residence, while monarchs see the charm of a sylvan retreat or mountain cottage built of logs.

Her Majesty's remark shows the irresistable appeal of simple and happy home life. Every person who has lived since civilization began can appreciate the charm of simple homes. This motive is found in the yearning of everyone to have a retreat, a country home, a summer cottage, even if he or she possesses a palatial city residence.

Life is such that it provides charm for everything. The quiet cottage appeals with its placid life, far from scenes of court and the busy mart. Life's infinity too grants the palace its charms and opportunities and also responsibilities so great that those who wear the crown bear a load heavier than any others. It is no wonder that Britain's Queen Consort should see that fact and feel something of a longing for the life which is lived by the people whom she understands so well.

There may heve been kings and queens who could not enjoy the cottage life, but they were unfortunate. Britain's King and Queen are so close to the heart throb of the people that they delight in passing through the experiences of the people and in moving among them.

Happy people who can enjoy the simple life which even a Queen would desire!

In a cottage occupants are able to do much of their own work. There is no person alive who does not love to do things, to do something for himself or herself and for others. A cottage life allows this while the life of a palace is so vast that the same general opportunity to do things does not exist.

As a matter of fact the King and Queen who expressed delight at the simplicity and peace of the log cabin experience spend their opportunity for rest and vacation in their country seats or close to nature, where they throw off some of the strictures of their official life.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA 'LIVES'

"After the tempest of wrath has passed the rule of thy country shall return to thee, O Czech people," said Comenius, one of the great leaders of the people some centuries ago.

This prophecy of his adorns the Czecho-Slovak Pavilion at the World's Fair, New York, which was dedicated and formally opened to the public this week. Speaker after speaker, among them former President Dr. Eduard Benes of the dismantled republic, and Mayor La Guardia, declared their faith that some day that country would again take her place among the free and independent ations of the earth. Dr. Benes spoke "on behalf of one of the oldest peoples and most highly cultured and politically-developed peoples in Europe," "We Czechs, Slovaks and Carpatho-Russians still can show to the world how an humble yet free and democratic people can work—and why that people will never die. . . . . . This pavilion is the free and independent Czecho-Slovakia of the near past and the free and independent Czecho-Slovakia of the near future. . . . . . We believe that freedom in Europe will be re-established for all nations and states . . . . . And she will not die because our national life is not based upon ephemeral successes and conquests but on eternal moral principles, the principle one of which is displayed in the coat of arms of the free Czecho-Slovak republic. It reads, 'truth prevails.'"

The Czech flag may float at half-staff but this prophecy Hitler or his successors will see made fact unless all democratic signs fail. This is the ghost at every Hitler glorification, at every Nazi feast. Bohemia and the other provinces will be free when the world has delivered Europe from the obsession and nightmare of Naziism. Through the tribulations of Czecho-Slovakia this benefit will come.

One looks upon an interrupted hope of the Czech people, for the pavilion is unfinished, because of what occurred a few months ago in the dastardly Nazi aggression. Its unfinished state is a challenge to the Czechs and to liberty-loving people the world over to cherish what liberties they have and to guard them and it will insure the peoples of that Republic until the bold prophetic phrase of Comenius is realized in the establishment of the Republic in the freedom it won by its struggle for liberty through the ages and through the past 20 years.

Murmuring like remembrance; poplar trees,
Kissed to light wanton laughter by the breeze,
Raised trembling fingers to an evening sky;
In distant shadows secret, sweet and shy,
There was a woodthrush crying ecstasies;
The day was old — a pilgrim on her knees
To pray, and muse a silent time and die;
And the wind, passing like a quiet stream,
Caressed the long grass slowly, to release
The moving music of an ancient word
Not here defamed—not here, not here a dream;
Not here despised and lost: the word was Peace.
These were deserted fields and no one heard.

AN EXTORTIONER FROM THE WEST who threatened to kidnap a Montreal citizen's daughter, has been sentenced by Judge Langlois to three years in the penitentiary. The punishment was not unduly severe, but should serve as a warning that kidnapping for ransom, or threat of kidnapping, will not be tolerated here. The crime is almost on a par with murder; indeed, kidnappers often are murderers.—Montreal Gazette.

A BUDDING YOUNG PUGILIST IN SUDBURY tried his prowess on a beverage room waiter, broke the latter's jaw, and had a fine time generally. In court he "could not remember" but the Judge gave him something to remember when he sentenced him to pay the victim forty dollars a month for eleven months, failing which a cell in the local jail awaited him and a more or less steady job on the rock pile. Back to the mines for the would-be-pugilist and eleven months painful remembrance of one night's "fun."

ALL THIS MAKES ME VERY SAD, said Mrs. Edna Woolman Chase, Editor of Vogue, addressing the members of the Shoe Guild. Said she: "Gentlemen, I want to remonstrate with you. I want to plead with you to stop this promotion of the open-toed, open-backed shoe for street wear . . . . . Today you see millions of women all over America, slop-slopping along the streets with not only their toes out, but their heels out, too . . . . . . I won't be a bit surprised if some day they just walk right out on you and shellac their soles and put bells on their toes and say, 'To hell with shoes.' All this makes me very sad."

FOR THEIR "LOYALTY, devotion to duty and achievement" in reorganizing telephone service following the disastrous New England Hurricane last September, the thousands of men and women employees of the Bell System in that area have been awarded a bronze plaque by the Theodore N. Vail Memorial Fund, it is announced.

The mass award, first of its kind since the establishment of the fund following the death of Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone Co., in 1920, pays tribute to the system-wide co-operative effort made when 600,000 telephones were silenced and $10,000,000 worth of equipment was lost.

The memorial plaque will be placed at the New York offices of the American Telephone Co.

The award committee this year also presented 22 bronze medals and two silver medals "for noteworthy public services."

The silver medals, carrying a cash award of $250 each, were also awarded to Jerry Frank Kincannon, repairman of Miami, Okla., and George F. Wilson, installer of Grass Valley, Cal.

Kincannon volunteered his services in a mine disaster May 23, 1938, when a hoisting lift in a mine near Commerce, Okla., broke, killed one and severely injured two. Kincannon descended, administered first aid and directed the removal of the injured.

Wilson and a companion were repairing lines in the mountains near Camptonville, Cal., when they were overtaken by a blizzard. Wilson worked seven hours trying to save the other man from the cold, and only gave up when the other had died and he himself was near exhaustion.

The big jam of sawlogs took a start this morning and it was feared that the boom might give way, but happily no damage was done. The work of sorting the logs has been greatly hampered by the jam. The jam at Canniffton remains firm. The river-drivers will not break it until the boom here is cleared of logs.

Gilmour and Co., sent one hundred men north this morning to start their drive on the Moira River which was held up. Owing to the high water it is now probable that all the logs in the Moira and its tributaries will reach here within a short time.

City Workers of the Night

In 1930 the first of the recent American depressions was just getting a firm hold, and there was much feeling for the rapidly increasing unemployed. One afternoon that spring I was standing at the kitchen sink of my home, whistling as I screwed a new washer into a leaky faucet

There was a ring of the bell and I shouted, "Come in." The door opened and our laundry deliveryman entered. I went on with my whistling and my amateur plumbing as my wife paid him off. He pocketed the money, watched me a moment with a rather puzzled expression. then commented:

"I admire a guy who can whistle when he's out of a job."

"What makes you think I am out of a job?" I asked.

"Why," said the laundryman, "here it is two o'clock in the afternoon and you're home. You must be unemployed. I bump into dozens like you every day."

I sighed wearily — here it was again! I had another task of explaining that I was one of the great army of the workers of the dark—night workers, men who toil while others play and sleep, men who play and sleep while others toil. I explained it all to the laundryman —how I had tumbled into bed at four a.m., slept until noon, and now was up working and loafing around the house until time to go to work at seven p.m., and start the cycle all over again.

"Oh," he said, "I never thought of that."

And most people, I have found, never think of that. You go to a theatre. The ticket seller, the doorman, the ushers, the actors, the stagehands—they're all night workers. You come out and get a bite to eat. The restaurant people are night workers. You meet a policeman twirling his stick. He's a night worker. You go home by taxi, by street car, by subway, or railroad train. Whatever the conveyance, the men who operate it are night workers. Before you go to bed you phone a friend. The telephone operator is a night worker. You snap off the lights and go to bed. Thousands of others are doing likewise at the same time, and the engineers at the powerhouse shut down some generators because of the diminishing load. They are night workers. In the morning you read your paper as you eat your breakfast. The paper was put out by night workers — of whom I was one for twelve years.

They're all around you, these owls —men and women out of step with the world. Someone once estimated that there were 300,000 night workers in New York City alone, and, if anything, the estimate is too modest in a community of 7,000,000 people. They're not confined to the large cities, either, for there is hardly a village so remote that it does not have a night constable, a powerhouse attendant, and one phone operator, at least.

Their difficulties are many. Some dislike having to sleep (or trying to sleep) when the sun is high and the workaday world is noisy. Some dislike missing the social events and neighborly calls of the night time, for the night worker perforce is an anti-social creature. Some resent the implication that they are unemployed, as I mentioned earlier, for all encounter it frequently. People who see a man around home in the daytime when most men are working naturally think he is out of a job, and slyly commiserate with his wife. These are generalized objections; there are many more in individual cases.

But, as with everything else, there are compensations. The night worker can lie abed on a dark and stormy winter morning when other men are rubbing sleep out of one eye and snow out of the other. He can go to baseball games, football games, and tennis matches, all in season, without stealing time from work or waiting for a day off. He can loll on beaches in summer sunshine, he can ski down slopes in winter. He can get a haircut, buy a suit, or make a bank deposit without sacrificing his lunch hour.

Yes, there are indeed compensations—and you can have them. I'll stick to day work henceforth, thank you.—C.L.S. in Christian Science Monitor.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Taking too Much Thought About Blood Pressure

There was a time when the first thought when a patient had a temperature was to give a drug—acetanilid, phenacetine, quinine or other— to reduce the temperature, as the reduction in the temperature was believed not only to be a necessity but one way of curing the patient. Today, the physician takes the temperature and pulse as usual but searches around to find the cause of the temperature. If the temperature gets very high, he may give some drug to reduce it slightly but he knows that the rise in temperature, the increase in heat in the body, shows that Nature is putting up a fight against some invader, some ailment, and that heat is one way of fighting off the ailment.

It would seem that the time has come for patients and physicians to take the same stand about blood pressure. A patient learns that his blood pressure is a little above normal and immediately wants to take medicine or follow a diet to bring it down.

Dr. Edward Weiss, Philadelphia, in Practical Talks on Kidney Disease' says:

"Let us take the example of a middle-aged man who has been turned down by a life insurance company because of high blood pressure. He goes to his physician and demands to know the blood pressure figures; on each visit to the physician he waits with anxious concern, to hear the latest reading and frequently has ideas of "stroke", "heart failure", or "Bright's disease in the back of his mind."

Now, what about high blood pressure? As a matter of fact, Nature has raised the blood pressure because it was necessary to raise or increase it due to some condition present in the body. This condition may be a real or organic condition such as hardening of the arteries, or it may be same condition such as eating too much or worrying too much. It is possible that some infection is present which is giving the body processes more work to do and the blood pressure increases accordingly. Perhaps the individual is greatly overweight or carrying too much water in his tissues.

All that is necessary in many cases is smaller meals, more rest and relaxation, and not bothering to have the blood pressure taken more than two or three times a year.

CATCH HIS EYE

Merchants can help their towns as well as themselves by cultivating the tourist trade, says a merchandising authority. If a store is made attractive enough in appearance to induce a passing motorist to halt, the chances are that he will patronize other local merchants, and in any event he will remember the town as more than a spot on the map.

One suggestion for catching the tourist's eye is to associate the store with something of historic interest to the community.

It is also suggested that store signs particularly in small centres, should show the name of the village or hamlet and that the name of the community should appear on the packages of goods sold. Often a tourist has no idea of his exact whereabouts, unless he happens to see the name of the place on the post office.

Clerks should be able to answer visitors' questions about the neighborhood and to suggest visits to local points of interest. The tourist should leave with the impression that he has been in a friendly town.—Kitchener Record.

Fire Rangers Make An Urgent Appeal

The Canadian Forestry Association quotes a series of appeals written by experienced fire-rangers in many parts of Northern Ontario. To the Question: What can the public do to help you? came these answers:

"Real woodsmen always build their tea fires in safe places, close to water, and never fail to put them out before they leave".

"These hot dry days, the anxious rangers are saying to the care-free traveller in busy country: 'Give us the best turn of the wheel, boys. Kill that campfire, and your smokes equally'"!

"Two summers ago some fifteen hundred little sparks, dropped by careless people, kindled fires that burned over 250,000 acres of Ontario's woodlands".

"Don't be a light-and-run camper. If the campfire gets away from you, seek your nearest fire ranger".

"No farmer should burn brush on his land without first getting a Permit. And then stick to the job until every last spark has disappeared".

"Prospectors can do their job without burning down the forests that furnish paycheques to a thousand workmen".

"Keep the woods green for the sake of hunting and fishing. Any man who loves good sport should treat forest fires as a red invader".

THE POCKETMAKER

The Ontario Gazette is a rather dull publication, as far as the layman is concerned, comprising legal notices entirely. But even in a paper like that, you can sometimes garner a chuckle.

For instance, in last Saturday's issue, is set forth the schedule approved for the men's and boy's clothing industry, under terms of the Industrial Standards Act of Ontario.

For the purpose of fixing wage scales, workers in the clothing industry are carefully classified. The list of employees starts, simply enough, with "cutter" and "marker", but gets more complicated as you go along, jumping from "marker" to "head operator on coats".

It gets to the point where one classification of employees is listed as "pocket makers and outside seams on boys' longs, shorts and bloomers".

See how complicated life's getting? There was a time when a man was a butcher, baker, doctor, lawyer, merchant or something like that—the individual seldom requiring more than one word to give his profession.

But today you ask a fellow what his trade is and he's likely to reply, "Why I'm a pocket maker and outside seamer on boys' longs, shorts and bloomers".

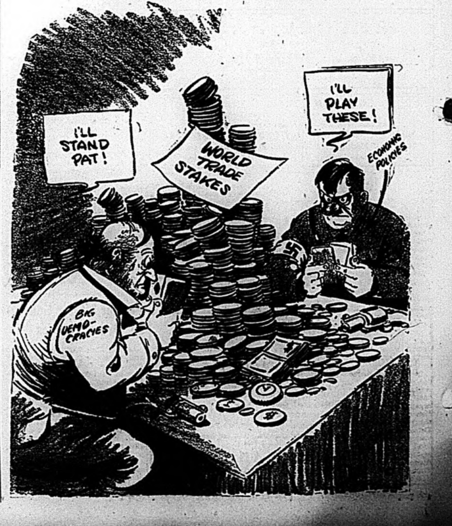
The schedule provides 41 cents per regular hour of work for "pocket makers and outside seamers on boys' longs, shorts and bloomers".—T. R. Brophy in Windsor Star.

SAFETY MONITORS

Crowds are always in danger, both from their own clumsiness and because some feather-headed individual may at any time start a panic. Safety depends on cool thinking and prompt bodily response. To spread a wider knowledge of these principles Major Allan Smith, military instructor of the World's Fair police, is training a body of Safety Monitors who will be available for duties supplementing those of the regular police and guides. Before the Fair opened, thousands of young men had qualified not only for the work on the Fair Grounds but as safety teachers in their own communities.

For thirty years Major Smith has been training men and boys to command themselves and to command others. He emphasizes three habits, the light step, the ringing voice and the clear eye. These are acquired in a series of drills, which in time equip the participants to meet any emergency which can develop where people flock together. In a crowd, at the first hint of alarm, they act like chemical reagents, clarifying a sudden fog of uncertainty or precipitating instant action if it is required. We attribute most accidents today to the development of modern mechanization. As a matter of fact, death in the street or factory still springs mostly from dull brains and slow bodies. To quicken both is a mission of human conservation.—N.Y. Times.

CHIPS THAT PASS IN THE NIGHT



Faith, Loyalty, Fundamentals Of Modern Nursing, Graduates Are Told by Dr. B. T. McGhie

Exercises Held at Collegiate Auditorium Attended by Large Number

TWELVE IN CLASS

Miss Marjorie Sharpe Wins Gold Medal and Miss Laura Foster Silver One

Faith and loyalty, the qualities upon which the profession of nursing was founded, are today the fundamentals of modern nursing, said Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health for Ontario, who was the guest speaker at the annual graduation exercises of the Belleville General Hospital training school for nurses, which was an interesting event in civic life, last evening.

The twelve young ladies to receive diplomas were Misses Alice Craighead, Ameliasburg, Ruth M. Cryderman, Edmonton, Alta., Mabel L. Duncan, Colborne, Laura E. Foster, Pembroke, Helen A. French, Flint, Mich., Elizabeth Hendricks, Brighton, Marcella W. Lewis, Shannonville, Grace A. Paterson, Peterboro, Esther M. Purcell, Colebrook, Lucille T. Sauve, Ottawa, Marjorie P. Sharpe, Belleville, Ruth V. Tyers, Redbridge.

Class Medallists

Much interest centred in major awards for 1939 which were won by Miss Marjorie Sharpe, who merited the gold medal, presented annually by the Board of Governors for highest standing in theory in the final year and Miss Laura Foster, who won the silver medal awarded by the Medical Staff for the highest standing in the practice of nursing.

The Collegiate Auditorium was filled to capacity as relatives, friends and citizens of the community, generally, assembled to honor the graduates and to show their interest in the activities of Belleville General Hospital. The stage was beautifully decorated with lilacs and ferns. As processional music was played by Mr. Alec Gordon, the student nurses, graduates of other years and finally the graduating nurses, smart in their crisp uniforms against which bouquets of deep red roses, made a vivid splash of color, entered the auditorium, the audience standing to receive them. The members of graduating class took their places on the stage, and the other nurses occupied front seats in the auditorium. Graduate nurses acted as ushers for the evening.

Interesting Program

The interesting program was opened by Scripture reading by Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Church. Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the Board of Governors, presided during the evening. His Worship, Mayor Jamieson Bone, was the first speaker of the evening extending sincere congratulations to the nurses of the 1939 class, in a brief address, sparkling with wit. Felicitating the young graduates, His Worship referred to nursing as one of the noblest of all the professions and congratulated them on the life work they had chosen. Correct thinking and the right attitude of mind were necessary for success in their careers, for the mind, the speaker said, was a powerful and potent force that would lead to health, happiness, progress and prosperity.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson expressed the gratification felt by the hospital staff and Board for the splendid attendance which demonstrated the interest of the community. He reminded his hearers that the Hospital was the property of the Women's Christian Association which had for many years carried on the work from a small beginning and thanked the members for the great work they had done in the community. He expressed also on behalf of the Board of Governors appreciation to the Association, to the Women's Auxiliary, to the staff of the hospital and the doctors for the support and cooperation during the past year.

Mr. John Deacon, accompanied by Mrs. Deacon, favored the audience with two delightful solos which were enjoyable features of the evening's program.

Dr. G. S. Cronk, medical officer of health, introduced to the audience the guest speaker, Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health, referring to his wide knowledge of health matters of all communities of the province and to his intensive program for the health betterment of Ontario.

Dr. B. T. McGhie

Dr. McGhie congratulating the nurses on the important advance they had made, in reaching this part of their goal, said that it was a privilege for them to have spent their student days in Belleville a district which was prominent in the early history of public health work in the province.

In 1880 the charter was secured for the hospital from which the nurses graduated tonight, while in 1884 Belleville figured in the first organized effort to immunize a section of people against smallpox in the province of Ontario, when the Department of Health, instituted a year previous, co-operated with the local Board of Health to help stamp out an epidemic of that disease which was raging in the County of Hastings. Three hundred deaths had occurred and the disease was checked when four thousand people were vaccinated.

Belleville was fortunate to have citizens keenly interested in the treatment of illness and the prevention of disease and suffering and to have business and professional men of outstanding ability to direct the affairs of the hospital. The fact that the hospital was overcrowded throughout the year spoke highly, said Dr. McGhie, of the type of medical work and surgery in the community and of the confidence the people have in doctors and hospital. All this has meant an opportunity for the Superintendent of Nurses to build up, as has been done an excellent centre of training for nurses. Whether the nurse follows her profession as a life career or becomes a homemaker there is no other calling which fits her for living as that of nursing.

Firm Foundation

Founded on religion and the necessities of military activities, nursing has been founded on faith and loyalty and these two fundamentals make up modern nursing. It has become a ministry of healing and its followers are members of an army of courageous tradition. In every disaster and every war nurses of the Empire have achieved glory almost unequalled in other ranks. The work itself is its own great reward, as Florence Nightingale, its foundress predicted, and nurses are still missioners of health and well being. The modern tradition of nursing is built upon the solid foundation established by Florence Nightingale. Canada has a right to feel proud of her contribution to the advancement of the science of nursing for in St. Catharines 66 years ago the first training school was established and no less an editorial writer than H. L. Mencken spoke of Canadian nurses being the best in all the world and that it was really Canada that had given the science of nursing to the world.

Those who chose private duty nursing, select perhaps the most arduous field of her profession. To those who say that this phase is overcrowded, the speaker pointed out that there was always need of alert, efficient nurses and of specialists in particular lines. Other fields of effort available were institutional nursing, teaching, public health nursing. Whatever branch she choses the nurse must never lose sight of the fact that other interests must be followed for a broader cultural outlook, invaluable in her work.

Dr. McGhie extended words of congratulation to the graduates with the reminder that the service was one of great and rich tradition which it was their duty and privilege to carry on.

Pins Presented

Presentation of pins and diplomas to the graduates was made by Mrs. G. Stewart, 1st vice-president of the Women's Christian Association and Miss Ruth Thompson, director of nursing, each recipient being introduced to the audience by Mr. G. A. Friesen, administrator of Belleville General Hospital.

Receive Prizes

Recognition of outstanding work was given by the presentation of the annual awards, the Gold Medal being presented Miss Marjorie Sharpe by Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, and the Silver Medal to Miss Laura Foster by Dr. R. S. Gibson, President of the Medical Staff. The prize for highest marks in Public Health Nursing given by Dr. G. S. Cronk, was presented to Miss Ruth Tyers by the donor; while the prize for the highest marks in Obstetrics given by Dr. Ethel Noble, won by Miss Esther Purcell; the prize for highest marks in Pediatrics given by Dr. Harvie, won by Miss Marjorie Sharpe and the prize awarded for Operating Room Technique by Dr. Stobie, won by Miss Elizabeth Hendricks were all presented by Miss Ruth Thompson.

Expressing the esteem and affection of the graduating class for their director, Miss Ruth Thompson, a beautiful basket of roses was presented to her by little Miss Bernice Cronkwright.

Dr. R. S. Gibson

Dr. R. S. Gibson, president of the medical staff of the hospital, delivered the address to the graduating class, pointing out that the staff felt that the class of 1939 was one of the best to be graduated from Belleville General Hospital. High qualities must be possessed by the nurse who enters training, while the very character of the work develops such attributes as tolerance, humanitarianism and interdependence. Nursing is a splendid education in itself. It has great compensations in its contacts with the romance and the realities of life.

The speaker called to mind the great pioneer of the profession, Florence Nightingale, and to the greater opportunities and advantages modern nurses have in wonderfully equipped hospitals. Dr. Gibson added his good wishes for the future success of the graduates.

Valedictory Address

Miss Laura Foster, class valedictorian, made a charming address recalling happy memories of training years and the devoted kindness of Miss McIndoo, Miss Collier, Miss Thompson and all those under whose direction the term was passed. Silent tribute was paid the memory of a classmate, Miss Ida Comrie who passed away during the years of training.

Welcomed as graduates into the larger sisterhood, the young nurses found that they had not reached the end of a road but had merely opened the door to new opportunities for service, and were looking forward to adding their contribution to the noble profession of nursing.

Rev. Mr. Walker pronounced the benediction which brought to a close the graduation exercises for 1939.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE OFF

Religious Education Committee Deplores Marked Falling Off

Kingston, Ont., June 3 (CP)—Report from the Committee of Religious Education submitted at this morning's session of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, deplored the fact that there had been a marked falling off in Sunday School attendance. It was pointed out that only one in four who attended Sunday school, continued their religious education and finally took out membership in the church.

The committee made a strong appeal for parents, Sunday school teachers, elders and ministers to lead the children under the care of the church. Great emphasis was laid on the need of leadership.

Rev. C. A. Myers of Toronto appealed to members of the Conference to put forth renewed effort to win souls for Christ. He said that the young people were just as responsive to teaching as the young people of any other day.

Church and Education.

"The church has not been concerned enough about Christian education," said Dr. Myers. "It must be made known that religion is essential for every boy and girl and that nothing else can take its place. Only paganism will result if religion is not made the moving passion in our young people.

Let it be known that we have a great affirmative gospel. The gospel must be presented so as the young people will respond.

Rev. Dr. Harry B. Clark of Sydenham Street Church, Kingston, said there is no boundary for the preaching of the Christian Gospel, as he spoke on behalf of the Board of Foreign Missions. Dr. Clarke said that the gospel of Jesus Christ was the domination of gospel as it was the only gospel adequate to serve the world.

Tonight four young men will be received into the Ministry of the United Church. Three will be ordained at the morning service in Sydenham Street Church on Sunday.

They are Melville Butters of Cold Springs, H. C. McCormick of Carleton Place and George A. Affleck of Lanark. C. W. Neelands of Toronto will be ordained in Toronto.

Will Leave Cornfield To Take Dancers Before King, Queen

Sam McQueen's Group To Perform Dances of English Origin

Waynesville, N.C., June 3 (AP)—When he does his rows of hillside corn these days, Samuel McQueen gives them an extra lick, for come June 7 he must leave his crop and take his seventeen square dancers to Washington to perform at the White House before the King and Queen.

Chances are the King and Queen have never seen dancing such as this group will show them—yet the dancing is more English than American. Deep in the Smoky Mountains the steps of the English pioneers have survived, although they have been forgotten elsewhere.

The McQueen dancers are non-professionals. Most of them live on the hills around Soco Gap, and they dance for the sheer joy of it. The dancers are farmers, mechanics, school teachers and housewives, by trade.

They have played twice before in Washington. The dance group has a lard-bucket full of blue ribbons won here and yonder. Some of their dances are the Georgia Ragout, the Water Wheel, London Bridge—and a score or so of others with equally quaint names.

GERMAN MIGHT SEEN BY REGENT

Yugoslavia's Border Guaranteed for All Time by Chancellor Hitler

Berlin, June 3 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler yesterday followed up a pledge of respect for Yugolavia's border with Germany "for all time" with an impressive demonstration of military might for Prince Paul, Yugoslav Regent.

The Regent, here on a five-day state visit, stood with the Fuehrer and high German army officers near Berlin's monument to war dead in Unter Den Linden to see the parade of soldiers and war machines.

For more than three hours troops marched and artillery, tanks and motorized equipment rolled through Berlin's streets while airplanes roared overhead.

The Regent opened the ceremonies by placing a wreath at the war memorial.

Then, riding with the Fuehrer in the latter's automobile, he went to the technical high school where the parade was witnessed from a platform.

At an elaborate state dinner last night at Hitler's new chancellery, the Fuehrer spoke of warm friendship between the two countries and said their new common border had been "established for all time".

Shannonville

Shannonville — The South Hastings Baseball League executive will hold a meeting on Friday night according to a letter received by Dr. H. E. Eckhardt from Arthur Hall, secretary of the league. It is rumored that only Foxboro, Latta and Shannonville will comprise the league this year as it is thought that Cannifton will give up the 'ghost'. However by Friday Ed. Shorey manager of the team might have a change of heart and prevail upon the boys to again sponsor a team and this would prove to be of great aid to the league as a three team loop is not apt to prove very successful inasmuch as interest will not be so keen.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Liddle and family of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. Henry Liddle.

Mrs. J. C. Spencer was a Sunday evening guests of Mrs. Minnie Barber.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Howard of Milltown were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burtt.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Little were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall of Deseronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Little were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reid.

Mr. Sam Barber is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital at the present time.

Jack Fitzgerald, local garage proprietor is making extensive changes in his garage. Due to increased business Mr. Fitzgerald is building an addition to his garage and has also installed much new equipment in order to accommodate his increased patronage.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Maracle, Tyendinaga Reserve on Monday evening at which a large number were in attendance. The event was held in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Maracle's eldest daughter Evelyn, who was recently married. During the evening the guests tripped the light fantastic to music furnished by local talent and at the social hour lunch was served.

Mrs. Bert Liddle and Miss Vera Smith were Wednesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Liddle.

Mr. Reginald Hill of Toronto was a Monday evening guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harvey and Betty and Mr. Harry Uens of Belleville, Mr. Edward Uens and Mrs. Margaret Duncan of Napanee were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Houston.

Capital Close-ups of Week

Ottawa, June 3—(CP)—The unexpected explosion in the public accounts committee over the Bren gun contract steals the session's finale from the Commons and the Senate, creating the most electric parliamentary hearing of the session.

The political winds blow hot again around the Bren question just when it appeared the inquiry would wind up quietly without a story.

With Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, testifying concerning his magazine article criticizing the contract and G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) cross-examining him, Parliament Hill witnessed one of the keenest and most prolonged verbal duels between two public men in recent years.

The Commons had little more than a quorum at it droned through estimates and late-session bills. The parliamentary spotlight centred on the smoky little committee room where the crowds flocked to hear practically all the top-flight lawyer-members of the Commons strive to draw definite conclusions from the Bren controversy.

There were 40 to 50 members and senators jammed in the room along with dozens of civil servants. Casual spectators overflowed into the corridor.

The scene itself: Sauve Col. Drew lounging in his chair: Mr. McGeer standing by the long table booming questions; committee members on both sides of McGeer losing their tempers and passing audible asides; chairman W. A. Fraser (Lib. Northumberland), keeping order and nervously supervising the show; an atmosphere of tense partisanship pervading the room — all making for more political drama than both houses of parliament provide in the sessional windup.

Ottawa Vignettes

Champion of broader divorce laws in Canada, Senator Lendrum McMeans, the Winnipeg Conservative, finds the fight too onerous for his 80 years. He will discontinue his campaign in parliament for divorce legislation fashioned after the new English law. Some younger member, however, likely will take up the question next session ....

Labor Minister Rogers is the lone wolf of the cabinet during lunch hour. He does not patronize the cabinet's room in the parliamentary restaurant but eats in a little lunchroom on Sparks Street — usually alone or with newsmen who frequent it....

The new clerk of parliament, Clare Moyer, lost his legal aplomb during the senate railway division. It is his duty to take the vote and for the first time in recent years a clerk's announcement was challenged. Senator George Parent (Lib. Quebec) said his own record showed a different vote. So the embarrassed Mr. Moyer called the roll again and found his original count correct. Mr. Parent smiled. It was a senatorial practical joke..

They tell this one about 'Tommy' Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview). An unnamed M.P. attending the National War Memorial unveiling here two weeks ago became separated from his wife in the crowd. He met Mr. Church and said to him: "I've just lost my wife." Replied the Toronto member: "I heard about it; so very sad; I wrote you a letter this morning...."

Transport Minister Howe and Major M. F. Gregg, the Commons sergeant-at-arms, sport Parliament's best sun tans. Both look extremely fit in the chamber of pallid M.P.'s.... It is the custom for members to refer to others in the House as "the Hon. member for so and so," naming the constituency. But Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) gave the Commons a laugh when he got his constituencies mixed up with the Liberal whip from Lambton West riding. He referred to Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor Grey-Bruce) as "the Hon. member for Ross Gray...."

The Government "pulled a fast one" when the Commons passed the $750,000,000 Loan Bill. The Social Crediters planned to debate the measure further but third reading was moved when there were only two Social Crediters in the House—Rene Pelletier, Peace River, and Robert Fair, Battle River. A hurried attempt was made to round up the Albertan forces. J. C. Landeryou, Calgary East, rushed from the banking committee. But the bill was through when they arrived in their seats to block it....

Government officials estimate that between 6,250,000 and 6,500,000 persons will be eligible to vote in the next Dominion election. In 1935 there were 5,916,000 eligible... Rumors that an election will be held this year are waning a little on Parliament Hill....

Letters from the Royal Train have a mysterious quality about them. The postmark just says "Royal Train, Canada" and you can't tell from what city it was mailed. It is Canada's only travelling post office....

In the new Mortgage Bank Bill the word "Bank" is being applied for the first time to a lending institution lending money on land. ....It is taking money from one Government pocket and putting it in another when Trans-Canada Air Lines, a Government agency, pays 30 per cent duty on the $130,000 Lockheed planes purchased in California....

Following the ceremony, wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home. The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace of Delta pearls, to the groomsman gold cuff links and to the bridesmiad a sterling silver locket.

Young Women's Guild Studies Democracy

Papers Read at May Meeting at Home of Miss E. Corbett

The May meeting of the Young Women's Guild was held at the home of Miss E. Corbett. Miss J. Nicholls was in charge of the programme on Democracy. "Is Democracy Worth Saving?" was the theme of her introduction and a plea that all take responsibility in the various workings of Democracy.

Miss J. Tickell dealt with "Detory of Democracy" traced its development from the Greek City State, through Roman Government, the Dark Ages, the Middle Ages to Modern Democracy.

Miss J. Tickell dealt with "Democracy in the Home." Four points were stressed: (1) Intelligence and education of the individual; (2) Willingness to take responsibility; (3) Acceptance of majority rule and (4) Play fair attitude. Our attempt to apply these points to home life as a step towards our part in a national and international democracy was discussed. Mrs. G. Ferguson gave a paper on "Weakness of Democracy" and pointed out that the fundamental enemies were fear, greed, dishonesty and self.

In conclusion it was shown that there must be faith, love, obedience and service for the workings of Democracy. The worship service concluded the programme. It was conducted by Miss Jane Smith, the theme being "Principals of Corporate Living."

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, (Special)—Making their first appearance in Trenton since their visit to Ottawa and Toronto, in connection with the royal tour, and displaying their new gilt-and-grey uniforms to wonderful advantage, sixty members of the R.C.A.F. silver band, directed by Flight Sergeant Thomas Cooper and led by Drum-Major Cpl. R. S. "Tiny" Davis, paraded to Grace United Church on Sunday morning, leading a contingent of R.C.A.F. officers and airmen and a number of I.O.O.F. members in uniform. The parade was witnessed by hundreds of people who turned out for the occasion and lined the sides of Dundas Street, and was the first ceremonial parade of any size staged by the R.C.A.F. this season.

150 at Dinner

About one hundred and fifty gathered at the V. O. N. dinner in King Street United Church basement on Monday evening to attend one of the pleasantest functions of the season. The dinner, sponsored by the Trenton Rotary Club, was widely attended, and a very fine meal served by the ladies of the church. Seated at the prettily decorated tables were officials both of the V.O.N. and of the Rotary Club, and in the course of the evening suitable addresses were given by Nurse Catharine Haslam and others interested in the work. Too much praise cannot be given the Victorian Order for their valiant and worthwhile efforts in Trenton, and though in other towns of similar size and population no very great interest is taken in V.O.N. work, in many cases, still the progress of the group goes forward in Trenton undiminished. Unfortunately as unemployment increases and business slackens the demands made upon the V.O.N. are much heavier, and Nurse Haslam has been called upon to make thousands of calls during the year past for which only a comparatively small proportion was paid. Hence the responsibility of financing the work falls largely upon the citizens of the town and the service groups such as the Rotary Club, through whose kindness the V.O.N. are able to continue operations.

Game Washed Out.

Wednesday evening's ball game between Yourex Billiards and the R.C.A.F. nine was washed out when just at game time a sudden squall brought a downpour that soaked the field and many of the spectators. Players and fans beat a hasty retreat, and the game was replayed on Thursday evening, the Airmen coming through again to win their second straight game, one against Graham's just a few nights previous. To date the local league is pretty evenly balanced, every team having won at least one game, and most having two or more victories as against an equal or less number of losses.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a lawn bowling club in Trenton was held in the town hall on Thursday evening with about twenty on hand, and plans for the formation of the club, the choosing of a site, and the building of a club house were discussed at length. Eventually it was decided to appoint committees to handle each branch of the proposed club's activities, and several interested business men of the town were named as prospective members.

Demolish Land Mark.

Thursday saw the demolition of one of the old time landmarks of the town when workmen tore down the old drinking fountain and horse trough on the market square. This fountain, incidentally, was recently the centre of a hot debate in council but its removal was decided upon, and many who remember back thirty and forty years recall the many, many times when lines of horses waited at the trough to follow each other, especially on market mornings. Now, however, the old trough is removed, and the spot will be marked only by a drain.

The market square is showing all round improvement this spring and many have remarked upon its changed appearance. Through the activity of Councillor George Riley under whose direction these changes fall, a large flag pole has recently been placed at the east end of the police station office and a flag flies there from its top. Police officers use the bell recently placed back in the market tower for the purpose of recalling one another to the station in an emergency, and this plan has already proved useful. Years ago the bell reposed in the market tower, it is said, but when the former College street school was built it was taken there and used until this spring when the move to the new school was made. Painting and cleaning has been done inside and out, especially in the town hall upstairs, and the change is very noticeable. Workmen have begun the demolition of the brickwork of the old railroad freight building lying beside the firehall, long abandoned, and more recently occupied by several underprivileged families. These have been warned several times, it is alleged, to leave and find other residence, but now the actual demolition has begun and they will shortly be forced to move.

A local wit, who makes no claim for the veracity of his story, claims that when garage workers finally hauled Cpl. Jimmy Howard's new Ford sedan from the bed of the Trent Canal late Wednesday afternoon the radio, when turned on, played as well as it ever did. That was rather surprising, he says, but adds that the tune it played first was, appropriately, "Deep River".

Organization Meeting

About twenty-five members of recently formed Lions Club held a supper meeting on Thursday evening in the dining rooms of the Royal Hotel, with one visitor, Lion Ogilvie of Ottawa, present. During the meeting plans were made for the forthcoming Charter Night, the date for which has been set at Friday, June 16th, and five committees were appointed to take charge of the various branches of endeavour for the occasion. Committee chairmen included: Reception Committee, President Art Norrington; Program Committee, Fred Juby; Decorating Committee, Dave MacDonald; Dinner Committee, Reg. Armstrong; Dance Committee, Bill Whyte. A letter from the Kingston Club was read in which they stated that they would be on hand with about fifteen couples and would provide a "stunt" to form a part of the program. Napanee, the sponsoring club, have assured that they will be present with at least a similar number, and they will provide one or two musical numbers. In addition visitors are expected from clubs at Whitby, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Peterboro, Kingston, Gananoque, Brockville, Morrisburg, Ottawa, and other points. Each club will bring its own contribution to the program, and the affair will be wound up with a dance. Canterbury Hall has been chosen as the site for the event, mainly because it has more seating space than any local hotel, and should the estimated crowd of two hundred or more guests appear it will be taxed to the limit. Further plans for the Charter Night were made, and members expressed their views as to the form which the meeting should take. It was decided that all future meetings of the club will be held on every other Thursday, the next meeting after Charter Night to be at the Gilbert Hotel on Thursday, June 29th. The club will not hold its regular meetings during the hottest months, but will probably meet once per month with possibility of a picnic meeting at Presqu'ile Point.

Saw Indianapolis Race

Among the spectators at the Indianapolis race track this week when three racing cars crashed, injuring one driver fatally, were Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Kenny and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Weller, who drove down for the annual race classic, leaving here last Sunday. They returned late on Thursday.

All roads led to Wooler on Monday afternoon when old boys and old girls and young people too, attended the anniversary of the Sunday School there and took part in a callithumpian parade which they do say was one of the finest the village had ever seen.

A number of local officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment motored to Picton on Friday evening of last week to attend the annual canvas model exercise there marked by Captain Paul Milette of military headquarters in Kingston. Capt. Milette, incidentally, is the officer who is expected to mark the annual cadet inspection at Trenton High School on June 9th, at which time the salute will be taken by Wing Commander D. C. M. Hume of the R.C.A.F. Station.

Major General C. F. Constantine of Kingston, was in town briefly on Tuesday, enroute to Bowmanville, where he expected to take part in presentation of awards at the industrial school for boys there. Major General Constantine is the district officer commanding Military District No. 3.

AT THE McCARTHY

"King of the Turf"

Adolphe Menjou, star of some of last season's most notable screen successes, and Roger Daniel, already being hailed as the juvenile screen find of the year, head the cast of Edward Small's new romantic film drama, "King of the Turf", which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

The producer, Edward Small, also hand-picked a supporting cast to assist his top players including Alan Dinehart, Dolores Costello, Walter Abel, William Demarest, George McKay and Tom Hanlon.

"King of the Turf" is a story of a man and his boy . . . . and their great adventure together in the racetrack world. A screen experience to rival "Stella Dallas". Whether or not you are an ardent devotee of the Sport of Kings you will get thrills and chills and plenty of breathless moments watching the exciting horse-races which are woven into the story. And, incidentally, it is well worth noting, that some of the country's best known racing stables are represented in the film and some of the turf's most popular figures actually appear in the production, which we heartily recommend one and all to see. An extremely funny Edgar Kennedy comedy entitled "Clock Wise" and a new motion picture novelty entitled "Cavalcade of Stuff" which is released through Educational Films, completes this program which will be next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Now Playing

For the last times the McCarthy Theatre will present George O'Brien in his best western action hit to date entitled "Arizona Legion" and in addition a companion feature all will thoroughly enjoy, as well, entitled "Tarnished Angel" with Sally Eilers, Lee Bowman and Ann Miller heading the cast. This is Miss Eilers finest dramatic production since her early success "Bad Girl" and with also the presentation of a Walt Disney technicolor cartoon entitled "Donald's Ostrich" and another episode of "Flying G-Men" the entire program is one that you cannot afford to miss.

AT THE BELLE

"Dodge City"

Errol Flynn comes to the screen of the Belle Theatre in a role that is, on the surface, altogether unlike any he has ever played before, for he is the straight-shooting hero of "Dodge City" (now playing), a film about the period when the little Kansas town of that name was the roughest and wickedest community of the old west.

Produced by Warner Bros. in Technicolor, "Dodge City" is a spirited and authentic re-creation of those hectic days in the 1870's when the coming of the railroad to the little town at the northern end of the famed Chisholm Trail made it the leading cattle shipping centre of that era.

And its authenticity is lessened no whit by the fact that the obviously British Errol Flynn is depicted as the trail boss who has driven a huge herd of Texas longhorns up the Chisholm Trail and then, after his arrival in Dodge City, becomes the sheriff who cleans up the wild and wicked town. He is explained as an Irish soldier-of-fortune who had become a Texas cowboy after fighting for the South in the Civil War, and the history of the old west contains several notable examples of adventurous Britons who became men to be feared in that virile era.

The story, which is an original screen play by Robert Buckner, revolves about the war to the death between Flynn and the murderous gang of gun-fighters who have been in control of the town until his arrival, and it is replete with hair-raising incidents.

Notable scenes in the picture include the stampede of a big herd of longhorns, a brawl involving more than a hundred men in the biggest saloon and gambling hall of Dodge City—which is easily the most spirited battle of the sort ever filmed—and a tense and suspenseful gun battle in a railway mail car which ends with Flynn and two companions being locked in the car as it is set in flames. How Flynn manages to get out of the flaming railway car, rescue his companions and then turn the tables on the outlaws is a climatic scene with a terrific impact of turbulent action.

In the brilliant cast which supports Flynn are Olivia deHavilland, Ann Sheridan, Brue Cabot, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, John Litel, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill, Victor Jory, William Lundigan, and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams. The production was directed by Michael Curtiz.

The popular Belle newsreel, and "Daffy Duck" and "Dinosaur", a clever comicolor cartoon precede the feature attraction.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Doctor Attributes Quints' Weight Gain to Tonsil Removal

Many people have asked me the reason for the Quints' weight gain in the past year. I think it is in the fact that they had their tonsils out. Since these diseased organs came out last fall, gains have been larger. Marie, especially, has come ahead. One month alone she gained four pounds. And for the first time since she was born her average gain for the year hasn't been less than any of the others.

It is a matter of fact that the Quints have drawn so together in the matter of size and weight that it is getting harder to tell them apart than it used to be. In fact, we think that the children themselves are sometimes a bit puzzled by their similarity. For instance, out on the play-yard we used to be able to pick out the youngster with the spindly legs and say, "There's Marie". But you can't do that now, Marie isn't spindly-legged any more.

We who are around the children a lot can still tell them apart by their many small differences, but those not so accustomed to being with them are more puzzled than ever.

While we are on the subject of their weight, I think it is interesting to note just how they have varied in their weight race. When they were born, Yvonne was heaviest and weighed more than half as much again as Marie. But today Yvonne is second lightest at 50 1-2 pounds, just half a pound more than Marie. Emilie, who weighed just four ounces more than Marie at birth and was the second smallest Quint, is now the second heaviest. All along they've been see-sawing, but still staying very close together.

The weights of all five are within a range of 3 1-4 pounds. When they were born, the difference between heaviest and lightest was ten ounces. In their entire five years, the greatest variation in their weights occurred at two years old, when Annette weighed four pounds ten ounces more than Marie.

One thing about the children's progress in the matter of weight; it has been steady. Our graphs show that while one Quint might not gain as much as the others one month, she usually made it up the next. Credit for this steady progress can be given only to the rigid schedule we have followed in the matter of feeding.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Too Nice to Her Husband

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"We've been married a little over two months and my only ambition has been to make my husband absolutely happy. He has a funny kind of jealousy. He doesn't want me to be interested in anything outside of home-making and I have no choice in the matter.

"Before I was married I was the librarian in our town's reading room, and I enjoy reading about everything. Some day I hope to write and have taken a correspondence course in journalism. I'm also interested in interior decorating, and hoped to plan the house of my dreams. But Charles likes the golden oak things which were in his old home, and doesn't like chintz draperies, early colonial reproductions, hooked rugs and things like that.

"My grandmother gave me two hundred dollars for a wedding present to buy just such things, and I was embarrassed when she came to see us, that I had only second hand stuff in the worst possible taste.

"Now I'm wondering if there isn't such a thing as being too conciliatory to even the nicest husband. The more I give in to him, the more he expects. And what effect is all this going to have on his character? And will I continue to love a man who never wants me to have my own way about anything, and objects to my spending wedding present money to buy the things it was understood the money was to buy?

"I've cried a good deal over this, and don't want to talk to my mother or grandmother about it. As a disinterested person, will you please answer my letter?

"Unhappy"

The foregoing is a letter much shortened to fit this column. Here is hoping that this young husband and any others who happen to have the same form of jealousy may read and take warning. While the bride never mentions a mother-in-law in any of the half dozen pages she has written to me, it's safe to say this husband has been thoroughly spoiled by his mother or some other adoring relative.

If he wishes to enjoy his golden oak and the adoration of his bride he will try to acquire a little self-discipline. It's one of the unfortunate laws of nature that when a women loves devotedly, she treats a man as she would like him to treat her. But is that the sensible thing to do when the adored one—either husband or wife—is a thoroughly selfish product?

Ministering to that sort of egoism is like piling coal on a fire already raging. Sooner or later, the time is bound to come when the most devoted of partners grows weary of feeding the flame.

In this case the young woman was given two hundred dollars to buy furniture of her own choosing. A little firmness at this time on her part might have been the beginning of a cure. But she accepted the secondhand golden oak, apparently to be obliging.

One thing that every girl should bear in mind is that in the end such docility bores a man. A year or two of yesing such an egoist and he will probably be looking about for some one else.

If the bride has any of her money left, it seems to me that in the interest of her husband's as well as her own happiness, she would do well to spend it as she likes. 'Patient Griselda' is not the model wife she was once considered to be.

LIBRARY CORNER

Pierre Van Paassen, well-known to the Canadian reading public by some three years of articles appearing almost daily in Canadian papers, has written his autobiography "Days of our Years". The writer, reared in a stern Calvinistic atmosphere came to Canada from Holland as a young man and studied at Victoria College. He served as student missionary in the West and on a newspaper in Toronto. The scene moves then to Europe where he wrote vivid glimpses of the World War and of the period immediately following it, whilst employed by the New York Evening World. For fourteen years he has served as correspondent in France, Germany, Morocco, Syria, Palestine, Ethiopia and Spain. His book, like his articles, reflects the political events of those years, some of the personalities involved and his own reaction of the stream of current history. After the termination of his connection with the Toronto Star, in 1936, he became a strenuous partisan of the Jews in their struggle against the Arabs in Palestine and was mentioned by a committee of Jewish journalists in the United States as one of ten Christians who had done most to promote understanding between Jew and Gentile. The book is a fine contribution to the field of biographies of correspondents through its fine style, its assessment of events, and the strong humitarian note which pervades its pages.

Sometime about 1900, Bertha Damon and her little sister, left orphans by the death of their mother, were turned over to Grandma Griswold to be reared. "Grandma Called it Carnal" is her picture of life on the Puritanical Connecticut home. Life there was governed by two philosophies—Grandma was a disciple of Thoreau and advocated plain living, and she detested anything in the way of modern conveniences, listing under this category such things as stoves, kerosene lamps and running water. The book in a series of informal witty essays draws a character sketch of Grandma and pictures the life led by the two small girls. Amy Loveman Saturday Review of Literature says "Grandma is more than amusing or odd or even striking. She is a figure of significance in the pattern of American life. She reserves a wide circle of acquaintances and I hope she gets it."

Two slim volumes should be of value to the man or woman desirous of speaking clearly, pleasantly and well. Archibald Hart in "Twelve Ways to Build a Vocabulary" tells the reader how to get over an attack of weary words by supplying the missing word-vitamins. He makes vocabulary-building a game and adventure that will appeal to all ages.

The book will prove useful for consulting at odd moments and the vocabulary games at the end of the book will provide amusing quizzes for the hostess. The Stars Say—

For Sunday, June 4

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a rather conventional one, with but little stimuli for other than the day's customary avocations. These accent the social, domestic and affectional angles of human interest. While there may be a decided inclination to activity and to stirring about, there also are dangers in such attempts. Be careful in travelling.

Those whose birthday it is may expect only a fair degree of activity during the year, the energies and interests being most favorably aspected in connection with domestic, social or emotional functions. In change or travel it would be wise to be more than ordinarily cautious.

A child born on this day may be fairly active and energetic, but it may prove difficult to get along with because of its rather erratic, changeable and variable temperament. However, it may have certain social popularity.

For Monday, June 5

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a fairly breath-taking one, with the presage of startling and unforeseen developments of an unpredictable nature. There may be bewildering situations, agitating and confusing as well as of deep and curious origin. With all the devastating action there may be delays, obstacles and frustrations to be successfully managed if romance and adventure hold their own.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden and surprising adventures, with startling developments of obscure or mysterious origin. Unique and curious matters rise to baffle and confuse, and they are attended by stubborn obstacles, postponements and disappointments. With these resolutely managed, there is every prospect of high adventure and probably sensational romance. Beware of "vaulting ambitions" and try to maintain poise.

A child born on this day may have extraordinary equipment, mentally, emotionally and spiritually, to accomplish great deeds. Its progress may be conspicuous in unusual lines, unless it be defeated by overzealous ambitions.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

CHAPTER XXII.

The strumming of the banjo, the low, harmonious voices of the boys singing songs that had now become familiar to Jan, the flickering firelight, the dark sky with its twinkling stars—it was all so romantic, and yet so real.

As she watched the boys sprawled about the fire, her thoughts ran back over the last two weeks.

Peter Hathaway had arrived the first week in June — arrived with Hugh Parker and three other students, in three canoes packed with supplies. Jan had stood on the bank of the stream, with Rex beside her, the hair on his back bristling at sight of strangers.

Peter had been nonplussed to find her there.

"What are you doing here?" he had demanded. "Sight-seeing?"

Only a nod had been her reply, but there had been imps of mischief dancing in her blue eyes.

"This is no place for a girl—alone even with that dog."

"Probably not, but Rex and I are here, and we've got some gold, and we're having a swell time."

"Well, I suppose that means I'll have to keep an eye on you."

"Nice of you, Peter," she had told him. "It has been kind of lonesome, even with Red Buckner dropping in as often as he could."

"Red? Oh, he's still here? Good!"

Peter had come back that evening to invite her to join him and the boys around their campfire. It had been the beginning of nightly visits. He and the boys treated her as one of them, she inwardly rebelled against it, for she wanted Peter to realize that she was a girl—a very special girl.

Now, she smiled into the fire. How wonderful her life here was—the days of hard work followed by evenings of happy companionship . . .

Peter was speaking to her.

"What did you say?" she asked. "I'm sorry. Dreaming," and she leaned toward him.

His hand rested lightly on her shoulder. "I said it was time to be making tracks downstream."

She nodded, and offered him her hands as he sprang up. Without effort, he raised her to her feet, and they slipped out of the flickering firelight into the shadows of the pine trees.

Moss and pine needles underfoot made a cushiony carpet for their feet and scented the air they breathed. A full moon slowly sailed through the dark sky.

Peter caught her hand and swung it as they walked along in silence. Rex made a sedate rear guard.

What a night for romance, thought Jan. But Peter seemed unmoved. She longed for him to take her in his arms—to tell her he loved her. She became annoyed with his silence.

She knew he was not afraid of her because she was the daughter of Ogden Flagg, for he had an inheritance and a good position, and could probably ask her to be his wife. He simply wasn't interested in a girl who insisted upon making her own way in the world. He disapproved of her being there.

And yet, from the touch of his fingers, she knew he was thinking of her. Anger grew at his refusal to see her as a desirable girl, as one who loved him and wanted to hear tender words from his lips.

As though he guessed her thoughts he suddenly turned and swept her into his arms. He held her breathlessly close, pressing his lips to hers in a long kiss. She responded for a moment, clinging to him.

Then, unaccountably, anger at his kiss and her response to it flowed through her. She struggled, escaped from his arms, and stood facing him, conflicting emotions whipping her.

Swift as lightning, she slapped his face.

He drew back abruptly, his eyes clouded with surprise and dismay. Only then, did she realize what she had done.

"I'm sorry," he apologized quietly, and there was an undercurrent to his voice that told her he would never repeat the offense.

"I'm sorry, too," tumbled from her lips—but the deed was done.

Of one accord, they walked on. Neither spoke a word. The pleasant companionship between them was broken. It would never be the same again, Jan thought—and wondered why she had slapped him.

His good night was curt. He turned on his heel and went off without a backward glance.

Jan went directly into her cabin and sat on the edge of her collapsible cot and wondered some more. Why had she slapped him? She had wanted to be kissed by him—he had piqued her by his apparent lack of interest.

And then, suddenly, to kiss her so fervently! It was as though the moon had suddenly bewitched him, had made him realize that a girl walked at his side. That, she told herself, was why she had slapped him—because she had felt his kiss was an insult, not a compliment. She had felt it was one of those light kisses such as Wylde and Anson gave.

But he hadn't meant it as an insult. She had realized that when she looked into his eyes afterwards. It was too late, then. She had wounded him irreparably by slapping his face. And he was wary enough of girls already! Now there would never be a chance to make him love her.

Everything was over. There would be no more wonderful walks at night along the swiftly flowing stream. He would never make love to her as she had dreamed. . . .

Oh, why had she slapped him—when she had wanted so much to win his love?

CHAPTER XXIII.

Days went on as usual. Peter remained friendly, but never once did he allow a personal conversation to take place between Jan and himself.

In the middle of July, three of the boys departed. Peter and Hugh were now alone, working their claim, getting out the gold necessary to pay for Hugh's senior year.

Then, one morning, as Jan bent over the stream, tilting her pan to and fro with the infinite patience necessary to keep the water swirling, gradually ridding the pan of excess sand and gravel, she looked up, at a movement from Rex, to find Peter entering the clearing.

She paused, in surprise. "Something wrong?" she asked.

"Something grand!" said Peter. "Thought maybe you'd like to help us. Slugs are running from two to six ounces in the riffles of the sluice, and we wondered if you'd take the job of picking them out. Too much for Hugh and me to handle. We'll give you a split."

The sluice on Peter's claim had always intrigued Jan. Six planks had been nailed together to form a twenty-foot sluice box, with a split pine branch to make a set of riffles spiked into the lower section of the sluice. Above the upper end of the box was a perforated sheet-iron plate through which the water of the stream ran.

As Jan and Peter walked hurriedly up to his claim, he explained that the little riffles formed by the pine branch would not stop the big slugs. It would be her job to catch them. Her job! What a thrill!

She worked hard all day, keeping her eyes glued to the split pine branch that was the point of focus. Peter and Hugh joined in her joy whenever she held up another slug and cheered in delight. It was a thrill that would never be repeated in her life in just this same manner—the finding of gold in that sluice box.

For a week, she worked with Peter and Hugh, each night accepting the share they thrust upon her.

More than the happiness over the accumulation of gold in the tin box buried under a corner of her shack, was the knowledge that Peter was more friendly now. He seemed to have put away thoughts of the night she had slapped him. Maybe she could win him after all! Hope rose in her.

A day of few slugs in the sluice box—and Jan realized that her work was done, that she must go back to panning gold on her own claim. She mentioned it frankly to Peter and Hugh, and thanked them for their protests.

"I've a claim of my own, you know, and I can get a couple of dollars a day out of it. I helped here while you needed me, and you amply repaid me. Now I'm going back to my own, and garner my harvest."

As Peter walked back to her cabin with her that night, he said, with admiration in his voice, "You're a darned good sport, Jan."

"You are a good sport, too, Peter. Having you for a friend is something that I shall cherish always."

She held her breath, waiting for his answer. When it came, she felt despair settle over her. It was not the answer she had wanted.

"I'll cherish your friendship, too. I'm enjoying a friendship with a girl not set on romance and a lot of nonsense."

So that was how he felt about it!

"Glad you put me in my place that night," he went on.

"I'm not. That was a rotten thing for me to do. You know, as well as I do, that I wanted you to kiss me that night," she admitted quickly.

"I suppose it had to happen — to knock some sense into our heads. There couldn't be anything more than friendship between us. The girl I marry must be feminine." He smiled ruefully. "She must be an old-fashioned girl, I guess you'd call it. She mustn't want to work, but be satisfied in depending upon me for everything — and love a home."

"I shan't marry until I find a man who would make a pal of his wife," Jan responded. She gave Peter a covert glance but he was not looking at her. "Lots of efficient business girls would adore to have a man to take care of them, to make a home their first interest," she went on, but she knew nothing she could say would make Peter think of her in that light.

Just then, they heard a hum in the sky. They looked up. An airplane with its sailing lights, red, green and white. It circled overhead, and flickered its lights. Red Buckner was signalling "Hail and farewell" to them on his trip through the sky, watching and safeguarding the great forests about them.

He was nice, thought Jan, with his fiery red hair and blue eyes. He'd landed quite often in the clearing below her camp, bringing her much-needed supplies so that she did not have to travel back to town. Red liked her. Red didn't mind that she looked boyish and that her feminine arts were confined entirely to the lunches she had cooked for him.

"Nice fellow," Peter said.

"Mighty nice,' Jan agreed. "But I know others equally nice — maybe nicer."

She smiled archly up at him, then quickly whispered, "Good night, Peter," and hurried into her cabin.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In the beginning, when Jan had first come here, the novelty of her work had been a thrill. That was all gone now. It was serious business making a living reclaiming gold from the sandy bottom of the stream. Her hands were grimy, her black hair cut short, and her face wind-burned. But she had never felt better in her life.

Now, as she sat alone beside her fire, resting after lunch, she wondered what her father would think if he could see her. She felt sure he would be proud of her. She was proud of herself.

She looked upstream quickly — somebody was paddling down. A canoe with two men in it. Peter and Hugh! Both leaving their claim? That was odd! You didn't do that these days, with canoes bearing rather grim-looking characters passing upstream daily.

Peter was paddling, with Hugh propped in the bow among pillows. Jan hailed them and, as the canoe went by, called, "What's wrong?"

"Hugh's hurt!" Peter called back. "Taking him to town. Want anything?"

"Side of bacon and some flour!" she screamed, and saw him wave that he had heard.

She watched the canoe flash out of sight. Tonight would be lonely, tonight and a few more nights.

The next afternoon, having finished her panning for the day, she slung her rifle across her arm and, followed by Rex, started up the narrow path beside the stream. She would look at Peter's claim to see that everything was all right. Three canoes had passed during the day. Someone might be poaching. . . .

She found him, a tall, lean man with rumpled black hair, panning gold on Peter's claim. Coming out of the brush unexpectedly, she startled him. She leveled her rifle.

"Put down that gun, sister, it might go off!" he warned her, in a tone that was a cross between menacing and cajoling.

"That's just what it will do if you don't move on—pronto!"

"And what's eatin' you?" he demanded aggressively.

"You see this claim is staked. Git!" Somehow you talked to a man like this in his own language.

She watched him sullenly place his belongings in his canoe, launch it, and paddle up the stream; watched until he was entirely out of sight.

Why had she done this? Why had she taken such a chance? And then, she assured herself she had taken no chance. Rex had been beside her, and the man could not know that Peter and Hugh were gone for several days.

She wasn't afraid of his parting threat that he would get even with her. And yet—she was a girl, alone at her cabin, protected only by Rex and her guns. . . .

The next day, Jan was restless, could not seem to accomplish things with her usual method and swiftness. She took herself to task, but it did no good.

Then she realized that it was Thursday. This was the day when Red Buckner usually landed his plane in clearing down the stream and spent a few hours with her, drinking her coffee and telling her the news of the outside world that had come to him over the radio and telephone. That was it! She was keyed up because Red was coming. For the first time, she had been lonely on her solitary claim—with both Peter and Hugh away.

But that wasn't the reason for her restlessness. She knew it a few hours later when she looked up from her pan at a warning growl from Rex. There he stood, the tall lean man she had sent away from Peter's claim. His hair was still rumpled, his eyes piercing, and his thin lips twisted in a cruel smile. In his hand, was a gun.

"Reach for the sky, sister—reach quick!" he advised her, and she did.

So! That was what she had been upset about. She had been inwardly worrying about the man who had threatened to come back and get even with her.

"I'll shoot that blasted dog if you don't shut him up!" he said. "And come here—we're going to talk!"

Jan ordered Rex to silence. Obediently, she neared the man. He removed her revolver from its holster, then motioned her to sit down. She sank gratefully on the grass, her knees feeling very weak.

"Everything any good upstream is staked out," he said slowly, his sharp eyes holding hers. "And so I've decided we're going to work this claim together. I know you're here alone. No sense objectin'. You ain't gettin' nowhere with a pan but, with the sluice I'll build, we'll git plenty. Good pickin's in this stream."

Jan met his eyes steadily.

"I've got something to say about it," she stated quietly. "This is my claim and I'm not sharing."

He shook his head. "That's where you're wrong, sister. You're alone and you're needin the help of a strong man. That's me, Hank Willard. I know there's nobody you can call on. By the time you meet up with some fellow that would risk his neck to git you out of here, with me claimin' you're my wife, you'll find I'm quite an attractive fella, and you'll want to stay!"

"Conceit!' snorted Jan, but she could see that he might be good looking, in a crude way, if he were shaved, and neatly dressed.

"Yes," he agreed readily. "Conceit. But I've enough conceit not to go knocking a woman down." There was exaggerated pride in his bearing and words. "I make 'em love me and come crawling to me."

Canada's Harmless Snakes Should Not be Killed States Myrna Karsey of Sims Shows

Trainer of Pythons at Carnival Says They Are Great Destroyers of Rodents and Grubs

LIKES HER WORK

You can have your pet dogs, cats, ponies, lambs and whatnot. You can stay up late at night tinkering with whatever your particular hobby happens to be. You can delve deep into the mysteries of folklore; Sanskrit, the Koran, or ordinary detective novels, if you are inclined toward literature.

But give Myrna Karsey, her snakes and all is well with the world.

Miss Karsey, who mothers African and Indian pythons, cobras and the ordinary garter snake with equal fearlessness is at present with the Sims Greater Shows, now playing here.

She nodded to where her two chief pets, a black African python, fourteen feet of deadly coils, and an eight foot member of the same family stretched lazily in glass-covered enclosures.

"Look at them", she smiled. "The most dangerous snakes in the world if you meet them in their natural habitats, but just like kittens, when tamed."

Pythons Feed Twice Yearly

She reached in the glass enclosure, made a few stroking motions, and sixteen feet of shining black coils wrapped themselves about her body. "There's enough power in these rings to crush four men" she smiled. The head of the python flicked to within a few inches of her face. She never moved a muscle. A forked tongue darted out suddenly from the snake's jaws. She smiled. "He might be getting hungry. It's nearly six months since he had a meal. They only feed twice a year" she added by way of explanation.

"Butcher shops would do little business if they depended on these fellows for their business. They won't eat meat that has been killed. It has to be alive, or no meal."

Miss Karsey has been connected with her novel business for a number of years. She was attached to the Washington D. C. Zoo for a long time, looking after its snakes and "reps" as she terms them.

She studied extensively in New York City, and can explain the nature habits and other interesting data of practically every snake known, at a moment's notice.

"People have the wrong conception of snakes, especially our native ones," she smiled. "If the harmless little fellows we find in our rural areas were allowed to live, the country would be free of a lot more of its rodents and crop-destroying parasites than it is."

"A child will run away from a small snake in deadly fear. Yet it will fondle a strange alley-cat or dirty little puppy with no thought of danger. Yet the cat and pup carry more disease germs than does a common snake."

Cobra Venom Useful

The venom of the hooded cobra has lately made the headlines of medical journals of the country since its recently discovered value as drug, Miss Karsey said. She quoted an instance of a young boy in a New York hospital whose condition is such that the snake venom only can be administered to him. "It does not stupefy the brain", she said.

A friend of Miss Karsey ships hundreds of the dreaded rattlesnakes each year from his farm in Texas. "Their poison is "milked" from them, and used for medicinal purposes. And the meat of the snake, believe it or not is sold to canneries where it is preserved and considered a table delicacy by many prominent families of the Southern States."

"Don't step on the heads of the next harmless little snake you see wriggling through a field or ditch" she said. "He won't hurt a thing, and is one of the unsung heroes of the farm that is assisting the agriculturist in clearing his acres of crop-destroying grubs.

The black python about her neck stirred itself. Its jaws opened slowly in what seemed to be a prodigious yawn. Again that forked tongue flickered in and out with lightning-like rapidity.

"He's getting tired, and wants a rest", she smiled. With practised hand she removed the heavy shining body from about her neck and gently placed it in its enclosure.

"Perhaps tomorrow, he will dine on two live chickens, but first he must have a bath. He shed his skin a few days ago, an occurrence that happens every six weeks. Here, you may have a piece, if you wish" tossing a lacy piece of snakeskin that resembled a delicately-patterned fabric, in the newspaperman's general direction. "It isn't of any commercial value, but it's an actual snakeskin," she laughed as she turned away.

Picton—Mayor Harry Stewart of Kingston addressed the Kiwanis Club at their Thursday noon luncheon. He told of the work of arranging for the visit to the Limestone City of the King and Queen. This had been a difficult task yet all had run smoothly. The curtailed visit was a great disappointment but instead of a stay of 35 minutes, there had been one of ninety minutes, something which had not happened elsewhere.

The speaker was glad to see that the visit had driven the dictators from the front pages of newspapers and he thought that the visit would cement the ties of loyalty in this country.

Mayor McKibbon thanked the speaker and voiced the town's thanks to the city for the courtesies extended to Picton people during the visit.

Fire destroyed a large tenant house on the Bert Bolton farm east of Picton on Tuesday. All furniture was removed but some clothing was lost. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harrison who were eating dinner at the time. They did not know the roof was in flames until aroused by Mrs. Bert Bolton. Cause of the fire is not known.

The Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I. O. D. E. held a bridge and fashion show in the armouries Thursday night. G. E. Fraser sons supplied lovely gowns which were modelled by local young ladies. Miss Barbara Lipson gave several pretty solo dances. Lovely spring flowers decorated the building.

George Publow has purchased a 32-foot sailing boat, built by a Kingston firm. It is one of the finest craft of its type ever seen here. It will sleep four persons and is as fully equipped as any home. Besides sails, it has an auxiliary motor.

Teas at the Golf Club are being resumed next Wednesday. They were discontinued two years ago.

Two teachers have resigned from the staff of the Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute. They are Miss Ruth Ellis and Miss Dorothy Leavens, who have taught commercial. Both resigned in order to be married. There have been no successors appointed as yet.

There was a large crowd at the Sandbanks pavilion on Wednesday evening, for the opening dance. Sid Fox and his LaSalle Hotel orchestra of Kingston provided music. The same night, the opening dance was held at the Wonderland Beach pavilion at the Sandbanks, where Dan Fairman and his Top Hatters provided music. On Monday night, the opening dance at the Cedar Park Beach, at the Outlet, music was furnished by Jimmie Davies and his swing band.

Picton Collegiate athletes have been preparing for their visit to Belleville on Saturday when they will take part in the district Secondary School field day at the O.S.D.

The soldiers, who are camping at Point Petre have entered a team in the Kiwanis Softball league, and as a result the schedule has been revised. The Picton All Stars lead the league at present, with Bloomfield Tigers in second place, the Bloomfield Royals in third, the Times in fourth, followed by Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Morden's Bakery and Dominion Stores. The soldiers will play extra games in order to equalize their opportunity to win the league. Large crowds are attending the games, at which a collection is taken by the Kiwanis Club to assist them in sending boys to a summer camp.

Picton hardball team, enthused over their victory over Napanee, is holding nightly practises for the visit here next Wednesday evening of the Belleville team. A record crowd is expected as a result of their one-sided win early in the week.

Richards Keeps Record Clean In Local Ring by Defeating Denchuck in Straight Falls

Step-Over Leglock and Toe Hold Makes Polish Boy Say "Uncle"

APPLIED TWICE

Gyroffy Pounds Out Straight Fall Victory over Jack Steele

George Richards, Jewish wrestling champion, remained undefeated in a local grappling ring when he forced Johnnie Denchuck, the Polish-born New York heavy to concede defeat in the main bout of last night's professional wrestling show at the Hume Arena. Richards gained a painful step-over leglock and toe hold on Denchuck to win the first fall of the main attraction and left the Polish lad writhing with pain on the mat and upon their return to the ring Richards repeated the dose forcing Denchuck to cry 'uncle' for the second consecutive time and Richards was declared the winner. Now the local promoters are looking for a grappler to beat Richards, who recently pleased the fans by eliminating Al Dunlop from the local grappling picture.

Entire Show Good.

Taken on the whole the show was productive of some of the best wrestling seen during the current season, all three bouts being profusely applauded by the 500 patrons present. In the main attraction Denchuck was announced as weighing 202 pounds but looked much lighter than Richards at 212 pounds. The Polish lad proved an early and eager aggressor with a series of armlocks while Richards resorted to flying head scissors in retaliation. The bout was filled with clean wrestling, speed and science, with Denchuck introducing a new acrobatic hold as he actually stood on his head after gaining a leg stretch and for a considerable period held Richards at his mercy in this manner. The hold was roundly applauded by the patrons. Subsequently Richards gained his punishing step-over leg-lock and toe hold to force Denchuck to concede the first fall in exactly twelve minutes.

Denchuck resorted to rough methods to open the second round, but Richards worked prolifically on the Polish lad's sore leg and after four minutes of fast grappling Richards again applied the step-over leg-lock and toe hold to be declared winner and chalk up his second consecutive ring victory in Belleville in as many appearances since returning to Canada from a successful ring tour of the U.S.A.

Gyroffy Rough.

Johnny Gyroffy, the Hungarian heavy from Winnipeg, returned to a local ring to literally pound his opponent, Jack Steele of Buffalo, into submission, Steele substituting for Al Dunlop. Steele was outweighed 20 pounds, but drew the favor of the fans and left the ring in defeat amid loud cheers. However, Gyroffy's extra weight subsequently took its toll and he won the initial fall in 15 minutes with a heavy body slam. At times Gyroffy drew the wrath of the fans upon his head as he tossed the lighter Steele about with gusto and abandon. Early in the second round Steele gained an Indian deathlock, but apparently was not heavy enough to hold his advantage as both grapplers rolled from the ring and commenced a slugging match outside the squared circle that took the tried efforts of Referee Faux to terminate. Once back in the ring Gyroffy flattened Steele with two successive and hard flying mares and pinned him with a press after 22 minutes of speed and scientific ring endeavours. Steele left the ring amid the loud applause and approval of the fans for his noble effort, however.

In the opening bout Joe Conkle, formerly known as the Red Devil and most despised in Belleville, outgroaned, out-roughed and eventually won over Emil Daley of Windsor with a press after 22 minutes of tossing, rolling and generally roughing throughout. Conkle's efforts were frowned upon, but the bout was productive of occasional good wrestling, especially with the speed displayed by Daley and the ferociousness of Conkle. Cliff Faux of Belleville refereed all bouts and despite contrary opinions had the show in hand throughout.

CINCINNATI REDS SCORE 4 IN 11TH TO DEFEAT BEES

INCREASE MARGIN

Hank Greenberg Back in Home Run Race by Belting 11th. of Year

By JUDSON BAILEY

Playing Cincinnati Reds these days is like fiddling with a time bomb—it's going to explode but nobody knows how soon.

In Boston yesterday Whitey Moore and Milt Shoffner locked in a scoreless pitching duel for ten innings and then the Reds burst forth with four runs in the eleventh. A single, a walk and another single by Frank McCormick brought one run and Ernie Lombardi followed with his ninth home run.

This 4-0 fracas was identical in pattern with the 9-4 decision Cincinnati took Thursday when the Reds rammed across five runs in the thirteenth on a single with the bases loaded followed by Harry Craft's home run.

The latest conquest was Cincinnati's seventh victory without defeat against the Bees. Moore was in control all the way, spacing nine hits and giving one walk. Shoffner was even stingier for the first nine innings during which he allowed five hits, but the pace was too fast.

In the day's only other National League contest St. Louis Cardinals dropped another game behind the Reds by absorbing an 8-2 trouncing at New York. The Giants broke a string of fifteen scoreless innings with a five-run splurge off Curt Davis in the first.

American League.

New York Yankees just about scared four Cleveland pitchers out of their wits in the course of their devastating 17-5 massacre of the Indians. They rapped out eighteen hits even though the tribe's hurlers tried so hard to keep from giving any good balls they walked fourteen men. Atley Donald scattered eleven hits to get his fifth victory without a setback.

Boston Red Sox dropped an 8-5 slugging spree to Detroit Tigers. Manager Joe Cronin accounted for three runs with two homers, but couldn't catch the Tigers singlehanded. Hand Greenberg got back into the major league home run lead with his eleventh and Pinky Higgins also hit for the circuit.

Chicago White Sox, outhit 8-11, nevertheless succeeded in evening their series with Washington by beating the Senators 8-5. Gee Walker singled in the tying run in the seventh and Ollie Bejma singled with the bases loaded in the eighth for the margin of runs.

The St. Louis Browns game with the Philadelphia Athletics was rained into a doubleheader today.

Edmonton Grads Defeated by Chicago But Retain Trophy

Edmonton, June 3.—(CP) — For the second time this year, Edmonton Grads had a defeat chalked up against their brilliant basketball record.

In the third game of the challenge series for the Underwood Women's International Trophy, the Chicago Queen Anne Aces beat grads 35-33 last night but the Edmonton girls retained possession of the trophy. It was a total-point series and grads won 120-98.

The victory over Grads was the second gained by Coach Harry Wilson of Chicago in his 14 challenges for the trophy grads won on its donation in 1933. His other, in 1929, broke a string of 78 straight victories for Grads.

"Ding" Luffman Does Nice Job of Relief Hurling for Two Frames

The Point Anne "Cementmen" remained undefeated in the City Softball League after coming from behind in an eighth inning rally to defeat Corbys A.C. 15 to 12 at the Flats last evening. In downing Chuck Barnett's nine the Ox Point nine moved into a tie with the Shell "Oilers" for the league leadership.

Garnering eight runs in the second stanza the Corbys squad took a commanding lead which they held nicely until the eighth when the potent bats of the Cementmen spoke with a vengeance. With three on base Whalen lashed out a singing single to score two while Scott then stepped to the plate and rapped out a double that sent two more across the home base, giving Point Anne a three run margin that they protected as "Ding" Luffman was rushed to the hilltop to relieve "Ski" Brant, who had hurled steady ball for the winners with the exception of the second frame. Harris hurled for the Corby's and yielded thirteen safeties as he walked five. The Corby's only garnered one hit and no runs off Luffman in two frames, while they collected an even dozen bingles off the deliveries of Brant, as the hits were evenly divided. Whitehead, Whalen, Bennett, Reid and Cole supplied the fielding features, the latter retiring the side in the fifth.

The Cementmen hitting prowess was evenly divided with all nine coming through in the clutches. Whitehead and Bennett hit triples while these two and Gaulin poled out doubles. Cole, Cy Barriage and McMartin all hit for the circuit for the Corby's, who also collected four two-base blows, Reid, J. Barriage, Knott and Cole getting the two-base blows. Cy Barriage led both squads with three hits in five tries.

The greens should be in good shape on Wednesday. They have shown wonderful improvement in the last few days.

Madoc hold their annual men's rinks on Wednesday. This is a provincial game and we should be represented.

The new players are turning out well. It is a great encouragement to the officers of the club.

The bowlers of our club will be glad to learn that Bill Whitty of Stirling, is showing great improvement in health and we all hope that he will be able to roll a few before the season is over.

To our old bowlers If you see a new member not bowling get him in the game, even if you have to drop out yourself. We have the earmarks of a wonderful club this year, the members are coming; hold them.

Will the officers of the club kindly keep me informed of their activities a few days ahead so that I can use this column to the best advantage.

WINGS STRETCH WINNING STREAK TO FIVE STRAIGHT

Raffensberger Hurls Five-Hit Ball and Helps Cause With Two Doubles

TORONTO LOSES

Leafs Appear to Have the Cellar Berth Cinched for This Season

The way the International League ball clubs go about winning and losing ball games with no great consistency in either direction, the only team reasonably sure of its standing from week to week seems to be Toronto.

Judging from their record alone, it looks as if the Leafs had bought the league cellar outright and plan to spend the rest of the summer in the cool depths. They have won only 12 games and lost 28 for a .300 average. There's a series of close battles going on above them and the teams involved act very tough about it when Toronto comes around.

Montreal Royals, seventh in the standing, knocked off the Leafs twice in succession to gain a 6½ game standing over Toronto and wind up only two percentage points behind Syracuse Chiefs.

Rochester stretched its latest winning streak to five straight last night by beating Buffalo 12-1. But the second-place Jersey Giants, only a game behind, kept pace by edging out Baltimore 7-6. Newark dropped a ninth-inning decision to Syracuse 2-1 and that was necessary if the Chiefs were to hold sixth place, as Montreal conquered Toronto 5-3.

Ken Raffensberger was the biggest factor in the Red Wings' triumph. Besides pitching steady ball, he knocked two doubles to score two runs and drive in another. Jersey City, aided by Al Glossop's three-run homer, rolled up a 7-0 lead over Baltimore and almost "blew" it before Frank Pearce rescued the weakening Roy Joiner. Jake Mooty of Syracuse and George Washburn of Newark put on a great mound duel, with the former giving only five hits. It was decided with two out in the ninth when Len Kahny singled to bring in Dallas Warren.

But the strangest struggle of them all was at Toronto. Carl Fischer, veteran southpaw recently acquired from Baltimore, gave only eight hits and fanned nine. But the Royals stole six bases, two runners stealing home, and Crist Hartje belted a homer. Finally in the ninth Montreal broke a 3-3 tie, scoring twice on a pass, two singles and a wild pitch.

British Polo Team Ready For Series For Westchester Cup

New York, June 3 (CP)— Polo euthisiasts of two continents—and those whose knowledge of the game is confined to reading Kipling's short story, the Maltese Cat — will flock tomorrow to International Field on nearby Long Island to watch the opening game of Great Britain's challenge for the Westchester Cup.

A link with Britain's 1914 team—the squad that won and a month or two later rode off to war—was established with the announcement that Colonel Vivian Lockett will be referee, sitting in the stands. On the field will be umpires William Post and E. W. Hopping.

WALKING ON AIR? IT'S EASY TO A BROAD JUMPER

At first glance this may appear a trifle queer but on closer inspection it proves to be a movement-by-movement pictorial description of a broad jumper at work. Anson Perina winner of the American inter-collegiate championship recently, is the demonstrator and his "walking on air" is no mental state, brought about by some pleasant thought. As can be seen he gets off with a mighty push and then "walks" through the air as every muscle plays its part in getting that extra fraction of an inch into the distance.

A NIP AND TUCK SCRAP CONTINUES FOR LEADERSHIP

Oswego and Amsterdam Maintain Margin from Rest of Field

BISONS WIN

Art Calhoun, Former Hurler in Belleville, Allows Only Four Hits in Win

(By The Canadian Uress)

In progress a week, a nip and tuck battle continued today for leadership in the Canadian-American Baseball League after victories last night by Oswego's Netherlands and Amsterdam Rugmakers maintained the former's two-game advantage.

Blasting out a 21-hit barrage for an 18-3 triumph over the lowly Utica Braves, Rugmakers found their effort stalemated by Oswego 6-5 extra-frame win at Ottawa over Senators. It was Nets' 18th victory in 23 games.

Other wins of the night went to Cornwall Bisons, who rode behind Art Calhoun's four-hit twirling to a 4-2 decision over Ogdensburg Colts; and Gloversville, who took the visiting Rome Colonels into camp 9-8.

Left behind 3-0 in the first inning by Ottawa, Nets caught up in the sixth and then went ahead to lead 5-3 in the first of the ninth. Senators tied it up in their half, but the pace-setters took the game in the 10th

Registering a perfect night at bat—five for five —Cleo Diehl paced the Amsterdam assault. Manager Sawyer took a hand in his team's whirlwind offensive and was credited with a pair of wallops, one a soaring 325-foot homer over the right field barrier.

At Cornwall, Bisons gave the visitors little chance. They jumped on pitcher Frank McNally in the first for four hits and a brace of runs and after that were never in danand after that were never in rallied for two markers.

It was a battle of hits and errors at Gloversville where the homesters ended a six-game losing streak. Glovers had 11 safeties and three errors, while Colonels drew nine wallops and were charged with a half dozen costly misplays.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Glancing oer the ages of the Belleville intermediates we find Coach Wilkins fielded a team on Thursday evening with narry a player over 22 years of age and an average age of slightly over 20 years. Only Weeks, Collins and Empson had seen previous ball service in the intermediate ranks and for only last season at that. It would appear as though an average age of 20 is slightly too young to compete with more experienced clubs such as Napanee and Picton and therefore it has been suggested that Coach Wilkins endeavour to line-up one or two veterans to steady his youthful charges in the clutches. Youth will be served, but competitive teams need some experience in the line-up to settle the younger players when the pressure is applied by the opposition. Incidentally Harold "Twigg" Woodley made a splendid suggestion during Thurzay night's game, which might tend to materially assist the attendance. "Advertise these baseball games for 6.30 p.m. and even if they are a few moments late in arriving, the fans will be able to grab a snack and see most of the games," suggested "Twigg" to which we add our amen.

For the entertainment, amusement and general aquatic education of the citizens of Belleville, the Yacht Club will take interested persons sailing on the bay tomorrow afternoon. President Maurice Callaghan will have his two craft, the After You boats, Harry Semark's Alaska and other smaller sailing punts will be at Victoria Park tomorrow afternoon to take passengers sailing on the bay gratis. "We are simply trying to prove to the citizens the fine amusement, recreation and enjoyment that can be gained in sailing. We cordially invite the public to sail with us tomorrow and I can assure them no larks or recklessness will be tolerated, but merely orthodox sailing for the education of the public," stated President Callaghan today as he added that the entire Yacht Club fleet was to be out in full force, weather premitting.

A likely looking lad, who told us his name was Louis Bourque (pronounced Burke) dropped into the sports department today seeking the whereabouts of a baseball team in this area. "I'm working on a farm nearby, but back home in Edmonton I played both baseball and hockey," he revealed. We directed him to the Fair Grounds.

The surprise team of the City Softball League is doubtless the Point Anne "Cementmen" of 1939. Shorn of last year's outstanding players, the Ox Point nine was not given a tumble in the preseason predictions of standing, but today they are proudly perched in the driver's seat leading the parade along with the Shell "Oilers." Incidentally the league leadership will no longer be tied after Monday night, as the "Oilers" journey to Point Anne for their initial appearance in the cement village and we understand the villagers to the east are preparing a formal (?) greeting for Frank Sedore skipper of the Oilers. Sedore headed the cementmen last year, get it.

Last night Bud Gaulin's Cementmen proved they are not front runners. Facing a seven run deficit in the third inning, the result of Corby's eight run rally in the second, the Ox Point nine kept punching away and slowly hauled down the margin until they were only two behind in the seventh. The blow off came in the eighth as Whalen and Scott came through with timely hits and five runs were scored. Gaulin also used good judgment in rushing Luffman to the box as Point Anne forged ahead.

It may be giving away secrets and we may get a verbal lashing from George Richards, the Jewish wrestling champ. but in fairness to George; we feel the wrestling fans of this community should know he took a financial beating to appear in Belleville last night, despite the fact he won his bout. Richards was offered considerably more money to appear in London last night, but he kept his promise of two weeks ago to appear in Belleville and defend his main bout winnings, something which we feel he should be commended on. "I do not think it fair to leave my Belleville friends in the lurch," George told us, but we shook our head and wondered if we'd do the same, especially when it meant the difference of a quarter century note. Incidentally the reason Frank Slavick wasn't present last night was because he was married yesterday and his wife naturally wished the conventional trip to Niagara Falls. Two features of last night's grappling bouts were—the fair sex were satisfied in George Richards' victory and the general attendance liked the work of [illegible] Steele, who Johnny Gyroffy beat. Steele would be a welcomed opponent of some lighter man on a later card.

The brain trust behind the Corbys A.C. is said to have been burning the midnight oil and long into the small hours of this a.m. in an effort to decipher exactly what is wrong with the highly rated Corbys, who Frank Sedore says: "Ain't so hot." From afar there are only two things the matter with the Corbys squad one they must know themselves as the result of a recent injury and we wonder if Chuck Barnett ever heard of the old proverb—"Too many cooks spoil the broth."

Hither and Yon—Sometimes it isn't to the best advantage to be with an all-star outfit like the Yankees....Take the case of Joe Gallagher, of the Yankees, a player good enough for any average major league team....Marse Joe McCarthy wanted additional pitching strength, so he ships Gallagher to Newark in exchange for pitcher Marius Russo. Gallagher refused to report to the Bears, but what's a feller to do in such cases, except to grin and carry a grouch?....Ralph (Highpockets) McCabe was credited with the win as Copper Cliff beat Creighton Mines 13 to 3 yesterday, McCabe being the relief hurler and Johnny Turner, formerly of Oshawa, the losing moundsman.. McCabe is a son of Game Warden Herb McCabe of Belleville... The Giants upset the Cards, so the Reds could enjoy a larger lead.

HOPELESS VIGIL KEPT BY WOMEN

Relatives and Friends of Men Aboard Thetis Never Leave Yards

Birkenhead, June 3 (CP)—A fearful, virtually hopeless vigil which is traditional for womenfolk of those who go down to the sea in ships was kept on a dingy waterfront street today by relatives of men aboard the submarine Thetis.

In the dull dawn the women stood waiting as they had been waiting with but few breaks for more than 24 hours. They could not realize what had happened, that their men would not come back. They just stood and looked at the door of the timekeeper's office in the Cammell Laird shipyard plant.

When Sydney Woodward, a shipyard official, came out of the door shortly after midnight and announced there was no hope, a man on the edge of the crowd shouted, "what about your experts?" Women near him rushed indignantly at him. That was the only immediate reaction.

Then slowly the optimism dissolved. Women started to cry. A man, brother of one of the men down in the Thetis, started to pace up and down. His weather beaten face was wet with tears.

The street is cold and grim. A big gray fence separates it from Cammell Laird's sprawling shipyard which, in turn, is as cheerless as a mine when a disaster signal has blown. It is very quiet outside. Occasionally a car comes up and the big gates open. Even the mumble of conversation is stilled in the cold.

SIR P. SASSOON,

His father, Sir Edward Sassoon, also sat as Conservative M. P. for Hythe from 1899 to 1912 and between them they represented the division for an unbroken period of 40 years. His mother was a daughter of Baron Gustave de Rothschild.

When Sir Philip entered Parliament he was 23 and the youngest man in the House. He gave parties for Royalty and was said to be the foremost Jew in English society.

Visited Ottawa

Sir Philip visited Ottawa in the autumn of 1938, flying a United States army transport plane, and had a narrow escape from injury on landing. As he stepped aground at Uplands Field he almost backed into the swinging propeller of the big tri-motored plane but a member of the welcoming group pulled him away by the coat lapel.

During the war he was private secretary to Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-Chief of the British armies in France. After the Armistice he became Parliament private secretary to the Minister of Transport from 1919 to 1920 and then, until 1922, to Prime Minister David Lloyd George. He occupied the post of Under-Secretary for Air in the Baldwin Government from 1924 to 1929 and again the National Government from 1931 to 1937, when he was named First Commissioner of Works.

Carried Out Tour

In 1928 Sir Philip carried out a 17,000-mile air tour from England to India and back which had as its main object the testing in different temperatures and climatic conditions of one of the latest types of flying boats.

A similar air tour which he undertook in 1934 was one of the longest ever made by a Minister. Flying by Imperial Airways or in R.A.F. machines, Sir Philip visited R.A.F. stations in Egypt and India, going as far east as Singapore.

The family fortune was founded by Sir Philip's great grandfather, David Sassoon, who was born in Bagdad and emigrated to Bombay. His eldest son, the first baronet, became head of the firm of David Sassoon and Sons, merchants and bankers, of London and Bombay.

FALSE IN DETAIL

Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound) said Col. Drew had refused to give evidence at the Royal Commission but "he comes here to escape the Bible." Karl Homuth (Lib. Waterloo Suth) said that before it was known Col. Drew was to be called, it was agreed that witnesses should not be sworn.

General LaFleche charged that Col. Drew in his evidence dealt with secret information.

"I tell you that the witness dealt with a secret matter and that time I had a memorandum in my possession asking me to see that that was not disclosed," he said.

Charges Denied

General LaFleche denied "not as a duty but as the act any decent-minded man feels he ought to take in casting back such horrible insinuations, such horrible accusations, such horrible charges, that Defence Minister MacKenzie had influenced him on any evidence in connection with the contract negotiations.

General LaFleche said that if Col. Drew meant what General LaFleche interpreted his evidence to mean then "I brand it absolutely false in every respect."

General LaFleche said his interpretation of Col. Drew's evidence was that Mr. MacKenzie had given him (LaFleche) instructions as to how he should act, think and recommend in regard to the Bren contract with the John Inglis Company, Limited, Toronto.

"If that was what was meant, I brand it absolutely false in every respect," he said.

"To the best of my belief before God," was General LaFleche's answer to Mr. McGreer's question as to whether his evidence before the Royal Commission and the Committee was "based on facts and is the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

DUNNING DEFENDS

Later in the day Mr. Pouliot demanded retraction of the word "vile" after he had looked it up in a dictionary. "If he does not withdraw I apply to him all that is in the dictionary and to his deputy minister. He is just a coward," Mr. Pouliot declared.

Mr. Dunning jumped to his feet to say "coward" was unparliamentary and Speaker Pierre Casgrain agreed.

"I will withdraw it if he will and he should set a good example if he wants the rules to be observed," said Mr. Pouliot.

Has No Foundation Claim

"I am not expert in conveying my thoughts which may be unparliamentary in themselves in language which is parliamentary," said Mr. Dunning. "My honorable friend is capable of doing that. What I said this morning I really meant. I believe the honorable member was slandering a civil servant who by virtue of his position is unable to reply and I stated I knew of my own knowledge that the slander has no foundation. That I cannot qualify."

The House was about to go on with debate on the Central Mortgage Bank Bill when M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar) wanted to know if the epithet applied to the minister had been withdrawn.

"I understand the member for Temiscouata to say he would withdraw if the minister would say something," said Speaker Casgrain. "The Minister has explained his point regarding the question of privilege. I would think the incident would be closed."

The incident had its origin when in opposing the Mortgage Bank Bill Mr. Pouliot said: "I cannot understand how it is that the big boss of Dominion finance should be the very one who has wrecked an old, reputable concern by unsound investments."

Libellous Outside House

Mr. Dunning replied: "On behalf of a civil servant who cannot speak for himself I must object to what, if said outside this House, would be distinctly libellous and what to my personal knowledge and the knowledge of every member of the Government is wholly untrue.

"With respect to the Deputy Minister who has been so vilely slandered by the member for Temiscouata I can say that he, in the discharge of his important duties, has the confidence of every member of the Government from the Prime Minister down. We have full knowledge of his record and complete confidence in him."

The debate subsided when the speaker decided both had withdrawn the offending phrases.

Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. St. Lawrence-St. George) attacked the Mortgage Bill as unjust and immoral, as a "racket" in which the debtor who should and could pay his just debts was to have part of his obligations assumed by the state, to be borne by all the taxpayers.

Stevens Condemns Measure.

Hon. H. H. Stevens (Con. Kootenay East) condemned the measure as the proposal of an opportunist government, "not seeking to solve the great problems with which we are confronted, but rather seeking to get away from the distress and perplexities of the moment by covering the problem with palliatives and temporary remedies."

"I submit that this measure, together with such measures as the 70-cent wheat bill, the cheese bill, the salt fish bill and other measures of that kind, is subversive of sound principle and is in utter disregard of the ultimate effects that this legislation will bring. Such legislation has within it the germs of destruction of some of the soundest principles of national character which form the basis of our national life."

ROYAL VISIT

Three times police had to move quickly to control the over-enthusiastic crowds. First it was at the Indian encampment on Portage Avenue; again at the Legislative buildings and finally at night when their Majesties were leaving the Macdonald Hotel after the dinner.

More than 500 emergency troops were called out to control the dense crowds that jammed the square in front of the hotel.

When Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Edmonton police and veterans failed to hold in the 100-foot square opening in front of the hotel, troops were called from the barracks and managed to clear a path just wide enough for the royal car to get to the hotel steps.

250 Collapsed

Prime Minister Mackenzie King left his car about 25 feet from the hotel entrance in an effort to arrive more quickly but the crowd closed suddenly and he had to push vigorously through the tightly-packed people. More than 250 collapsed before the King and Queen appeared on the Mezzanine balcony at 9.42 p.m. and remained there for 2½ minutes.

An estimated 100,000 visitors came to Edmonton to greet their Majesties, joining the mighty welcome of the 89,000 population. The city's broad streets gave plenty of room for the crowds but even so there were places where people had difficulty getting through throngs.

The Royal train pulled into Edmonton at 3.25 p.m. (6.25 p.m. EDT), then, after greetings were extended, the Royal couple made the procession through the city with a one-hour stop at the legislative buildings. Returning to the Royal train at 6.28 p.m. they left again to attend the dinner. Their train pulled out at 10.10 p.m., making a seven-hour stop during the night at nearby Clover Bar en route to northern Saskatchewan.

Province's Welcome.

At the legislative buildings, Premier Aberhart read the province's welcome and the King's reply was handed to a government official. Mayor J. W. Fry submitted the city's greetings. Nine men of the army, seven of them holders of the Victoria Cross, were presented at the ceremony on the steps and Marie Stacey, nine-year-old "Cinderella" from the Kiwanis Home, presented the Queen with a bouquet of flowers.

Inside the Legislative Assembly chamber, newly-carpeted in green with new portraits of their Majesties on the wall, 175 persons were presented. Later the King and Queen had tea with Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. J. C. Bowen.

Lusty Singing.

Lusty singing of "For they are jolly good fellows" and hearty cheers crowned the dinner tendered by the government with Premier Aberhart and Mrs. Aberhart as host and hostess and guests numbering close to 200. Their Majesties seemed to enjoy the dinner courses.

The sovereigns, when they stopped at an encampment of 1,200 Indians on the procession through the city, received gifts of a gun cast, tobacco pouch and beaded belt, all in buckskin, from six-year-old Rosie Samson. To the beat of tom toms the Indians chanted the National Anthem in the strange Cree language.

Apparently the Indians composed the anthem's words after hearing "Dieu Protege Le Roi", the French-Canadians' "God Save the King".

Here are the words in Cree:

Pay ma che. Oke now
Kay new ways, ta pay ma to cet
Key cho-key-mow
Me yet, sa coo toe waa win
May you may wat, tak
Kinways, Toe Kim ma me yak
Ta a, Pay ma che.

Greeted War Veterans.

Their Majesties made another stop at University Hospital after crossing the half-mile, high level bridge, 157 feet above the North Saskatchewan River, 26 years to the day after the first train moved over the structure. At the hospital they greeted war veterans and children, some suffering from infantile paralysis.

Even at the end of the busy day the Royal couple appeared untired. Their rest spell visit of 24 hours at Jasper National Park made them ready for the strenuous program here. They smiled cheerily and waved to throngs.

Cheers echoed as their Majesties stepped onto the Royal train. They made a memorable picture — the King in his formal dress suit and the Queen in white—as they stood on the observation car and the train slowly moved out of the station.

Anne's Anniversary

By JOSEPH PETERS

When Anne Jenkins returned from her brief stay at the hospital the very first thing she did when she entered the living-room was to tear off the little daily sheet calendar which hung above the spinet desk.

The few days in the hospital had passed uneventfully save that the holes where her tonsils had once been burned occasionally until the nurse put an aspirin tablet on the back of her tongue Thursday. Monday. Sunday—they were all one in the hospital. Quiet, soft-voiced nurses coming into her room now and again with a dish of cracked ice, milk, thermometers—Anne Jenkins had enjoyed the few days better than a vacation. A day or two would have been sufficient, but as long as Harry was to be out of town anybow he had urged her to stay there rather than come home to the lonely apartment.

With her hand yet upraised Anne started. Thursday the fourteenth! Their wedding anniversary! Why, she had completely forgotten it. She had intended to return home sooner, but a telegram from Harry had advised her to remain away from home a little longer.

This morning on the way home he had not mentioned anything about its being their anniversary day. Perhaps he was planning some lovely surprise, she thought with a joy that was almost little girl in a fairy tale-like in its glee

Yes, that must be it! Well, Harry shouldn't be the only one planning surprises!

Anne flew about the house, telephoning for a chicken, hunting up the long satin ribbons she had saved from the wedding decorations for just such days as these, hunting through the radio programs for the evening to see what would be most appropriate to have playing when Harry came home at six o'clock.

Although it was strictly against the rules of the building to keep a dog in the house overnight, just before six c'clock Anne went to the garage down the alley and brought back Cop. Harry's police dog.

In the centre of the dining table where Harry could anticipate it, Anne set a huge butterscotch cake. The chicken was dropped into the frying fat, the potatoes were mashed and whipped to a creamy foam when she heard Harry.

She leaped to the door expectantly.

"Hello, old girl!" he greeted her. "Well. Cop—all dressed up, aren't you? In honor of the return of the missus, eh."

Anne stiffened. In honor of the return of the missus! Harry pulled the dog's ears, started for the living-room and then stopped. "I'd better take the cur back to the garage eh, Anne?" he said. "It's raining now and coming heavier every minute. After dinner I won't feel like trekking down there with him."

"I—I thought we'd let him stay up here all night" Anne said. "Just because it's—" She bit her lip.

It came to her now t t Harry must have forgotten the anniversary. Well, he could forget if he wanted to. She'd bite out her tongue before she'd mention it to him, she decided.

"Yeh and maybe lose the flat!" he jibed. "You're a fine dog, ol' pup, but it's back to the flivver house for you!"

She heard him whistling as he went down the slippery alley. Hastily she tore down the satin ribbons that had decorated the dining-room. Tears of self-pity welled unbidden to her eyes. The neglected wife the forgotten anniversary — oh, the whole business unrolled itself before her eyes like a bolt of ribbon.

Whistling, Harry came upstairs again, washed his hands and came dripping out of the bathroom.

"I don't dare use a company towel, even if it is the first night you're home," he said cheerfully. As he spoke he pulled open the towel drawer into which Anne had stuffed the satin ribbons. "Eh? What's all the ribbon for? Look like a wedding," he muttered, digging deeper for an every-day towel.

It was too much! Even then he did not remember, Anne saw. Dropping into the nearest chair, her head on her arms, Anne wept.

"Well for the love of —" began Harry. "Whassa matter, honey girl?"

"You never remembered our wedding day!" she stormed, forgetful of her self-made promise to bite out her tongue before she would mention the anniversary to him.

"Well, why celebrate it a day early?" he asked mildly. "This is Wednesday, the thirteenth, my brilliant, college-trained wife!"

"It's the fourteenth," she wept.

"So be it, then," he agreed reaching into his pocket for a jewel-case, which he handed to her. "Hey! George!" he yelled at the janitor who was clumping down the back staircase. "What's the date?"

"Thirteenth, sir, Wednesday".

Attaboy!" grinned Harry.

But Anne was picking the daily calendar sheets out of the waste basket. Mmm," she muttered shamefacedly, there's Monday and Tuesday stuck together! And you didn't forget, you old darling!" she ended, throwing herself into Harry's lap to open the jewel case.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, June 3—(AP)—Further mild convalescence was exhibited by the stock market today but the buying pulse was below normal.

While selected steels, motors, rubbers, mail orders and specialties managed to hold gains of fractions to around a point, numerous issues were virtually at a standstill at the closing.

Turnover was about 200,000 shares.

Fairly cheerful share performers were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, American Can, Union Carbide, Zenith Radio, U. S. Rubber, N. Y. Central, Standard Oil of N. J., Loft, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Woolworth. Aside from minor markups in Distillers and C.P.R., most Canadian issues were unchanged. Canada 4s were neglected.

Bonds and commodities followed a narrow trail.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 3—Although trading proceeded at a slow tempo in the final session of the week on the Toronto exchange, prices were marked up generally and the close found gains predominating, especially in the gold share list. Western oils and base metals finished slightly stronger and industrials were steady to firmer. Volume was around 175,000 shares.

McIntyre, Hollinger and Dome chalked up minor gains, Sigma advanced 20 cents to 7.10. Narrow gains were boarded by leading base metals, including Smelters, Nickel and Hudson Bay and Sherritt added a few cents. Waite Amulet held steady at $7. Eldorado firmed 3 cents.

The big oils, Imperial and International Petroleum were soft and the steels posted more losses than gains, offsetting a slightly improved tone in the Utility, food, building and miscellaneous groups. National Grocers pfd. added a half point and Maple Leaf Gardens pfd. added 1¼ to ¾.

The Canadian Car issues declined about 1-4 point.

Moderate trading developed in Home Oil with the prices showing practically no change.

Safe Delivery Rests With Trucker

When the hogs are loaded on the truck the responsibility for their safe delivery rests entirely with the trucker.

A trucker is often required to carry mixed loads of livestock. This practice necessitates the use of partitions. Sows and stags should be partitioned off from straight market hogs. Cattle should be partitioned from all small stock.

These precautions are necessary even if the truck is only lightly loaded.

It is in the best interest of a farmer to patronize the trucker who handles the livestock with care.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of June 2nd, 1939, are as follows:

Butter, Egg Prices Remain Firm

Toronto, June 3. — In sympathy with higher country boards, cheese scored a general advance of ½c per pound during Friday's session of the Toronto open produce market, while graded eggs firmed slightly on top grades, and butter held steady, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Fresh receipts were falling off on the egg market, and prices were steady to firm as offerings appeared to be clearing. Demand was best for top grades. Graded shipments traded at 20c for grade A large, 18c for medium, 15½c for B's and 15c for C grades.

No change occurred in prices on the butter market, with demand about equal to the supply. Trading was fair, but not active, while no selling pressure was evident. Holdings of butter in cold storage in Toronto doubled during the month of May, reflecting the seasonal increase in production, but stocks were 60,000 pounds under a year ago as of June 1. Amount on hand at this date was reported at 1,206,225 pounds compared with 597,234 pounds on May 1 and 1,266,572 pounds a year ago. Yesterday, Ontario creamery solids closed at 21½c for No. 1 grades, and 20¾c for 38 score. Prints moved at previous levels.

Montreal, June 3 (CP)—Cheese, and Quebec butter prices firmed in fairly active trading on open produce markets here Friday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale lots made 21¾c. Receipts: 899 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese was offered at 11c a pound. Receipts: 564 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21c-21½c a dozen for A large; 18½c-19c for A medium; 18c for B large, and 16c for C. Receipts: 617 cases.

JEWISH REFUGEES OFFERED HAVEN

Havana Consul Intercedes for Those Aboard Boat Anchored in Ocean

Havana, Cuba, June 3 (AP) — Nestor Pou, Santo Domingo Consul in Havana, disclosed today that his government offered refuge to 907 German Jewish refugees aboard the German liner St. Louis which sailed from Havana after they had been denied entry into Cuba.

The Consul said, however, he had had no answer to the offer from Luis Clashing, representative here on the Hamburg-Amerika Line. German Jewish refugees in Havana received reports, which they could not confirm, of a wireless message from the St. Louis saying that the ship had anchored about 20 miles from Havana while a final decision was being reached regarding acceptance of answer to Domingo's offer.

The refugees, including 500 women and 150 children, were forbidden to land at Havana because they lacked Cuban consular visas.

Show Concessionaire Surprised When Girl Returns Missing Clocks

Belleville folk must be the most honest in the country, one concessionaire of the Sims Greater Midway shows now playing on the old Cricket Field grounds in aid of the Quinte Bay Beaches Association, will agree.

The popular local employee of a downtown office who dropped her quarter on the counter of one of the midway concessions last evening and spun the lucky wheel was rewarded by the chant: "No 4 wins. Give the lady the thermos jug."

A carton, ostensibly containing one of the shiny, nickel-trimmed jugs was passed over from beneath the counter supply by an assistant and the winner left.

Soon afterward at home the package was unwrapped. Instead of the jug, twelve bed dresser clocks were taken from the excelsior wrappings.

"And you really brought these back?" questioned the booth proprietor a little later as the carton was handed over for exchange.

"Lady," added the concessionaire as he rummaged for the best thermos jug in stock in exchange for the clocks, "we didn't know there were such people left."

Entire Senate And Senators' Wives Are Invited

Will Attend Garden Party Given in Honor of British Rulers

Washington, June 3 (AP) — The home life of a good many United States Senators became somewhat less complicated today when word got around that they and their wives would be able to attend the garden party for King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Nearly half of the 96 members of the senate—and their wives—were omitted from the original list of guests invited by Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, and Lady Lindsay to the party to be given on the Embassy lawn June 8. Many members of the House of Representatives were left out, too. In the main, city chairmen of the standing committees and members of the Foreign Affairs Committees got invitations.

Publicly, the uninvited law-makers professed indifference. But not so their wives. The party for their Majesties promises to be one of the big social events in Washington's history.

At a luncheon meeting of the senate wives, Mrs. John Nance Garner was implored to use her influence with her husband, the Vice President, to have him intercede.

Sir Ronald was the guest of honor at a luncheon on Thursday at the capital, which was attended also by Mr. Garner and several members of Congress. At the suggestion of the Vice President and members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, it was said, the Ambassador agreed to invite the whole senate—and the wives of senators.

SOUTH HASTINGS BASEBALL LOOP TO OPEN JUNE 9

Organization Meeting for League Held at Foxboro Friday Night

FOUR TEAMS ENTER

Foxboro, June 3 (Special)—Highlighting a small enthusiastic meeting by a profound desire to encourage and develop the younger players, officials of the South Hastings Baseball League lost very little time in getting things under way as they convened at Cannifton last evening for their annual pre-season gettogether. Complying exactly to the late pre-season rumours, that all four of last year's clubs would again see action, the interest shown in baseball in rural South Hastings was clearly evinced when Shannonville, Cannifton, Latta and Foxboro all entered a team with the opening date set for June 9th, when the hastily drawn 24 game schedule will get under way.

Election of officers for the coming season took up but very little time, with team representatives showing perfect confidence in president J. Ed. Shorey in re-electing him for his fourth consecutive term for that position. The vice-presidentship was the only office requiring to be filled as Canniff Ashley declined his last year's responsibilities and Dr. Eckardt of Shannonville was chosen to fill the vacant office, while Art Hall was re-elected to his position as Secretary-Treasurer.

Playing Rules Adopted

All of last year's playing rules were again adopted for the coming season, but due to the fact that almost a complete rejuvenation of every team's lineup is necessary, it was decided to advance the date for handing in the players' lists until the 23rd of June, when the names of two umpires for each team must also be turned in. In other years it has been customary to hand in the players' lists before the season got under way, but that was in the days, when imported players headed each team's roster and such a procedure was thought unnecessary under the present ruling which permits only local lads to be included in the lineups.

Following the regular schedule the second and third teams will play off for the right to meet the first in the finals, which will take place during the latter part of July. All postponed games must be played the following Monday if possible and no scheduled games are to be played after the last playing date which falls on July 18th.

Following is the complete schedule for 1939.

Family at Dinner Unaware Their Home Was Afire

Unaware of a blaze which had broken out in the upper section of the house, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Harrison and children of High Shore Road in Prince Edward County, sat quietly eating dinner in the kitchen while flames above made rapid headway on Thursday afternoon. By the time the fire was discovered the entire upper section of the home was a mass of flames.

The eight roomed frame structure burned to the ground, but all furniture from the lower section was safely removed. The house was a tenant building on the G. H. Bolton farm where Mr. Harrison works as a hired man.

J. B. Webb, Pres. Kingston Cheese Board

At the annual meeting of the Kingston Cheese Board on Thursday afternoon, J. B. Webb of Mount Chesney was elected president of the Board for the current year. Other officers elected were C. Cramer of Alginburg, first vice-president; Thomas Sherwood, Lattimer, second vice president; H. R. Wartman, Portsmouth, secretary-treasurer; W. E. Coopper, Sunbury, marker. Auditors are W. E. Coopper and Ernest Sproule of Westbrook.

W. R. McCreary, Belleville buyer, moved a vote of appreciation to past president R B. Gibson of Glenvale for his services during the past year, a motion which was unanimously recorded.

ONTARIO READY FOR RETURN OF THEIR MAJESTIES

Second Visit Will Carry Royal Couple Through Rich Mining Country

THREE IN ONE DAY

King and Queen to See Niagara Falls as Floodlights Play on Spectacle

Toronto, June 3.—(CP)— Ontario made ready today for the return of the King and Queen next week, a second visit that will carry Their Majesties through the rich mining districts of the north, the thickly-populated agricultural and manufacturing communities of the south-west and then on to the timeless beauty of Niagara Falls.

The royal train will arrive in Sudbury Junction late Monday, and from that time until it crosses to the United States at Niagara Falls Wednesday night the province will shout a hearty greeting and farewell to the royal couple. Eastern Ontario, visited while Their Majesties were en route west, will be missed this time. The train will stop only briefly at Toronto Tuesday. There will be no public function.

From all the northland—from the booming mine towns of Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Copper Cliff and Cobalt—residents of "New Ontario" will converge on Sudbury for the hour-long stop there at 7.30 p.m. E.D.T. Monday. Hundreds from towns like Barrie, Orillia and Midland will gather that night along the railway skirting Lake Simcoe in hope of a glimpse of the King and Queen.

To Visit Guelph

Tuesday will be a full day as Their Majesties visit Guelph, Kitpush on to Windsor for a welcome that will be joined in by tens of thousands of Detroiters. Residents of Chatham, in hope the royal train will stop briefly, will line the railway tracks for a glimpse of the King and Queen on the way through to Windsor.

As many as 1,000,000 may sound the Windsor greetings, though the stop there is scheduled for only 15 minutes. Grandstands for 100,000 have been erected along the railway tracks and steamships in the Detroit River will sound a welcome to their Majesties.

Canada's London Prominent

Canada's London, 125 miles east of Windsor and on the Thames River, will cheer the King and Queen Wednesday morning on the start of another busy day. From there the royal train goes to Ingersoll, Woodstock and Brantford, for 10-minute stops before the longest stop of this second Ontario visit, for an hour and a half at Hamilton.

From Hamilton, second only to Toronto in population in Ontario, the King and Queen will go by train to St. Catharines, then by automobile through the lush orchard country to Niagara Falls.

The King and Queen will see the Falls from almost every angle the tourist sees them. They will travel through the wind tunnel beneath the mighty torrent and watch from the General Brock Hotel as floodlights play on the spectacle at night.

"You Are Lovely" Disabled Veteran Tells Queen Elizabeth

Edmonton, June 3.—(CP)—Capt. E. R. Hoskins, M.C., of Millet, Alta., thought possibly Queen Elizabeth hadn't heard it before, so when Her Majesty was passing with King George among 37 ill and disabled war veterans at University Hospital here yesterday, he bowed slightly, and in a clear voice, said:

"Your Majesty, you are lovely."

The Queen smiled, and so did the King, and then that lovely lady tilted her head over on one side as a bird, and said to me: 'That is very nice of you—thank you!' " recounted Capt. Hosking who received his decorations from King George V at Buckingham Palace in 1918.

"And did she smile!" he continued. "Oh, boy—a million dollars worth, that's all. I'll never forget it."

Dr. R. T. Washburn, superintendent received the King and Queen at the hospital and led them past the row of cots and its amazed faces.

"How are you feeling"? Queen Elizabeth asked Alex McGowan, a veteran of the 50th Battalion.

When he replied he was feeling fine, Her Majesty pursued her queries.

"Are you not feeling the hot sun today?" she asked.

"No, at least not just yet".

After the visit, McGowan told a reporter.

"Gee, she's a swell-looking girl. They are an awfully nice couple. Both of them shook hands with me. I loved it."

Average deposits of the four Belleville public schools and No. 4 Sidney was forty-two percent. School percentages were: King George 71; Queen Mary, 36; Queen Victoria, 33; Queen Alexandra, 31; No. 4 Sidney, 60.

According to statistics released by J. R. Littleford Ontario Penny bank inspector, the total amount on deposit in the public schools of Ontario at the end of April was $1,521,729.36 with 523 schools depositing. This is an increase over the deposits of a year ago when at the end of April 514 schools deposited $1,476,315.05.

MEN PROBABLY

The spokesman simply took the position that if some few men were able to tap faint signals after the time their oxygen supply supposedly was exhausted, the men should not yet officially be given up as dead.

Will Stretch Agony of Men

But against this shred of hope was balanced the probability that, even if the most concentrated salvage attempt yet undertaken should succeed, many more suffocating hours would have elapsed before the submarine could be entered—hours that seemingly would stretch the agony of the trapped men beyond survival.

That outlook was recognized in the full abandonment of hope by a spokesman for the builders of the Thetis and the acknowledgment before last midnight by the Admiralty that hope was "diminishing" that more than the four present survivors—who used the Davis lungs—could be saved. Three were listed tentatively as dead in unsuccessful attempts to use the lungs.

The fear that numbed wives, mothers and children of the crew and civilians aboard did not swerve their comrades of the sea in the mighty daylight salvage effort, which employed a score of men o' war tugs, minesweepers, and the hands and brains of nearly 5,000 men aboard them.

Pointed Questioning.

The "man on shore" openly coupled his sorrow with pointed questioning of the efficiency of the navy's salvage efforts, which seemed tantalizingly within reach of success when the shark-shaped stern of the submarine was visible for nearly seven hours yesterday.

His attitude and the viewpoints of the newspapers, which asked editorially why rescue operation were so slow, assured an investigation in keeping with the magnitude of the accident.

Why didn't they act fast enough to cut a hole, when the tail could be seen? Why didn't they try a diving bell? These were among the questions frequently heard.

Explanations by former navy men and experts in the service were that the men couldn't reach that part of the tail and that a diving bell was not available. There was furthermore, some doubt whether it could be used on the Thetis.

Best Divers Used.

Seven salvage men who helped to raise the German battle fleet scuttled at Scapa Flow were among those descending in the early morning. They are regarded as among the best divers.

The navy already has in service one of the same class of submarines as the Thetis. Two more are about to undergo tests.

A large group of civilian technicians and the commander of the flotilla—Captain H. P. H. Oram, one of the four to escape by the lung apparatus to help direct rescue operations—were aboard.

It now is established that sufficient Davis escape lungs were aboard to equip each civilian as well as the seamen.

It was a Royal Air Force plane which found the Thetis marker buoy released from inside to show position. But there was no hint of why use could not be made of the telephone which the buoy contains.

Sunk in Mud

The destroyer Brazen was the first surface craft on the scene, and she found some 18 feet of the stern sticking out of the water at a sharp angle. Apparently half of the submarine's length was sunk in the mud, nose down.

Almost as the Brazen came alongside, two of the survivors came up with their "lungs." More than two hours later, the last pair of the four who escaped with the lung apparatus appeared.

The decision for Captain Oram to come to the surface was regarded as logical because he had special qualifications to assist in salvage operations, having survived one other disaster and having since become the squadron commander.

But another question mark entered here. It generally was understood that Captain Oram and the three other survivors said their companions intended to attempt to follow immediately. Apparently several did and lost their lives in the attempt. The Admiralty acknowledged "unconfirmed" information of at least two such cases.

Telegram Received

One of these cases was stoker Wilfred Thomas Hole. His wife was expecting a message from him today—the first anniversary of their wedding. Instead, she received a telegram from the Admiralty which was brought to her and her baby. It said her husband "was believed to have died while endeavoring to escape from the submarine" and added that "this will be confirmed when definite news is received."

Every escape by the Davis lung lets a quantity of water into the submarine and cuts down the air supply. Many wondered: did the escape of a fraction of the vessel's complement threaten to plunge the Thetis deeper and impair chances of raising the craft? Did the commander aboard so decide and order lung attempts to cease? Or did some further mishap occur?

Without any announced circumstances to support it, some experts reasoned that those below decided to pair one civilian and one seaman in escape attempts and that a civilian, less familiar with the escape hatch, was caught in it—blocking the lone available exit.

Above Water Seven Hours

The tail of the 265-foot submarine was above water about seven hours Friday. Immediate hope, with a part of the ship above the surface, seemed to lie in cutting a hole in the hull and getting those aboard through it.

Experts explained, however, that the stern was not high enough for that, since the part above the sea was not accessible to those inside. It was, therefore, thought best to lift the stern still more and to have some support for it before starting cutting operations with the acetylene cutting plant.

A tug with the cutting apparatus was brought to the scene yesterday. But when it arrived near mid-afternoon, the strength of the tide had swept the submarine's stern under water again. When the evening tide occurred at 6 p.m. the stern was not visible. Divers tried and failed to connect hose to the hull to pump in fresh air and expel poisonous gases.

Pictures are Studied

London, June 3 CP)—A study of pictures of the stern of the Thetis made while a part of the boat was above water yesterday suggested to some, of the naval experts this theory of how the vessel became stuck in the mud:

The hydroplanes—fin-like rudders which control the rise and dive of the boat— were shown still to be in diving position.

The boat was carrying out one of her first dives. It is not unusual for the hydroplanes to be somewhat stiff in early trials and not to function as quickly as they should. In this case the dive apparently continued past the intended point and the nose went into the mud at the bottom of the bay.

Often a commander by manipulation of his engines and sometimes by making the crew run aft in a body shifts the weight to wriggle free and come up.

It was theorized that some external fixture of the Thetis hull had become embedded in the mud and acted like the fluke of an anchor.

Asks of Companions

Birkenhead, England, June 3 (CP)—Frank Shaw, one of the four survivors of the sunken submarine Thetis, who is suffering from gas and shock aroused himself long enough this morning to inquire about his companions.

"Are the others safe?" were the first words he asked his wife when he awoke momentarily from a long sleep under the influence of sedatives.

Mrs. Shaw told him she did not know whether the others would be rescued. He dropped off to sleep again.

The 30-year-old wife of the shipyard worker beamed with happiness as she told of her husband's return last night.

AMPHIBIAN SINKS BUT THREE SAVED

Clung to Floating Cushions for Two Hours Before Rescue Effected

Detroit, June 3 (AP)—Three United States naval reserve airmen who clung to floating cushions more than two hours after their amphibian sank in Lake Erie were brought to Marine Hospital here early today.

The three, aviation cadet Gordon Cady of Port Huron, Mich.; Lieut. D. O. Coffman, a physician of Wichita, Kas., and Ensign H. B. Richards of Detroit suffered only from exposure.

Commander M. E. Arnold of the Grosse Ile Naval Reserve base said the plane piloted by Cady, sank at 5.30 a.m. E.D.T. yesterday when forced down by motor failure between Toledo, O., and the Toledo Light.

The fliers, who had left the base at 3 p.m. for a wireless check flight over Lake Erie, pulled out seat cushions as their craft sank and clung to them until sighted and picked up by the tug Barkhamstead of Cleveland.

8-Year Old Schoolboy Chosen to Meet The King and Queen

Washago, Ont., June 3 (CP)—Eight-year-old Bazil Heppenstall of Washago will meet the King and Queen when the royal train makes a 10-minute stop here June 6—if Their Majesties make an appearance. Bazil was selected last night when his name was drawn from a hat containing names of his schoolmates.

The train is scheduled to arrive here at 9.55 a.m. E.D.T. and because of the early hour, Dr. E. H. Coleman, chairman of the royal tour, has been unable to give assurance Their Majesties will appear and greet an expected crowd of more than 20,000 while the train takes on coal and water.

Plans for a district reception for the royal couple were completed here last night at a meeting at which Orillia, Washago, Severn Bridge, and Orillia and Rama Townships were represented.

Preparations are being made to give hundreds of district school children preferred vantage points.

Sudbury, Ont., June 5 (CP)—The King and Queen will watch operations in the world's largest nickel mine tonight. At the King's request, arrangements were made today for their Majesties to descend to the 2,800-foot level of the International Nickel Company's Frood mine.

The King's request was transmitted to officials here as the Royal train sped across Ontario's northwest from Sioux Lookout. The addition to the plans for a one-hour visit here will not interfere in any way with the regular program, and the stay in the district will be lengthened to more than two hours.

Frood is the biggest mine of this nickel district that produces 90 per cent of the world's supply. It is 2½ miles north of Sudbury.

The first half of the original program will be carried out on schedule, with their Majesties motoring to a civic reception at Athletic Park. From the park the Royal party will cut off the route and travel at increased speed to the mine.

They will be met by officials of the International Nickel Company

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Winds and seeds! It has long been observed that birds and wind are the main distributors of seeds. The action of the wind scatters seeds in two ways: first by shaking the seeds out of the pods or by bending the stems and allowing the seeds to sift out, thus causing a local scattering; second by actually carrying the seeds long distances. Some seeds that are wind-scattered are colored so as to not attract birds. Seeds that are to be carried by the winds are designed by nature so that this method is most efficient. In general this is done either by down attached to the seeds so they will float along with the wind, or the seeds are shaped like wings or propellers of airplanes.

BITTER DEBATES

First Parliament of Canada Ever Visited by Reigning King

Ottawa, June 5 (CP)—Prorogation brings to a close the fourth and possibly last session of Canada's 18th Parliament since Confederation, with the most outstanding legislative achievements probably contained in the wheat and agricultural marketing measures, creation of a Defence Purchasing Board and establishment of a Central Mortgage Bank owned by the Government.

There were several unusual features, notably the visit of Their Majesties, the long absence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King while acting as minister in attendance upon the King, and the first appearance as leader of the official opposition of Hon. R. J. Manion, National Conservative chieftain.

English Experts Believe Attack Best Defence Against Aerial Raids

London, June 5—(CP)—Fear of attack from the air, delivered without warning by swarms of swift enemy bombers, is rapidly revising the experts' ideas of how to protect Great Britain from attack.

Advocates of a strong counter-offensive against the war production plants and other military objectives belonging to an enemy thus are gaining in numbers.

Many believe that in a general European war a major objective of any power attacking Britain would be to cripple the country by intensive bombing raids. The seat of Government, ports, railway centres, naval bases, military centres and arms plants would be the main targets of such an attempt to immobilize the nation's life.

Many persons believe no Continental nation has economic resources sufficient for a long war, and that any aggressor would rely on swift attack.

Since Britain was attacked in the Great War developments of aviation have changed both theory and practice of aerial warfare.

Then, because of limited flying range, most German bombers were forced to enter Britain over the southeast countries of Essex and Kent, which were only eighty miles from German airbases in Belgium.

By concentrating anti-aircraft guns around London and in Essex and Kent, Britain was able to protect the whole western and northern areas of the island.

Now a minimum 1,600-mile flying range is demanded by bombers.

Many Britons insist the only way to stop raids would be counter-raids on the nations supplying the raiding planes. As long as Continental plants could keep on turning out replacements for destroyed machines, it would be futile merely to shoot down the raiders, they argue.

7-Year Girl Stands on 12-Foot Stilts For Hours to See King and Queen

Sioux Lookout, Ont., June 5 (CP)—Daphne Redding, reddish hair and country freckles, perched atop a 12-foot pair of stilts for more than two and a half hours last night so she could see the King and Queen over the heads of the crowd which jammed the station area at this northwestern Ontario mining town.

Through sprinkles of rain, seven-year-old Daphne in her white dress picked her way among the throngs. She was just a bright figure through the darkness, high above the bedlam of cheers as the royal train departed.

With her sturdy legs beginning to buckle she looked down on reporters to tell her name and age and that her daddy, L. A. Redding of Sioux Lookout, taught her the stunt when she was three.

Western Canada Back to Work Happy King and Queen Given A Real Western Welcome

By CHARLES EDWARDS

Winnipeg, June 5 (CP)—Western Canada went back to work today happy that King George and Queen Elizabeth had received a hearty western welcome.

Their Majesties entered the west at Port Arthur May 23 and bade farewell at Sioux Lookout, Ont., last night, moving eastward for a second busy round of visits to Ontario cities and towns.

Since a week ago Friday crowds have flocked from the plains and mountains, from far up the coast of British Columbia, from the wooded northland and the mines to pay enthusiastic homage. Cities found their populations doubled, even trebled. At Saskatoon Saturday 125,000 persons massed in the city of a normal 40,000.

A Prairie Greeting.

Melville, 100 miles northeast of Regina, gave their Majesties a typical Prairie greeting Saturday night. Men and Women of every possible European origin were among the crowd of 60,000 in the town of 4,000 population.

The floodlit Melville reception led the Earl of Eldon, Gentleman-in-Waiting to his Majesty, to remark: "Who said this was a sparsely settled country? It is hard to realize after all the crowds we have seen that Canada has only 11,000,000 population."

As the King and Queen stood smiling and waving on the station platform the crowd took up the chant: "We want the King, we want the Queen".

When their Majesties stepped from the platform and walked among the crowd, the chant changed: "We have the King—we have the Queen".

Ahead of Pilot Train.

So dense was the crowd that swarmed about the Royal train that when it left it pulled out ahead of the pilot train that usually precedes it by 30 minutes.

Brigadier-General Alex Ross of Yorkton, former president of the Dominion command of the Canadian Legion, was among the first to greet the sovereigns and bereted war veterans chatted with the King and Queen as they wandered through the crowd.

There was a great task sorting out

Replica of Ancient Edinburgh Castle Erected on Citadel Hill

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canada's farewell to King George and Queen Elizabeth will be tendered in the Maritime Provinces and New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia are sparing no pains to see that it ranks with the high spots of Their Majesties' triumphant progress across the continent.

The blue-and-silver royal train will cross the New Brunswick border near Newcastle early June 13, and from then until the majestic Empress of Britain blends into the horizon off Halifax's Chebucto Head late June 15 the Maritimes will be entertaining royalty.

At Halifax a replica of ancient Edinburgh Castle has been erected on Citadel Hill, where Their Majesties will see an enactment of the granting of Nova Scotia by Royal Charter to Sir William Alexander in 1625.

The grant was made by Charles I, who also decreed that a plot of land near the Castle should be forever a part of Nova Scotia. At the same time he granted the Charter, the King granted Nova Scotia the right to its own azure and argent flag.

Toronto Bank Branch Robbed of $1,500 By Three Masked Men

Toronto, June 5 (CP)—Three men, two of them armed, robbed the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch at Queen street and Rushbrooke Ave. of $1,500 shortly after noon today and escaped in an automobile. Bank manager F. K. McKenzie said the men were masked.

Two men robbed the bank while a third, driver of the car, waited outside at the wheel of the machine. The gunmen escaped by driving south on Rushbrooke avenue and disappearing down Eastern avenue. Teller A. W. Mann said one of the bandits vaulted over the counter while brandishing his gun, while the second herded the staff of three to the vault, which he could not lock.

Mann said he was approached by one of the bandits with the threat "put up your hanrs or I'll blow your brains out". He thought the command was a joke but complied when he saw the guns. The bandits then scooped the money from the till.

No one was in the bank at the time except McKenzie, Mann and Grace Blandford.

The baby was taken over by John Brown, Children's Aid Society Inspector.

Main Ballast Tank Emptied but Submarine Continued to Dive and Struck Bottom in 130 Feet of Water

(By J. F. Sanderson)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 5.—(CP Cable)—A full public investigation of the sinking of the submarine Thetis with the loss of 99 lives was announced in the House of Commons today by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The Prime Minister said two forward compartments of the submarine were flooded through the front torpedo tube when the new underwater vessel met with an accident while carrying out acceptance trials in Liverpool Bay June 1.

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that after the submarine was located she

The Prime Minister, giving reopr: sumably on Saturday, when her marking buoy wa cut away by the slipping of a wire placed around the hulk in rescue efforts.

The wire, he said, slipped the wrong way after being placed around the Thetis at 7.15 a.m., "cutting away the indicator buoy. The submarine was relocated at approximately 11 p.m."

The full story of the world's worst submarine disaster will not be known until the vessel is salvaged. The report of the naval inquiry, Mr. Chamberlain said, would be made available at the public investigation which will begin as soon as the Thetis is brought to the surface.

The prime Minister, giving report of the disaster as pieced together from details at present known, said the men had been unable to close the watertight door behind the first compartment when the water rushed in through the torpedo tube. However, folding had been restricted to the second compartment.

Ballast Tank Emptied

The main ballast tank was emptied but the submarine continued to dive and struck bottom in about 130 feet of water in Liverpool Bay, he said.

This impact destroyed the signalling apparatus, making it impossible for the submarine to communicate with surface vessels.

A marker buoy was released, Mr. Chamberlain said, and smoke floats sent up but they were not observed by the escorting tug which was with Thetis when she made her dive at 1.40 p.m. (8.40 a.m. E.D.T.) Thursday.

ROBT. C. ANDREWS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Robt. C. Andrews, retired mail carrier of this city, residing at 204 Coleman Street, sustained a broken right shoulder and multiple bruises when the automobile which he was driving skidded on the loose gravel on the highway near Eldorado yesterday. Mr. Andrews was brought to the Belleville General Hospital where the fracture was reduced. Accompanying Mr. Andrews was his wife, who sustained shock and bruises. The automobile was badly wrecked, it was learned today. Mr. Andrews was proceeding at a moderate rate of speed, when the vehicle skidded on loose gravel while making a turn. The vehicle went into the ditch and through a fence before coming to a full stop. Dr. G. S. Cronk, who attended Mr. Andrews at the hospital, today stated the injuries sustained were exceedingly painful and the period of convalescense would doubtlessly be lengthy.

DESERONTO POLICE REPORT CAR STOLEN

Belleville police today were informed by Deseronto police that a model T Ford car had been stolen from that village over the week-end. The vehicle was carrying Ontario licence plates number 33202—C at the time it was stolen. City police were also informed that a tricycle had been stolen on McAnnanay St. last Saturday.

Only two transients appeared at the police station seeking shelter last night, while on Saturday night only seven put in an appearance. With the advent of warmer nights the "knights of the road" are slumbering beneath the canopy of heaven.

Flow of Gas From Well Drilled In School Yard 'Peters Out'

Gas from Pocket Burns for Eleven Days Then Gradually Dies Away

SCHOOL NEAR CROFTON

Any hopes that the residents of Sophiasburg, who live within shouting distance of School Section No. 4, on the Picton-Belleville highway, near Crofton, had of having their homes heated next winter with natural gas, have now been dispelled.

For the well, drilled in the schoolyard, that a few days ago gave evidence of being the outlet of a powerful pocket of natural gas, is now quiet. No longer do the fumes pour from the six-foot length of inch pipe placed in the cement covering of the well. No longer does the blue flame burn at its top.

And the pupils continue to carry their drinking water from the nearest well, a quarter of a mile away.

It was with the view to eliminating this inconvenience that trustees of the school ordered a well drilled in the yard a few weeks ago. Drillers drove down a distance of forty-five feet and struck a heavy bed of oily silt. Then the drill drove downward puncturing a pocket of natural gas. Pressure of the fumes was so great that activities were halted and the well covered and plugged. The pipe was inserted and "lit". For eleven days the gas burned. Then it gradually lessened and finally died away.

Yesterday, when a newspaperman visited the scene, all that remained of the new "gas-plant" was a gaunt piece of pipe, sticking upward at a slanting angle but from which no trace of gas was flowing.

William Nightingale Pays $500 for 5-Months' Holstein-Fresian Bull

Scion of a proud strain of Holstein-Freisian blooded stock, the five-months' old bull purchased recently by William Nightingale, prominent Huff's Island breeder, for the near-record price of five hundred dollars, is attracting the attention and admiration of breeders of the district.

Bought from the outstanding herd of James Henderson, Portsmouth, Ont., the youngster is a son of "Supreme Ruby Echo" whose 305-day record on two-time milking as a senior three-year-old of 19,005 lbs milk and 659 pounds fat was the Canadian record for the class when it was made. Her four-year-old production is 365 days was 24,359 pounds milk and 789 pounds fat, which is second for milk and fifth for fat in the class in Canada.

"Supreme Ruby Echo" is doing even better on her present lactation having produced over 14,000 pounds milk in the first five months and still producing close to 90 pounds per day.

The calf is sired by Wisfob Admiral Ollie Korndyke, a grandson of the $5,000.00 bull, Admiral Beauty Ormsby Pobes that was second prize junior yearling at the 1937 National Dairy Show after which he was purchased by Mr. Henderson.

CHAS. E. TURNER FRACTURES SKULL

Campbellford Resident Hit by Car Driven by Detroit Motorist

Struck by an automobile from behind and hurled to the pavement on Highway No. 2 immediately east of Trenton on Saturday night, Charles E. Turner, 36, of Campbellford, sustained a fractured skull and mutliple injuries and was later rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where his condition was reported as favorable by the attending physician, Dr. G. H. Stobie, today.

Turner was struck by a westbound motor car driven by James K. Goodleaf of Detroit, after Saturday night's heavy downpour of rain. Goodleaf informed Motorcycle Patrolman H. Caldwell, Trenton, that he was proceeding westerly at a moderate rate of speed following the heavy rain, when suddenly he saw a figure loom before his car on the roadside. Goodleaf swerved his car, but was unable to avoid hitting the figure, which proved to be Turner. Goodleaf stopped and rendered assistance, remaining at the scene until the arrival of the police. The car driver was detained in Trenton until Sunday pending the announcement of Turner's condition and then permitted to proceed to Detroit.

Besides a fractured skull and concussion, Turner was suffering from multiple bruises and lacerations of a minor nature, Dr. Stobie stated.

Comedy Theatre Players in 'Candida'

The Nurses' Alumnae Association of the General Hospital are holding a theatre night in the Collegiate Auditorium Thursday, June 8th, when they will present The Comedy Theatre Players in Shaw's greatest comedy, "Candida". A rare evening's entertainment is anticipated. Rare because professional performances of this calibre are very scarce. Shaw's plays are the vogue theatrically this season and many critics and reviewers are most enthusiastic in their praise of the performances of this most interesting comedy beautifully staged. The activities of the Nurses Alumnae Association are well-known in Belleville and their appeal for funds through the medium of a Theatre Night should meet with a ready response.

Building Searched For Hidden Treasures

On Saturday last a unique hunt for hidden treasures took place in the Y.M.C.A. under the direction of Homer Townsend and J. E. Shortt.

Following the morning gym class the "Preps" and "Junior" boys were turned loose on the hunt.

In crevices or cracks, behind fixtures, around and over woodwork and apparatus of the gym, the weight-lifting and hand-ball rooms, swimming tanks, stairs and locker rooms, treasures were laid in unsuspected and unlikely places. After a hilarious half hour by keenly alert boys, the group took to the showers and swim.

Successful in the quest were—Bruce Bishop, Douglas Bateman, James Jackson, Bob Bertwistle, Cam. Cameron, Doug. Legate, Bob Ashley, Tom Hutchinson, Eric Cooper, Barney Wright and George Wonnacott.

Next Saturday the boys will leave in the morning on a walking hike, locker rooms, treasures were laid in day in the open.

Camp plans are well advanced and promise a good camp and camp programme for the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake, July 3 to 17.

14 ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH UNION OBSERVED IN CITY

Union Service Held in Tabernacle United Church Sunday Evening

MASSED CHOIR

Rev G. O. Fallis Delivers Stirring Message to Capacity Audience

The world should face the future with courage and optimism in spite of economic adversity, nationalism, lack of proper system of distribution of God's gifts through Nature, and man's stupidity to man, the Rev. G. O. Fallis, B.D., M.B.E., Trinity United Church, Toronto, told the joint congregations of the United Churches of the city at the 17th Anniversary of Church Union service in the Tabernacle United Church last night.

"It is an irrational thing for us to fear the future," the speaker said in his opening remarks, "for the simple reason that when we reflect, it is not the first time a breakdown has occurred in world society Anthropologists will tell you that thousands of years ago, systems came into being and finally broke down."

Nationalism Young

"Nationalism is a young thing but despite its extreme youth it is gradually going into decline. The Kingdom of God will never be built up as long as we have nationalism. We must take courage in ourselves. The human process is not breaking up or down, if you will, as some would have us believe."

Man has always been a crisis-meeting creature. That has been proven down through the ages, the speaker declared.

"It has been said," he continued, "that in this day and age we are losing our creativeness. Never in the history of the world has there been so much creativeness apparent as at the present moment. Of the one hundred greatest things man has ever done, sixty-eight of them have been created since the year 1838. Thirty-two were done down the centuries previous to that time. Surely there has been a great deal of genuine creativeness in the generations immediately behind us. Never in the history of the world has there been such a wonderland of science as has been created in the last hundred years."

Creativeness should be stimulated in the youth of today, the speaker urged. "We must see to it that emphasis is placed upon this as well as social constructions and other important things," he said.

To Stabilize Prices

The speaker deplored the unwarranted dumping of surplus foodstuffs in various parts of the world to "stabilize prices." "Never in the world's history has God been so lavish to us through Nature," he said. "I am the father of three children, yet I have not the slightest fear that my children will go hungry or starve to death. One hundred years ago, a world-famous economist stated that one hundred years from this time the world would be starving. He did not reckon the strides that would be made by science."

"This wholesale dumping of surplus foodstufft is a form of blasphemy to God," Mr. Fallis declared. "It is one of the greatest crimes of the world to dump these foodstuffs wholesale without conceiving some form of distribution whereby starving children could benefit. The greatest difficulty in the world today is not man's badness but his stupidity. Christ gave us these vast surpluses of food which ought to be distributed among the needy, but man is so crassly stupid that he cannot devise a means of distribution whereby starving children can be fed with them."

Environment the Same

"We are living in the same environment as we were in the days of the depression," the speaker asserted. "The trouble lies with us. We must re-orientate ourselves to slightly changing conditions, or they will get the better of us and smash us if we run contrary to the laws of God. Some want a miraculous world but thank God, we are living in a world where the laws of Jesus are absolutely trustworthy and absolute. Jesus was right. The law of stable society is the law of love, but love like the law of any other thing will smash us if we do not use it properly."

"Love is the fundamental law of stable society, and it is the primary duty of the Christian Church to preach its doctrines. It must take as its keynote the words of love and the living of life as Jesus did."

"Never let the street-lamps blot out the stars," the speaker said in conclusion quoting the words of a former college professor. "The greatest foundation the Christian Church can have is to keep its banners floating high, to stimulate people to such lofty ideals that it can be said the Christian Church does not blot out the stars with its streetlights. In the day of adversity, consider."

Ministers Take Part

The Rev. D. T. McClintock, minister of the church was in charge of the service, and was assisted by the Rev. R. E. Newman, minister of Holloway Street Church. The Rev. Roy Rickard, Cobourg, who sat in the congregation was invited to the front and also assisted the minister in the service. Several other ministers returning from the annual Bay of Quinte Conference session recently concluded in Kingston, were in the congregation and were warmly welcomed by the minister.

A telegram of regret at the fact that conference work prevented him from attending the service was read from the Rev. Dr. James Semple.

A noteworthy feature of the service were the splendid anthems rendered by the joint choirs of the three churches under the baton of Mr. Fred Jobson. A male quartette also added a touch of musical color to the general service.

TWO MEN CHARGED WITH CAR THEFT

Were Arrested When Found Police Say, in Possession of E. Rutherford's Car.

Harvey Collins, alias Harry Switser, and John Dewar, alias John Duncan, the two men arrested in Montreal in connection with the theft of Edgar Rutherford's automobile, taken from the city on May 24th last, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., in today's local police court. Collins and Dewar, whose addresses were not given, were remanded in custody for one week at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C.

Yesterday Chief Kidd and Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard journeyed to Montreal where they were given the custody of Collins and Dewar, who had been apprehended in Quebec when found in possession of the Rutherford motor car, which was returned to Belleville by the local police last night. Today the men elected summary trial before His Worship and denied the charges, no testimony was given, however. The spare tire and car heater from Mr. Rutherford's car were both found to be missing when the vehicle was recovered.

COLLEGIATE CADETS TO BE INSPECTED THIS WEDNESDAY

With training periods occurring daily officers and members of the Belleville Collegiate Institute Cadet Corps are rapidly rounding into shape for the annual inspection that takes place on the school campus on Wednesday of this week.

Major Howard has been drilling his youthful charges faithfully for the past few weeks, and present indications point to one of the best turnouts seen here in some years.

The cadets of Queen Mary School will undergo their annual inspection on the school grounds tomorrow morning.

CHILD IS CUT BY FLYING GLASS

Helen Ball, Two Years Old Pitched Forward When Car Strikes Curb

Two-year-old Helen Bell, 32 Strachan Street, sustained a cut on the head and suffered from shock as the result of a motor accident on North Front Street yesterday. The injuries were not serious, police today revealed. The little lass was being driven home by Elizabeth Laughlin, Herchimer Avenue, when the automoile struck the curb at the intersection of Strachan and North Front Streets. The force of the impact threw the occupants forward and the windshield shattered. It is believed little Helen was cut by flying glass. The car was about to make a left-hand turn off North Front Street to proceed east on Strachan when the front wheel struck the curb.

Considerable property damage resulted during another motor accident at the corner of Church Street and Victoria Avenue on Sunday, but no serious injuries resulted. Merkley Windover, 309 Albert Street, was proceeding westerly on Victoria Avenue when his car was in collision with a south-bound car on Church Street and driven by Chas. J. Oostdyk of Detroit. The Michigan car was struck broadside and damaged to the extent of $150.00, city police estimated. Controversial statements were given by the drivers, Mr. Windover stating Oostdyk did not observe the Stop Street sign. No charges have been preferred as yet.

False Alarm Call Sends Fire Squad On Fruitless Chase

Chief Lynch States Prosecutions Will Follow as Sequel to These Calls

When an excited voice informed them that a fence on Bleecker Avenue, near Victoria, was blazing merrily, members of the city fire department raced to the scene last night shortly before midnight to find they were the victims of a practical joker.

No sign of fire could be discovered, nor was there any evidence that fire had been blazing in the vicinity.

"These jokers are going to go to far some of these days," Fire Chief Lynch warned today. "When they find themselves in front of a police magistrate, perhaps it won't be so funny."

Tuesday's Stops.

Tomorrow, their Majesties have a schedule that takes them to these places:

GUELPH—At the Canadian National Railways station they will be greeted by more than 40,000 people—double Guelph's population. Three-year-old Helen Galt Mitchell, great granddaughter of the city's founder, John Galt, is to present a bouquet to the Queen. An illuminated address of welcome will be presented to the King by Mayor W. G. Taylor.

KITCHENER—At the C.N.R. station the welcome will be joined in by not only Kitchener residents but also their neighbors from the twin city of Waterloo and thousands of others from the district. Mayor George W. Gordon will present the city's address of welcome.

STRATFORD — Hundreds will pour into Stratford from the neighboring counties of Huron and Bruce, augmenting the thousands from Stratford and Perth County who will greet their Majesties at the C.N.R. station. The city's address of welcome will be presented by Mayor Thomas Henry.

WINDSOR — Across the Detroit River, by tunnel, bridge and bus, will come multitudes of Detroiters to join Windsor in a greeting that will be extended all along the waterfront. The train will back into the C.N.R. station between long lines of stands as the King and Queen appear on the rear platform. A royal salute of 21 guns will be fired, Mayor David Croll will present the city's address of welcome and his daughter, Constance, will present a bouquet to the Queen.

The stop at Guelph is scheduled for 2:35 p.m. E.D.T., that at Kitchener for 3:15 p.m. and that at Stratford for 4:20 p.m. The train is to be 15 minutes in the Windsor station, from 8:30 to 8:45.

Favorable Weather Produces Abundant Growth in District

Crops of All Kinds Give Promise of Being Heaviest in Years

Lush hayfields, green carpets of alfalfa and clover, that are covering the fields of the district with what is said to be one of the heaviest hay crops in years, are causing farmers to wear broad smiles these early June days.

The warm weather of the past few days, interspersed with timely showers, is said to be responsible for the heavy growth, that in the majority of places came through the rigors of winter in excellent condition.

Alfalfa is growing at a rate of speed, that as one farmer puts it, "beats anything I have ever seen." It is thick and well-leafed, with sturdy stalks and roots that augur well for second and in some places third crops.

Grain-fields of the district are covered with a green sheen of young shoots. Grain sown in a field on a farm a few miles from the city, eleven days ago, is now covering the acreage with a green carpet.

If the present weather continues, with its warm suns and periodical showers, the grain bins of the district as well as the hay-mows will bulge with the best crop grown in years.

Heavy blossoming is also reported in strawberry beds. Full foliaged, the plants are in full bloom awaiting the warm suns that will bring the most popular summer fruit, to what is conceded to be, a splendid maturity. While it is too early to predict the raspberry crop, canes in the various fields of the community are giving potential warning of good crops.

Potatoes are now well advanced in many districts and in some places are in evidence fully six and eight inches above ground. One city grower of the earlier variety of "spuds" predicts the first of the new crop within two weeks.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, June 6

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PLANETARY aspects for this day indicate a particularly lively and stirring state of affairs. Much of importance may take place with drastic action. There is an element of chance, and initiative and strenuous methods may have telling results because of such high pressure. This particularly affects new projects and all of an untried or speculative nature. But be alert and [illegible] in approaching superiors or those in authority.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of highly-stimulated forces and faculties. There is an inclination to plunge into projects and perhaps aggressively attack major propositions of an untried or perilous nature. Such strenuous measures may bring definite progress, even where chance and hazard are obvious. But be wary of traps and use finesse with superiors

A child born on this day may be bold, brave and progressive, with fine initiative and enterprise. It may like to take chances and tackle perils. However, it should be genial, companionable, witty and popular, leaning toward extravagance and indulgence.

At one time there were temporarily lost children. One little girl standing alone was asked if she were lost. "No," she replied, "but all my folks are and so are all the school children I came here with."

The Royal couple were given a homely prairie welcome in Saskatoon, hub of the Saskatchewan hard wheat belt.

More than 125,000 persons crowded the 11-mile procession route Saturday. The King and Queen heard Indians, Austrians, Germans and Poles cheer them as they drove through predominantly foreign-born sections.

Saw Tractors Working.

The Royal car travelled the broad streets to the freight sheds where their Majesties saw a display presenting the Saskatoon of a decade ago before crops were stricken by drought and grasshopper infestation—a Saskatoon when every shed was busy, when farm machinery was unloaded by the trainload and agriculture thrived.

The King and Queen saw giant tractors working, combines cutting imaginary grain and threshing machines humming the harvest song. On the ground were piled bushels of last year's grain. The Royal car moved through lines of prize cattle, horses, sheep and hogs.

Another picture that probably will stay long in the Royal minds was of seven-year-old Marcelin McEachern, daughter of an alderman, presenting the Queen with a bouquet of roses. Marcelin, a brunette and pretty, stole the show at the arrival.

WOMAN KILLED AND FIVE HURT

Two Cars Collide Near Cascades Point at Soulanges Canal

Montreal, June 3 (CP)—Mrs. Jas. Whitehead of Bury, Que., was killed last night and five persons injured when two cars collided head-on near Cascades Point on the Montreal-Toronto highway near the Soulanges Canal.

The injured: James Whitehead, Kate Gouler, 20; Alice Whitehead, 61, sister of James; William McKinnon, and Laura McKinnon of Toronto.

Authorities at St. Luke Hospital, where the injured persons were taken, said Miss Whitehead, suffering a fractured skull, was the most seriously injured. James Whitehead suffered internal injuries. Miss Gouler escaped with a fractured nose and lacerations.

William McKinnon received a fractured left elbow while his sister suffered internal injuries and concussion.

The persons in the Whitehead car were from Bury.

THIEF OFFERS $3.00 FOR CLOTHING HE HAD APPROPRIATED

Toronto, June 3 (CP)—Police today sought a housebreaker, thought to be an Indian, who last night accepted $3 from Dr. Andrew J. McDonagh for a parcel of clothing he was about to take from the doctor's residence. Surprised while ransacking the house the young man nervously bargained with the doctor and his wife before disappearing.

NATIVE OF TRENTON

Montreal, June 5—(CP)—Alfred Bougie, a director of the Canada Paint Company who died in Jamaica, was a native of Trenton, and came to Montreal at an early age.

He established his own hardware business at nearby Ste. Anne de Bellevue where his family lives now. He joined Canada Paint nearly two years ago. His widow and one daughter survive. Funeral service will take place here after arrival of the body June 19.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought—but it was her kidneys, the filters of her blood, that needed attention. Delay meant danger. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy, disappeared. 117

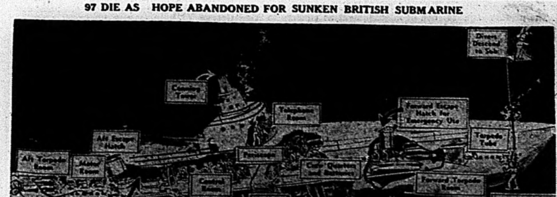
97 DIE AS HOPE ABANDONED FOR SUNKEN BRITISH SUBMARINE



A cross-section diagram of the British submarine Thetis which became bogged in the mud of the Irish Sea off Liverpool while on a test run with 101 persons aboard. Four members of the crew were saved by means of the Davis "third lung." The 97 other persons aboard the ill-fated submarine were given up as lost by the Admiralty when the rushing tide turned the bogged craft upside down and prevented the attaching of a caisson. The lack of air in the sub made it impossible to use the Davis safety device after the first four men were shot to safety.

THEIR MAJESTIES, THE RAILROADS AND JUST YOU AND I

One of the main factors contributing to the pleasure of Their Majesties' trip across Canada has been the unfailing service and safety provided by the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railroads. Probably little thought of this has entered the minds of the general public but we feel that due tribute is due the management and personnel of the railroads for the unobtrusive and efficient manner in which the routing of the royal party has been carried out.

Every safeguard known to railroad people has been employed in this epoch-making journey and the fact that there has been no delay along the route caused by defective equipment nor any accident involving any one of the thousands of spectators along the right-of-way bespeaks of the thorough preparation made weeks in advance by the managements of the two roads.

Reference to the care used might be mentioned in a couple of matters, one of which included the balancing of the passenger coach wheels of the special train within two ounces and when one remembers the great weight of these wheels that is no mean feat in itself. Besides this all working parts of the locomotives that were under strain were subjected to flaw detector tests to locate possible hidden flaws in the steel and castings. Bridges, tracks, signal systems and other equipment pertaining to railroad operation were also gone over with the same careful inspection as mentioned above and placed in as nearly perfect condition as the ingenuity of experienced man could make it.

Naturally while more care has been used than for regular operation of the railroads considering the importance of their passengers, we must keep in mind that the same careful attention is paid to safety on all railroads at all times with the result that an accident involving passengers is a comparatively rare event and this makes them the safest medium of transportation known to the modern world. The phrase 'Travel by Rail with Confidence' is no empty thought be you the King and Queen or just plain John Doe.

THE THETIS DISASTER

The tragedy of the British submarine, Thetis, which is one of the major catastrophes of the sea, has caused a profound shock to the world and particularly to the British Empire and to the relatives and friends of those who lost their lives in the disaster in the Irish Sea. A hazardous calling, that of life in a submarine, the tragedy nevertheless stirs the sense of pity and shocks men and women everywhere. The helplessness of those who were imprisoned beneath the surface of the water makes the event most poignant.

Just a week before a disaster met the U.S. submarine, Squalus, when 33 men were saved and 22 lost. This second submarine accident is therefore thrown into the deeper shadow by the fact that one accident has followed the other so closely and that all but four died in this last.

The Thetis disaster is the greatest in loss of life with ninety-nine men aboard. The greatest previous tragedy was to a Japanese craft which sank with 85 at Kobe, Japan, in 1923. Britain's greatest loss of life up to this time on a submarine was in 1934 when eighty-three men perished.

TO MOBILIZE FAITH

The church's task is "to mobilize faith," Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the Church of Scotland recently and it is "to keep clear before the people the fundamental principles which govern human relationships."

The church is never out of a job, because it represents primal needs of mankind. The present age is one of intense trials and in many countries and in many persons' experiences it is a day of tribulations. Two and a half decades ago began a disastrous war which took a toll in lives, in pain and suffering and in bereavements, enough to have crushed humanity. But faith persisted. Faith is the primitive factor in life, without it, life would never have emerged to what it is.

The church has the task of holding before the people in time of peace and comfort and in time of tribulation the fundamental principles which govern human relationships. Worship of the Deity can never be vital if the worshipper neglects to give the cup of water in His Name. Worship of God and love of mankind are inseparable. These are the centres around which human life in all its intricacies revolves, for One said, " on these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

The church is peculiarly qualified for its high offices in keeping the faith. Its duty is not only in lending a hand towards the amelioration of conditions but it is also to inspire. Inspiration precedes actual achievement though achievement itself inspires to further achievement.

MARGARITAE SORORI

A late lark twitters from the quiet skies;
And from the west,
Where the sun, his day's work ended,
Lingers as in content.
There falls on the old, grey city
An influence luminous and serene,
A shining peace.
The smoke ascends
In a rosy-and-gold haze. The spires
Shine, and are changed. In the valley
Shadows rise. The lark sings on. The sun,
Closing his benediction,
Sinks, and the darkening air
Thrills with a sense of the triumphing night—
Night with her train of stars
And her great gift of sleep.

So by my passing!
My task accomplished and the long day done,
My wages taken, and in my heart
Some late lark singing.
Let me be gathered to the quiet west,
The sundown splendid and serene.
Death.

ALMOST AS INTERESTING AS THEIR MAJESTIES themselves are the men and women of the British royal household who are accompanying King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on their North American tour and who will play a prominent part in the forthcoming ceremonies in Washington and New York.

x

Herewith are thumbnail sketches of these personalities as presented in the June issue of Town & Country, which features the royal visit:

x

Lieut.-Col. the Honorable Piers ("Joey") Walter Legh (pronounced Lee), one of the King's six equerries, though only 48, is old in the service of the royal family. He was for 17 years equerry to the Prince of Wales, accompanying him on all his tours and even into exile (after Edward's abdication). He married Sarah Polk Bradford, daughter of a Tennessee judge . . . . Red-faced and sporting, he plays a good game of golf and poker.

x

Lady Katharine Seymour, a lady of the Queen's bedchamber, is the tactful, dignified, and charming widow of Sir Reginald Seymour and the youngest daughter of the Duke of Abercorn, Governor of Northern Ireland. Lady Katharine broke tradition in 1928 when at 27 she became the first lady-in-waiting to Queen Mary to be young, lovely, unmarried.

x

Captain Michael Adeane, assistant private secretary to the King, is at 28 the youngest member of the royal suite.

x

Lady Nunburnholme, a lady-in-waiting is considered one of the prettiest girls of her year. She was bridesmaid to the Princess Royal and the Queen's maid of honor.

x

Commander Edward M.C. Abel Smith of the Royal Navy relinquished command of H.M.S. London last January upon appointment as equerry to King George VI. He is related to the King by marriage.

x

Alan Frederick Lascelles, acting private secretary to the King, is tall and thin with a dour expression that belies his natural good humor. As secretary, Lascelles accompanied the Prince of Wales on a hunting expedition to Uganda in 1928.

x

The Earl of Airlie, Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, is a prominent Christian Scientist and son of the Countess of Airlie, who is one of Queen Mary's intimates. He was the last Peer to ride a horse to his wedding and the first to ride one to victory in the Scotch Grand National.

x

The Earl of Eldon, lord-in-waiting, a devote Roman Catholic, was a Scots Guards officer during the war, and is one of the best shots in England—so good that he attracted the attention of George V, who invited him to Sandringham where he met the present King.

Handshakers I Have Met

Did you ever stop to think, when you shake hands with someone, just when and why this strange procedure originated? History relates that our barbaric ancestors indulged in rubbing noses as a form of greeting, but except from a strictly sanitary viewpoint we have made little progress. Apparently the fact remains that convention and tradition decree that we must bare our teeth, extend our good right hand and grasp our fellowman in turn by his good right hand, even though we may secretly entertain some doubts as to the efficacy of such procedure.

Now that we have settled this point, we might well examine the various types of handshake and enquire more deeply into their motivating influences. First there is the "wishy-washy" or "dead fish" handshake, which creates a decidedly poor impression, as you get the feeling of having unexpectedly encountered a jellyfish, and unless you have excellent control of yourself, your expression may belie your pleasure at meeting your new friend. A slightly different species of the same genus is the "wet dishcloth" handshake, which creates a very similar impression but may not produce such startling repercussions. These handshakes are more disconcerting when received from an individual of large proportions, as the seeming contradiction in terms may conjure up the alarming prospect of a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, which is definitely a bad start. You are unwittingly thrown on your guard and generally fail completely to take the recent stranger to heart.

In contradiction to these types there is the so-called "professional wrestler" or "high pressure" handshake, which although causing quite different reactions, leaves an equally bad impression. Your hand is grasped in a vise-like grip, an electric shock travels up your arm and thuds into your alarmed and startled brain to the symphonic accompaniment of creaking finger points. You wince, smile bravely, if withal a little weakly, and secretly hope you will eventually regain the use of your good right hand. Once you have recovered your composure and see that your hand is still attached to your wrists, you focus your attention on your potential antagonist and immediately two ideas flash across your mind, (1) either this man is going to sell you something you don't want or (2) he is trying to assert his mental and physical superiority neither of which you believe or like. You of course realize that might makes right and are generally prepared for an onslaught of this type from a big man, but what is more disconcerting is to have an embryonic Napoleon shake you like a terrier until your teeth chatter; this injures your innate ego and creates the impression of having been unjustly imposed upon. A deviation of this general type is the person who lunges at you with the speed and finesse of a fencer, but wait! You are "en garde" and quickly withdraw, with the result that he only succeeds in grasping your middle two fingers which, however, must of necessity bear the added brunt of the attack. Your immediate reaction is that you have been out-manoeuvred and this is apt to create a spirit of revenge.

Outside of these major types, one occasionally runs across the individual who, after a frantic and vain attempt to extricate his hand from a glove, extends to you as his token of greeting two leather fingers turned inside out and tries to seal the bargain by pinching you with his thumb.

Another baffling point to determine is whether your acquaintance will start with the up-sweep (the modern tendency) or on the down beat. This is most important as you will want to shift your weight to your toes or heels and an error in judging may prove distressing.

Perhaps the worst type of all is the genial individual who, having once taken hold of you, either through malice aforethought or pressure of conversation, forgets to let go and emphasizes his remarks by spasmodic tugs and twists of your manual extremities. This throws upon you the additional burden of trying to carry on a conversation and at the same time estimate the probable time of repayment of the loan of your hand. You would naturally expect renewals from this type and would react accordingly.

The moral of this is to shake hands like a man, firmly but not severely, and you will have progressed a long way toward cementing a new friendship. Don't forget that first impressions are the strongest and your reaction to a handshake is one of the first.—H. T. Davoud in Royal Bank Magazine.

Removal of Superfluous Hair Should Be Under Proper Supervision

It has been found that the best treatment for the removal of superfluous hair is electrolysis. The tiny needle is inserted into each hair root and, if done properly, the hair is permanently destroyed.

Unfortunately, because this is not "medical" treatment, anyone can buy this electrical outfit and perhaps, in time, acquire the necessary skill to kill the hair root and leave no scar. But while these "operators" are learning how to use the equipment, much damage may be done to the skin of the patient.

An editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association some weeks ago stated, "An increasing number of electrolytic instruments designed particularly to remove hair, moles and warts are appearing on the market. There is a growing tendency for laymen, unqualified by experience and training, to undertake the use of such apparatus. Because of the seeming simplicity of the processes, people are often misled into believing that they are quite safe with these lay operators." Actually there are a number of reasons why such safety is not assured by these lay operators, the most important or serious of which is (a) their lack of knowledge of preventing infection, and simple moles, which are really an early form of cancer.

To avoid hazards of infection and spreading a cancerous growth, the operator should have some understanding of anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, antisepsis, besides his knowledge of how this particular electric apparatus is used. "Pitting and scars may result from too much current or too long treatment. If the operator makes too many stabs at a single hair root or treats too many hairs (at one time) in one spot, infection and scarring may be expected to follow."

Now this doesn't mean that anyone with superfluous hair must go to a physician to have it destroyed because the majority of physicians know little or nothing about removing hair by electrolysis. It does mean, however, that if he does not go to the physio-therapy department of any hospital, a patient desiring this treatment should ask his physician about the establishment where he expects to undergo the treatment.

A good "operator" of the electrolytic apparatus may lack the knowledge of antisepsis and be unable to tell the difference between a simple and cancerous mole.

Study Group on Farm Problems

The Editor,
May 29th, 1939.
"Ontario Intelligencer",
Belleville, Ontario.

My Dear Mr. Editor:

In common with farmers throughout Canada, I was greatly relieved to see that the Mother Country in her mature judgment has given us the benefit of her long experience in international affairs and has interpreted for us what the Trade Agreement of 1937 means.

What must touch a deep cord in the hearts of every farmer who has his livelihood to make on the land is the final statement contained in the British Minister's reply. It is worth repeating here:

"I would, however, add that we realise the special considerations affecting the Canadian dairy and live stock interests out of which the proposed action arose, and that if any other suggestions could be put forward which would not have the same difficulties from our point of view, we should, of course, be very ready to consider them."

Reading this, one can only interpret it as an invitation to farmers to study our agricultural problems along broad lines with a view to making them fit in with the Commonwealth's needs.

To my mind this is a challenge to Canadian farmers to put their house in order by increasing their efficiency through adopting progressive methods.

The Federal and Provincial Governments are providing through their agricultural colleges, experimental farms and district representatives, marked leadership in this connection. There is no production problem of any kind which faces farmers in Canada today which cannot be solved by making use of these services so cheerfully furnished.

Now that the hazard is past, do not let us farmers drop back into a coma again. Let us be up and doing. Every farming section in Canada should organize study groups whehre individual problems may be discussed and a solution found. The thing that impresses me more than anything else in connection with farming, is that there is no what might be termed individual competition. There are no business secrets. Our operations are wide open. Our success or failure depends largely upon our united efforts. This being the case, why can we not get together with a view to solving our difficulties? What strikes me as the immediate concern of every farmer is—

(1) By strict sanitary methods, to improve our milk and cream production, which would immediately stimulate local and export consumption.

(2) Produce more and better dairy and fat cattle.

(3) Make up our minds that within the next year we will pick up the slack in our export bacon quota. If every farmer already raising pigs, would keep just one more sow, Canada would have no difficulty in taking advantage of her full quota within the next twelve months.

It is in this manner that we farmers can best reply to Sir Thomas Inskip's friendly message.

Yours very sincerely,
John A. Gunn

Coldstream Gaurds At The Fair

A colorful, if anachronistic, element in the World of Tomorrow is the Coldstream Guards Band, which is currently stationed at the British Pavilion, far from its usual stand at the Changing of the Guard before Buckingham or St. James's Palace. Ordinarily it plays at this traditional ceremony once every five days, taking its turn along with the bands of the Grenadier, Scots, Irish and Welsh Guards. The Coldstream Band is the most venerable of this group, having played continually since its formation in 1742. By virtue of its age and reputation, it has been called upon to play at the most solemn state functions, such as the burial of George V, the accession to the throne of Edward VIII, and the coronation of George VI and Elizabeth. It is not the band's fault that it won't be on hand when the royal couple visit the Fair in June. The British Government which sent the men over (and bought them $15,000 worth of new instruments to boot, or toot), felt that more than a month would be too serious a drain on the Exchequer. So the band sailed for home on May 28.

Their leader, Captain J. Causley Windram, is fifty-two, ruddy, and the son of a bandmaster in the Royal Marines. He was graduated from the Royal Academy of Music in London and became head of the band in 1930. We learned from him that the band's headquarters are in King's Road, Chelsea, and that there are an enormous library of band music is maintained—three thousand tunes including five hundred marches. It's customary for British music publishers to appeal to the Guards for help when looking up some old number. We learned also that the men don't live in barracks but with their families, like ordinary musicians, and that although officially listed as non-coms they are allowed to accept any outside engagements that don't conflict with their military duties.—The New Yorker.

A LITTLE HUMOUR

A man was hired to carry hardware out of a ship on to a wharf. As he crossed the plank with two small but very heavy anvils, one under each arm, the plank broke and he went down into the water. He came up and shouted for a rope, but no one heard him. He went down and came up the second and third time, and the last time he appeared he said: "If someone doesn't throw me a rope pretty soon, I'll drop one of these anvils!"

"Ever heard this one?" asked one of the group sitting around the campfire. "A dog was tied to a rope 14 feet long. Twenty feet away was a fat, juicy bone. How did the dog get the bone?"

"Oh, that old one," answered another. "You want one of us to say 'I give up', and then you'll say, 'That's what the dog did!'"

"No; you're wrong, for the dog got the bone."

"Well, how did he get it?"

"The other end of the rope wasn't tied."

East Hastings Women's Institutes Hold Annual District Convention

The Institutes of East Hastings district met in convention at Bethel Church on Tuesday, May 30th. Delegates were present from each of the seven Institutes as well as interested members, altogether making a gathering of nearly one hundred ladies.

Shortly after the opening hour the District President, Mrs. Wm. White of Roslin, called the meeting to order. Previous to this friendly greetings had been exchanged and the names registered, this being in charge of Mrs. Carl Clarke and Miss Margaret Tufts.

Mrs. C. Hayes, Georgetown, the representative from the department, and Mrs. T. L. Nickle, Madoc, Provincial director, were invited to seats on the platform. All joined in singing "O Canada" with Mrs. Harry Harrison as leader. Then followed the Institute Ode and prayer.

After the Roll Call of the branches, reports were received. The District finances showed a balance of $37.11 and each of the Institutes had raised and expended various amounts during the year, each showing a balance on hand.

The District President reported she had attended a meeting of each of the 7 Institutes and had been warmly welcomed and entertained.

Conveners of standing committees showed work and study was being done throughout the district in health, home economics, agriculture, historical research, legislation, Canadianization, relief, peace and education. The convener sought to create a keener interest in the above subjects. Study the laws of Democracy and uphold it, was recommended. The "peace" report was closed with these thoughts —"There are ideals worth living for, there are ideals worth dying for, but no ideals are worth killing for. The report on education, the first to be given in East Hastings district, was concluded with the statement "Cease not to learn until thou cease to live."

Following community singing, the Provincial Director, Mrs. Nickle, addressed the ladies. A few suggestions were offered first of which was that the Secretary of the local Institute report on the highlights of the Institute work for the year, instead of giving merely the finances which have already been given by the District Secretary. Instead of lengthy memorial services, observing a two minute silence is perhaps more effective, and quite appropriate.

Summarize reports before sending them to the area convener. Mrs. Nickle stated there was a decided change in the attitude of the Provincial Board and efforts would be made to bring only usable information from it to the local Institutes. This year the board met without a superintendent as Miss McDermand was married the day previous to its meeting. The executive had gone ahead and purchased a silver coffee service for her, the retiring superintendent.

Mrs. Nickle stressed the fact that the excellence of district, area, and provincial reports depends on the reports received from the local Institutes, so do not fail to report what you are doing along each line of work to the convener of each standing committee.

Local Institute funds should be used for local needs, was advised. Other bits of advice were—study the co-operative program; teach new Canadians to sing our songs with us; put "peace" in your budget; get acquainted with world activities; use more time at District annuals for discussion; have all cheques signed by the president as well as the secretary and observe the six year term of office.

As no gift was given the Queen by the Institutes an illuminated address on parchment was sent her while at Ottawa.

Miss Mary Clarke, the successor to Miss McDermand as Superintendent of Institutes, asks that we seek to build together on the excellent foundation already laid in Institute work. Mrs. Nickle spoke in favour of the new Institute magazine, which is chuck full of information. 12 copies costing 25 cents. Mrs. Nickle's closing remarks were an inspiration to carry on "For Home and Country, 'til the Master of all good workmen shall set us to work anew.

At this point in the program, Mr. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative for the district, spoke for a few minutes on home and community improvement. There is need for reforestation, let us strive to build up a "tree conscious" community. Take advantage of the free trees available through the Department of Agriculture. Thirty-two teachers obtained trees for planting in school grounds this year.

The afternoon session opened with community singing.

Mrs. Connors, president of Quinte Institute, presided and asked Mrs. Harry Ketcheson for the address of welcome. This was given in such a very pleasing way that no one could regret being present. "Bethel" as she said, meant "a home away from home", and the hospitality and thoughtfulness of the Phillipston Zion ladies made every person feel quite at home. In conclusion Mrs. Ketcheson hoped each one would get a keener sense of her responsibility and carry home a resolve to work more energetically for home and country.

In reply to the address of welcome, Mrs. Arnold Mitchell voiced the sentiments of all when she said we would retain pleasant and profitable recollections of the 1939 District Annual.

Mrs. Hayes, the second guest speaker added her personal appreciation to the ladies who had entertained us so royally. At the lunch hour all partook of a bountiful dinner served in the church shed. With much thought and care the tables had been laid and decorated and then laden with such a variety of good things that only remarks of "how pretty!" and "what a dinner!" could be heard, so this distinguished visitor, before presenting her afternoon address, publicly expressed her thanks.

Following is a list of officers, prepared by the nominating committee, which was presented and re-elected for the year following:

Pres.—Mrs. Wm. White, Roslin.

1st Vice—Mrs. H. J. Eade, Deseronto.

2nd—Mrs. Robt. Bunnett.

Secretary—Mrs. Noble Brown, Belleville.

Federated Representative —Mrs. Wm. White.

Delegate to Convention — Mrs. Harry Murphy.

Alternate for Fed. Rep.—Mrs. H. J. Eade.

Conveners for standing committees were also re-elected.

The auditors for 1939 — Mrs. Harry Grills, Mrs. C. Mitchell.

A new press reporter was elected —Mrs. R. Badgley.

After Mrs. Hayes completed the business of the election some helpful suggestions were offered—make use of the excellent co-operative program for everything in it is in direct response to what has been asked for.

Have the "roll call" one of information and inspiration.

Since the aim of the Institute is to promote better living put energy and enthusiasm into your work.

Our desires are health, comfortable homes, respectable clothes, food, knowledge and recreation and these needs have guided the department in putting out the co-operative program. The choice of a project for the coming year was decided. Since the majority wanted it, a Local Leader Training School in Vegetable Cookery was chosen. It will be held in the fall at Melrose. An officers' rally was asked for and will be held at Roslin in the fall.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Nickle and Mrs. Hayes and the Phillipston Zion Institute.

Miss Lily Weese, in the absence of Miss Pollard reported on Girls' work in the district and spoke of the courses open to the juniors this year. Miss Snider, from Quinte branch, one of the two girls who had attended the girls' convention at Guelph, outlined the activities of her stay there.

Mrs. Tufts gave flashes from Belleville convention which were well received, mentioning a highlight of each speaker, Senator Cairine Wilson, Mrs. McDowell and Miss Powell.

Mrs. Harry Harrison added variety to the program when she gave a humorous reading.

Miss Stevenson brought in her pupils and they sang "The Land of the Maple" very nicely.

The District Annual will be held at Plainfield next year.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A duet by Mrs. C. Haight and Mrs. Russell Macfarlane with Mrs. T. Leslie as accompanist, was a pleasing number on the morning program.

The thrift exhibit at this meeting created much interest as did also the sleeping garments, the work of one home making club.

FOURTH SESSION

Long and bitter debates, notably over the Bren Gun contract which held the spotlight in committee stage up to the last, marked the session of a little more than 4½ months. The Public Accounts Committee was sitting up to the moment of prorogation late Saturday night and failed to report any conclusion on the Bren Gun issue.

Acts as Leader

Justice Minister Lapointe acted as leader of the House during the last stages of the session after Prime Minister Mackenzie King went on tour with Their Majesties.

Apart from the legislative aspect the outstanding event of the session was the visit of Their Majesties to the Senate Chamber May 19 when the King, in a ceremony unknown to any British Parliament since 1854, gave royal assent to bills and delivered in French and English a brief speech from the throne.

Finance Minister Dunning was unable to achieve the balanced budget he had hoped for the previous year. Presenting his budget address April 25 he forecast a $60,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year. Taxation and tariff changes were not of major significance.

Total revenue for current year was estimated at $490,000,000 while the main, supplementary and special supplementary estimates reached the total of $559,000,000.

Thfe estimate for defence was nearly double any previous year, amounting to $63,000,000 but this and other appropriations went through the supply committee with only normal discussion.

Adopted Minority Report

Highlight of the Senate's activities was the adoption of the minority report of the committee on the railway problem which sat for two years on this knotty question. In the committee the majority were Liberals and a report was adopted advocating continued co-operation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific.

But in the Senate the Conservatives are in a majority and they asked the minority committee report calling for unified management of the two roads. In putting this through Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen went against the platform pledged by the National Party leader, Hon. R. J. Manion.

The Senate Conservative group was also out of line with the Commons Conservatives on the Central Mortgage Bank Bill the last day of the session. Senator Meighen drastically changed the measure in an amendment forced through the red chamber by his Conservative majority, but every Commons Conservative present except. Hon. C. H. Cahan (St. Lawrence-St. George) supported the Government in opposing the Senate changes and the latter were finally dropped.

National Policy

Four bills, sponsored by Agriculture Minister Gardiner, contained the basis of what he described as a national policy for Agriculture. Together with an amendment to the Wheat Board Act, sponsored by Trade Minister Euler, they included the Government's plans for assisting western farmers this year as well as long range measures for agriculture all across Canada.

The initial price for wheat payable by the Wheat Board was set at 70 cents per bushel basis No. 1 northern at Fort William and for the first time it was extended to wheat grown in the east as well as in the west.

For the west the House also passed an acreage bonus measure, designed to became a system of crop insurance. Under it payments will be made to farmers on the basis of their cultivated acreage in cases of crop failure or extremely low prices. These measures apply only to emergency years.

60 Cents For Wheat

The general legislation is based on assistance to co-operative marketing agencies. In the case of wheat the Bill provides for a government guarantee of an initial price of 60 cents per bushel when paid by pools or other co-operative agencies. Any loss suffered by reason of the sale price being less than 60 cents would be made good.

The same principle is applied to all other farm products in another bill, except that no definite figure is named. The guarantee to co-operative marketing fruit, coarse grains, potatoes, livestock or other agricultural products will be based on the average market price of the particular product over a period of years immediately preceding the arrangement.

Another of Mr. Gardiner's Bills provides a bonus on production of high grade cheese. This is designed to increase Canada's output of cheese which commands top prices in export markets and possibly divert milk into the production of cheese rather than butter, of which there is a surplus.

Government Owned

Designed to bring mortgage interest rates down to a maximum of 5 1-2 per cent on urban properties, and five per cent on farm properties, the Central Mortgage Bank will be a wholly government owned institution with $10,000,000 capital stock, administered by the officers of the Bank of Canada.

Lending institutions may become members of the Mortgage Bank by agreeing to adjust mortgages to a maximum of 80 per cent of the appraised value of property concerned, to reduce interest rates to the maximum fixed, and write off interest arrears in excess of two years. Loss suffered by the companies in this adjustment will be shared equally by the Central Mortgage Bank.

The Bank may issue three per cent debentures up to $200,000,000 in order to provide a reservoir of money for mortgages, available to member companies in exchange for their own debentures. This was the last measure dealt with by parliament, passing a few minutes before prorogation.

Defence Purchasing Board

The Government's Bill establishing a Defence Purchasing Board furnished considerable discussion, in view of the Bren Gun contract enquiry. It provided that a Board of three men be established to supervise all defence department contracts in excess of $5,000, and it limited the profit which might be made on contracts given without competitive tender to five per cent of the capital employed in the work involved in the contract.

When the measure went to the Senate the Upper House amended it somewhat. It inserted a provision making the chairman of the board an associate member of the defence council, and also put all defence contracts currently existing under the Board's supervision.

The only government measure left on the order paper was a resolution upon which was to be based legislation to limit expenditures by candidates in election campaigns with penalties imposed for failure to make proper returns. This stood in the name of Pensions Minister Power and appeared late in the session. A similar measure was brought forward last session and abandoned.

"MECCA OINTMENT

'Be Men and Women of Action' Graduating Students are Told At Baccalaureate Service

Rev. G. O. Fallis, B.D., M.B.E., of Trinity United Church, Toronto, is Speaker

AUDITORIUM FILLED

A ringing challenge to the graduating students of Albert College, "to be men and women of action, and to go out in life and serve," was given by the Rev. G. O. Fallis, B.D., M.B.E. minister of Trinity United Church, Toronto, in Bridge Street Church yesterday morning, in a stirring address that featured the Baccalaureate service held there for the faculty and students of the college.

In the simple eloquence for which he is noted, the speaker addressed his remarks mainly to the students who occupied the centre aisles of the church. Coeds in spotless white added a touch of color to the dignity of faculty gowns. The male students occupied the rear seats of the centre pews. The auditorium of the church was filled to capacity.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, Principal of the college, who introduced the guest speaker, and who was assisted by the Rev Dr. E. N. Baker, President-Emeritus of the institution.

Three Texts.

The guest speaker in centering his remarks about three texts, "Judge not by appearances", "God has shown me to call no man unclean", and "Bear ye one another's burdens", launched an eloquent appeal to the youth of today to not sit idly by in the feeling that you have gained sufficient knowledge.

"Whatever you do," he said, "don't tie yourselves up to the status quo. Christ went out into the world and recognized the fact that if a better world was to be had, existing conditions must be changed. He did this so well that people wanted to kill Him. This present Christian age needs young people like that. Youth with ideals as high as His, with a vision so splendid that people will want to kill them."

Mr. Fallis urged his listeners toward a "useful life". The more knowledge you gain about life the more able you will be to make sound deductions about life, he said. "Some young people, however, make the mistake of thinking graduation is the end of gaining knowledge. It is but a stepping stone to a wider knowledge of this thing called life—and the more you get of it the better more useful citizen you will become.

"This is particularly true of the international field," Mr. Fallis said. "If we can destroy international ignorance then we can destroy international suspicion. While one nation looks askance at others, it is wise to remember that there is a tremendous amount of good in all of them. Our position should be to think of their achievements rather than their failures; their virtues rather than their sins.

Study Others.

"As you leave this institution do not get the stupid idea that your days of gaining knowledge are over. Study the fellows with like qualities as your own as well as those whose likes and dislikes and side of nature is not in keeping with yours," the speaker declared.

"You cannot get too much knowledge. Dig beneath the surface. Do not be like some young people who have stored away a vast amount of learning yet who are not putting it to work. They are not getting anywhere and seem to be unable to achieve what they should achieve. Generally speaking they have that fundamental attitude toward life that is not in keeping with the Testament."

Cynicism is the great enemy of service, Mr. Fallis told the crowded auditorium. "You cannot be useful if you have a cynical outlook on life. You are simply insulating yourselves from life's best things. Christ was not cynical. Have His outlook on life. He saw angels in tarnished women, giants in little men. The reason Christ went to the Cross, I firmly believe, was because He saw the potentialities of human nature. He saw them so great they were worth dying for.

"Be like Him," the speaker urged. "Look at humanity with sympathy, warm affection and understanding that you will become a useful citizen. As you go out into society remember to have tenderness and compassion towards others. These qualities will link you to people. For everyone should have a friend.

Men and Women of Action.

"Be men and women of action," he continued," especially in this great democracy of ours are men and women of service needed more than anything else—men and women with wills, who can see and feel deeply and act promptly and courageously for Canada. What is the use of knowledge if you do not do the thing you see and feel ought to be done. Many grand institutions and people have died before they saw clearly and did not act."

"The most dangerous thing in life," the speaker warned, "is training of ourselves not to act socially, and not cooperate with the common needs of life. The finest quality you have may atrophy and die because it has not been used."

"There is nothing in the world that steadies us so much," the speaker concluded, "as the fact of being able to look back and see that we did the things we ought to have done and felt should have been done."

Previous to the address, Mr Fallis recalled many happy memories of Belleville. He paid special tribute to the staff and faculty of Albert College and to its president-emeritus the Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker.

Beautiful baskets of flowers placed in the church to the memory of the late John Houston by his employees added a colorful touch.

BRIDGE ST., W.M.S.

The Kingdom Without Frontiers was the subject discussed by Mrs. Ash at the June meeting of the W.M.S., which met in Bridge St., Friday afternoon Mrs. Ash had just returned from Toronto where she had attended the meeting of the Dominion Board of the United Church. She brought up-to-date news of the church-in-action in many parts of the world. Of particular interest was the news of the Madras Conference where Chinese and Japanese met with many people of other nationalities, free of race prejudice and free of any hostilities which might be expected among people whose country is at war.

The remainder of the programme with the devotional period, was given by the executive. They gave the story of Canada with her problems of poverty, unemployment, unemployables with her growing army of drifters—and of the selfishness and apathy of the comfortable classes who are afraid of any social betterment lest it affect their own pockets. The problem which the Church is facing is how to set about to get its members to face their own selfishness and greed.

A number of the Secretaries for various departments gave interesting accounts of their various activities. Miss Lazelle Brown, the President was in charge throughout.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

The Grand Manner is the mood of many a "best" dinner frock. Worn with a hat dripping with paradise, a fitted dinner dress of black silk chiffon, has its top of black Chantilly lace, with big balloon sleeves. At hem is a wide flounce of the lace.

Rustling through the mode is the whisper of taffeta. A charming little ensemble is of paper-thin taffeta black or blue with a white dot. The basque dress is covered by a basque jacket. A flaring skirt meets the pointed basque bodice of the short-sleeved dress.

A good mixture of colors marks many of the prettiest hats. A smart model is a forward tilted and up-in-the back hat of fine straw in turquoise blue. At back are two large silk fuchsia colored roses. The misty silk veil with a long front drape is fuchsia too.

All ready from luncheon to midnight, the girl wearing a smart black bengaline ensemble. The loose boxy coat with full length cape sleeve covers a blouse of white chiffon shirred all over. The skirt is slim. The petal collar of the coat is tacked down and a white faille scarf tie is pulled through.

No Woman Can Afford to Lag Behind in the Beauty Parade

By HELEN FOLLETT

STEP ALONG with the pulchritude parade, lady; don't lag behind. No woman can afford to do that. When one doesn't care how one looks, one doesn't care much about anything.

Ideas of beauty change and they change for the better. The baby doll is a back number, the flat-chested flapper with the boyish figure has long been forgotten. The one-time clinging ivy, now a white-haired darling is out hustling for a pay check which makes her more interesting. She who starved for the sake of her shape now laps up three good squares a day and has a better disposition.

You may fancy that the nutty hat we are wearing are no great shakes for becomingness, but they do make on forget that birthdays scamper along pretty fast. It is fashionable to be animated, capable and healthy; the woman who talks about her operation or her neuritis gets nothing but dirty looks. Serves her right. The best way to collect beauty griefs is to let the mind dwell on troubles.

There are a lot of things wrong with this cuckoo world and that's all the more reason why every woman should make herself decorative and charming. It's no time to bawl or to sit around and brood. Keep your beauty kit working and some time things will be better.

"Sharpen" Your Nails At Home

PENNY SINGLETON . . . her finger nails get attention regularly.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVEN THOUGH one trot-trots to the beauty shop every week, a certain amount of care must be given to the finger-nails. It is just as well to know what to do, what not to do. One of the "what nots" concerns the metal nail cleaner which should be chucked out of the beauty kit. It makes the inner surface of the nail eave rough so that dust will sick there stubbornly. Have your orange wood stick handy. Sharpen to a rounded point. When using it don't press deeply into the flesh beneath the nail. Wounds there can become infected.

A white nail pencil is convenient. You can put it in your pencil sharpener, have it ever ready for the job. Dip it in water before using. Those hard-working girls who hold down the wife and mother job will find it convenient to use after polishing silver or shining up the furniture.

Cream the cuticle about your pretty finger shells every night; you'll never have a hangnail to wail about. After a brisk friction, lift the flesh away from the nail base with the orange wood stick. It is only when the skin surface clings to the nail that it breaks into maddening little shreds.

Coiffures seem to be having their ups and downs. Whether one should play hairdresses high or low is the favorite subject when the dear hearts get together.

One thing to remember: The new high hairdress is not a duplicate of the funny topknot that mama wore when she was 16 and twisted her pigtail material into a lump on the top of her head. It is a grand improvement. It is soft, but neat as wax. You can have rolls, a combination of undulation and rolls, or a back swirl with flat ringlets at the ears. There must be a careful regard for the shaping of the head.

The long bob has had a long run for its money. Time something was done about it. Don't you hear the snip-clipping noise? It is the sound of shears being used on feminine heads throughout the land.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Guest Contributes Graciousness to Occasion

Far too many people think that for a wedding guest there is no particular obligation other than to see, to hear and, often, to eat! As a return for all the hospitality, the impressive beauty, the courtesy and friendliness that are extended to them, they often offer only a detached curiosity, an objective interest, a more or less detached participation. They are absorbed in their own reactions only, often to the point of being unpleasantly critical.

The kind-minded and, therefore, kind-mannered guest, on the other hand, realizes a personal responsibility about contributing graciousness and understanding, a friendly appreciation of the infinite pains that have been expended to make a perfect wedding.

With this in mind, I make a few suggestions to the wedding guest.

First, answer your invitation promptly. Then, if you plan to send a wedding present, send it as soon as you possibly can after you have received your invitation, so that the bride-elect will have time to write you her note of thanks before the last busy days before the wedding.

Even if you have received the magic card which will enable you to a choice seat, it is considerate to get to the church reasonably early. By so doing, you help the difficult task of the ushers.

The ideal guest will bow to the usher who meets her and will chat graciously and naturally with him as he escorts her up the aisle. She will, of course, accept without question the seat he assigns her.

At a wedding, whether at home or in church, the guests rise the very first moment they hear the wedding march. When you are a guest at a church wedding, do not leave your place after the ceremony and recessional until the bride's family and to the groom's family, we should give "the right of way" to the members of the receiving-line at the reception. They must be given time to get from the church to their places in the receiving-line.

In a house wedding the guests wait until the mother and father and other relatives of the bride and groom greet the bride and groom, before they step up to greet them.

In the receiving-line the guest first greets the mother of the bride as he or she would first greet the hostess of any party, or the mother and father of the bride(if the father is also in the receiving-line), and makes some gracious comment of appreciation of the beauty of the bride and of the wedding in general. With equal graciousness, the guest greets the groom's mother and father, remembering to say something charmingly appreciative about their son.

Remember, too, that you offer, in your own appropriate words, "best wishes to the bride" (for example, "I hope you will always be as happy as you are today"), and save the word "congratulations" for the groom. You should not "congratulate" the bride.

And even if we disapprove of any detail of the wedding, we will not, if we are well-bred, utter one word of criticism.

Courtesy Tip

When you have another person call a telephone number for you and ask to have a certain person come to the telephone, make a point of being near the telephone and of answering it promptly. It is rude to keep the other person waiting. This applies to either a business call or a social call. We have no right to assume that our time is more important than the other person's.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

The Graduation Corsage

Dear Miss Fairfax

The one and only girl has honored me by accepting a date for my graduation dance. I haven't much money to spend, but I've borrowed a car from a kindly relative. Now the next thing is, must I send her a corsage bouquet, and what kind should it be, and how much will it cost?

Graduate

A pretty arrangement of small roses such as talisman, or sweet peas, or lilies-of-the-valley may be had for a dollar. Orchids cost up to $10 but it would be very bad taste for a high school or college boy to send so expensive a corsage.

It's practically an unwritten law that when you invite a girl to a dance you send her a corsage.

Mother Invites Sneaking

Dear Miss Fairfax

Though I'm 20, my mother does not approve of my going with boys, so I have to sneak when I go out for an occasional date. The boy comes of a respected family and has a good reputation. We both play tennis. That's how we met in the first place. I just hate to sneak, but there is no choice between this and mother's unreasonableness.

Evelyn

Attention! All mothers, please! This letter is a fairly characteristic specimen of hundreds which come to this column. Girls hate to sneak. They feel it's degrading. Yet in the long run, they'd rather sneak than be known as a recluse—a girl wholly apart from the rest of the bunch. Here's hoping if this girl's mother should chance to see this letter, she'll relax domestic blue laws, and let her 20-year-old daughter have an occasional date.

Has No Dates

Dear Miss Fairfax

When I was unable to go out with boys, they all wanted to take me, but now that the ban has been lifted, no dates come my way. I'll admit I'm bashful, and if a boy doesn't start a conversation, I haven't anything to say. In writing this letter to you, please don't think I'm looking for a husband. I just want some good clean fun, and to enjoy my first youth before I settle down to become a housewife. I'm 19 years old.

Disappointed

A girl who stares at the wall and has nothing to say, or twiddles her fingers in an agony of embarrassment, is terrifying to the average man. Therefore, she should be prepared against these ominous attacks of silence, especially if she draws an equally silent partner. The shortest cut to being a conversationalist is to know what is going on about you, in this highly interesting world. Read the papers. Talk about what is going on. Almost all boys are interested in sports. Go to baseball matches, to movies, read. One of the best ways of getting over embarrassment is to join a class in public speaking, or expression. Public schools, Adult Education and Vocational Training have free classes.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Children's Weight Changes More Important Than Height Changes

While the weights of the Quintuplets have fluctuated, their heights have been a great deal more steady. When they were born, we found that four Quints were all 13 inches long. Marie, the smallest, was just a shade under that figure. During the months that followed we weighed the babies often, but we didn't measure them as frequently because weight changes are a great deal more significant than changes in height. When one of the children gained or lost an ounce, that was an important sign of her condition of health, whereas the addition of an eighth of an inch or so in height didn't make any difference.

The children all doubled their height their first year, and have since averaged a little less each year. Through the five years, the heights have remained even closer together than the weights, for the total range between Marie, the shortest, and whatever Quint happened at the time to be tallest, has never been more than an inch. Right now, four of the children are exactly the same height, 42 1-2 inches. Marie is half an inch behind.

The variations within that one-inch range have been surprising. No one child has had a monopoly on the growing honors, for all have been in first place at one time or another—all but Marie.

Steady increase in height and weight can be credited largely to the schedule we have followed. Every day we have watched the children's diet. Everything they have eaten has been carefully watched.

You see, when the children were born, we had to be absolutely meticulous in our care of them. The slightest slip or carelessness would have meant death to one or perhaps more. So we built up a schedule, almost a tradition, and we have been fortunate enough to be able to adhere to that schedule.

This is the reason that I am always urging mothers to make up a schedule for their babies and, having made one that is convenient, then stick to it. In the matter of diet, I know it's nice to give children things they like. But when you do that, you aren't doing the children any good.

AT THE McCARTHY

"KING OF THE TURF"

The producer, Edward Small, who gave the screen such outstanding triumphs as, "I Cover the Waterfront", "The Count of Monte Cristo" and just recently "The Duke of West Point", now has made his finest motion picture production, which is none other than "King of the Turf" featuring Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniels, Walter Abel and a host of other favorite screen celebrities and which is now the current attraction on the screen, at the McCarthy Theatre.

"King of the Turf", you-must-see, for it is a fast-moving, heart-warming father-and-son theme that tells a stirring story of a loving comradeship and loyalty between a man and his boy.

Adolphe Menjou, recognized as a great actor, plays his finest role, as the boy's father, dramatizing father love in the unforgettable way that "Stella Dallas" showed you a mother's soul.

A great performance by the sensational new juvenile acting find, Roger Daniel—as the boy—lovely Dolores Costello in a role that gives full scope to her beauty and dramatic powers....as the mother ....and the throat-clutching excitement of headlong racing scenes, with all the spectacular panoply and human interest of the race track are woven into "King of the Turf" to make it the picture that surpasses all previous outstanding successes and make them fade into oblivion from your mind.

Another hilarious comedy treat featuring Edgar Kennedy entitled, "Clock Wise" and a new screen novelty entitled "Cavalcade of Stuff", in which the laughs come so fast that they become contagious are two excellent featurettes, preceding the main attraction "King of the Turf."

AT THE BELLE

"DODGE CITY"

The brawling, turbulent, sudden-death milliew of the toughest, roughest town in the cattle country of the 1870's is the background against which Errol Flynn projects his virile, adventurous personality in "Dodge City" the Warner Bros. Technicolor production which is now on the Belle screen.

Dealing with the most turbulent era of the old west, it is a production of a scope and authenticity that may well make it remembered as a milestone in motion picture history.

Making the unmistakably British Errol Flynn its hero may seem a novelty to the casual film-goer but it will require no stretching of credibility on the part of those who are steeped in the history of the period and the region which are covered in "Dodge City". For there were a number of adventurous young Britons who became well-known figures in the pioneer days of the west and it is easy to believe that such a fellow as Flynn is an actuality could well have been one of them.

With this blessing of historical authenticity, Flynn makes an ideal figure as a venturesome young Irish soldier of fortune who has become a cowboy in Texas after having fought in the army of the Confederacy during the Civil War. The story of the picture picks him up when he has become the trail boss of an outfit driving a huge herd of Texas longhorn steers up along the Chisholm Trail to Dodge City, the little town in southwestern Kansas that had become the largest cattle shipping centre in the west after the Santa Fe Railway had been extended to what had merely been a drinking and carousing centre for the soldiers from nearby military post, Fort Dodge.

In the screen play written by Robert Buckner, events are contrived to get Flynn to accept the post of sheriff of the wicked town where the six-shooter was the final arbiter of all arguments. He sets about cleaning up the town, and this he finally succeeds in doing.

There are many impressive and hair-raising scenes in the production, but those that the spectator is most likely to remember longest are a cattle stampede in the early part of the picture, a rousing saloon brawl in which more than 100 men make a veritable shambles of the place, and a climactic pistol battle in a railway mail car which is given a sudden and horrible twist when the car bursts into flames.

Flynn, of course, dominates the action of the piece throughout, but he is given valiant assistance by a very expert ensemble of supporting players. Notable among them are Olivia de Havilland, as a pioneer newspaper girl who falls in love with the sheriff, and then helps him in his campaign to clean up the town; Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale and others.

All that really need be said about the direction is that it was handled by Michael Curtiz, for he has long since established himself as the best director in Hollywood for large-scale pictures.

The popular Belle newsreel, and a clever comicolor cartoon "Daffy Duck and Dinosaur", precede the feature attraction.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

CHAPTER XXV

During the rest of the day, Jan kept Rex at her side as she panned the stream, watching the man, Hank Williard, out of the corner of her eye. He was already busy constructing a sluice.

What had happened to Red Buckner? Why didn't he come?

At last, the airplane overhead! But Red was late. Would he stop—seeing this strange man at work on her claim?

She saw Hank Williard's hand on his gun, heard his warning, "Act natural!" She waved both hands at the plane. Her heart stood still as she watched it.

The plane circled. Then, instead of descending lower for a landing, it rose and zoomed away.

Jan looked at Hank Willard. He was grinning. His whole manner seemed to say, "You see?"

And she did see. Red Buckner had gone. He hadn't sensed danger. He was one of those men who judged by appearances and did not investigate.

She could not know that Red was heading for town, was cracking out staccato instructions over his radio—could not know that caution had warned him not to go to the aid of a lone girl on her claim without the backing of the posse that was hunting Hank Willard, whom he had recognized through his powerful field glasses.

Janice slept fitfully that night, with Rex beside her bed. Hank was rolled in a blanket under the stars.

Her mind churned with the things he had told her about himself that evening as they ate dinner. A gambler. He had been a dealer of faro, he said, in a rough gambling house where gun fights were frequent. Particularly he emphasized that he had been quick on the draw.

The next morning, Peter came paddling up the stream, with Hugh still among pillows in the bow of the canoe. He was whistling cheerily as he came into sight, and waved his paddle.

Hank turned from his sluice, and eyed Jan.

"Remember, you're my wife—and no nonsense!"

She did not answer. Hank thought himself so wise. And not to ask who these two men were—not to ask if they would know that she was not married!

Would Peter be quick enough on the draw? That was the thing. For Hank would reach for his gun with lightning fingers at the first sign that Peter scented trouble.

There was a questioning light in Peter's eyes as he brought the canoe to shore, a suspicious studying of the man who stood beside Jan.

"Building a sluice?" he asked, in the tense moment when Jan tried frantically to warn him with her eyes.

"Yeah," Hank said with a smile on his thin lips.

"Brought the bacon and flour," Peter told Jan, feeling his way through this dangerous situation, which he had realized to the fullest.

"Appreciate your doing that errand for my wife," said Hank. "Of course, she didn't know I'd be arriving yesterday with supplies."

As soon as he had spoken, he knew he had made a mistake—knew that Peter knew that Jan was unmarried.

He reached for his gun as Peter stepped on the bank with the side of bacon in his hand. Peter swung the bacon at the moment Hank drew—swung, and leaped toward the man—flung himself on him....

The gun barked as the men fell to the ground—barked once. Then was knocked from Hank's hand by the force of his fall. Jan ran to recover it. But the two struggling men were such a mass of arms and legs wrapped together, that she could not chance aiming—shooting.

Then—Rex came into the fray, a furious streak of fur. He landed on Hank's chest, and, with bared fangs, launched a vicious attack on the man's bare throat.

As Hank fought for his life, clutching at the dog's throat, Peter rose and landed a hard kick, with the toe of his heavy boot, at the base of the man's skull. With a grunt, Hank dropped back on the ground, as limp as a sack of flour.

Jan called off Rex, who reluctantly stood by while she and Peter tied the stranger hand and foot.

Hugh had struggled out of the canoe. Suddenly, he spoke.

"Two thousand dollars dead, five thousand alive!" he exclaimed. "Gosh, Jan, you're a lucky girl!"

Peter paused to study the face of the unconscious man. Then he nodded.

"Right," he agreed. "Wanted for holding up a bank and shooting the guard. Nice baby!"

"A reward?" said Jan. "Then you get it, Peter—it was you who really captured him."

"You get it—Rex was ready for the kill."

They argued, while Hugh sat down and listened, with a broad grin on his face.

"I'll take half," Jan agreed at last.

It was while she was making coffee for them all, over the fire, that Rex gave warning of the approach of strangers.

A sharp command rang out. "Hands up, everybody!"

Red Buckner, the sheriff and a posse of ten men came into the open with drawn guns. But sight of Hank Willard sitting sullenly on the ground, his hands and feet bound, the guns were lowered. "Thank heaven, Jan, you're all right!" Red exclaimed in relief. "So you got here ahead of us, Pete! Great work. Anybody hurt?"

As Jan told her story in detail, they all listened with admiration for a girl who could meet such a situation with such calm and courage.

"So you gunned him off my claim?" said Peter, and his eyes smiled down at her tenderly.

She nodded. Peter said no more, but Jan could see that he was going over that in his mind.

It was some time before the posse left with their prisoner.

"You'll be getting the reward, Miss Flagg," the sheriff promised.

"Mr. Hathaway and I are splitting that reward," Jan stated quietly. "He made the actual capture."

Alone at last, Jan and Peter stood looking into each other's eyes. Hugh had gone slowly up the pathway toward the other camp.

"So you gunned him off my claim!" Peter said again. "Gosh, Jan, you're a swell girl!

But he made no move to touch her.

CHAPTER XXVI

Restlessly, Peter had risen from Jan's fireside and silently walked away into the darkness. Rex had jumped to his feet, looking from Jan to the departing Peter. Then, at a signal from her, he had gone loping off after Peter.

Hugh leaned closer. His arm went about Jan's waist. She looked up, her eyes meeting his — questioning his arm about her.

Suddenly, she realized that Hugh loved her. She moved, tried to escape from his tight hold.

"I'm mad about you, Jan," he said, his voice trembling with emotion. "Mad! If you don't love me—if you won't marry me—I—I—"

"I don't love you, Hugh," she told him quietly.

"Won't do you any good to love old Pete," he plunged on. "He hasn't got an ounce of romance in his make-up. Doesn't know a woman is alive. Now, take me! I love you—and I'll make you love me."

"Love doesn't come that way, Hugh. Please—don't paw me...."

His lips crushed down upon hers. She struggled against his kiss, revolted. This was the time she should use her hand, flashed through her mind. But she stayed her hand—clenched it against his chest, pushing him away.

She struggled out of his arms, up to her feet. Her eyes were black with rage. She backed away from him as he sprang to his feet, trying to get his arms about her again, reiterating his love in quick, jerky words.

"You can't expect me, loving you as I do, to see you all the time like this—"

QUEEN WAITS WHILE KING REVIEWS TROOPS

While the King reviewed his Canadian troops at Victoria, Queen Elizabeth watched from the sidelines, accompanied by Premier T. D. Pattulo. The Pacific sun evidently proved a little too strong for Her Majesty, who sought the shelter of an umbrella.

The scorn in her words cut him. She had meant it to, meant it to bring him abruptly to his senses. It did.

"I—I—"

Jan turned — and saw Peter, standing a little distance away, his face working with suppressed emotion, his hands clenched at his sides.

Before she could speak, he was beside Hugh, his voice threatening.

"Back to camp, Hugh, and never again let me find you annoying Jan!"

Hugh turned white with rage. What a temper he had! Words poured from his mouth.

"A cold-blooded iceberg like you! Of course she would love you. They all do! And then, you act like a sneak and creep back to spy. A man has a right to lose his head for a moment! It's you who have no right to come here and try to butt in!" Words went on and on.

Peter stood like a statue, the color drained from his face, his finger pointing the way back to camp. At last, there was nothing left for Hugh to do but make an angry departure.

That left Jan facing Peter, her heart beating wildly. She raised her eyes to meet his, and read something which shocked her.

His lips formed into a sneer.

"Why didn't you slap him?" he demanded.

Jan stood stricken. She had not expected that from Peter! Her breath caught in a sob. Suddenly, she felt very much alone. She dropped down on the pine needles, bitter tears running down her cheeks.

The snap of a match being lighted. Not another sound.

At last, she looked up. Peter was standing above her, smoking a cigarette. She noticed that the hand holding the cigarette trembled.

"That was a dirty crack," he said slowly.

Quickly, she shook her head. "I deserved it," she whispered.

"Dry your eyes. I can't leave you here crying," he suggested practically, offering her his handkerchief.

She dried her eyes. Hugh had been right—Peter did not love her. That stern line of his lips—he did not love her. She had killed all chance of making him love her when she had slapped his face the night he had kissed her.

Resolutely, she rose, her head flung back, her eyes defiant.

"Whether you like it or not, I'm going to try to explain something that I shall always be sorry about" she said, then paused.

Courage welled up within her as she realized that he was waiting—that he wanted to hear what she had to say.

"That night—oh, I don't know if I can make you understand—and—don't look at me so—so coldly!"

"How am I supposed to look?" His tone was dry.

She shrugged, then went on, "I'd been wanting you to notice me, and you hadn't. In Champaign, you didn't notice me enough to say good-by. In New York, though, you said you had a feeling that we'd meet again. We did meet again—here—because I came here to meet you! I love you, Peter. But you were only friendly. You treated me as you would—another man. And I wanted you to love me...."

The expression in his eyes frightened her.

"Go on!" he commanded harshly.

She took a deep breath and floundered on, "I wanted to be loved, and you paid me no attention. It made me mad. You seemed entirely unconscious that I had any charm. It made me angrier than I'd been for a long time—except for a few months ago. You see, Wylde Greene had made love to me, and I thought I loved him — until I found out he was only after my father's money. I ran away from that kind of love, and his kind of kisses. And then—when you showed no signs of interest in me, but kissed me so suddenly, I thought—"

WHERE CUBA FEARS REFUGEE SUICIDE WAVE

Here are some women and children refugees from Germany who were barred from landing in Cuba when they arrived on the Hamburg-American liner St. Louis. Nine hundred and forty refugees, all told, came in on the ship; only 18 were permitted to land. Two of those barred attempted to commit suicide one slashing his wrists; the other taking poison. Fearing other attempts, Cuban officials ordered the ship to leave Cuban waters immediately.

"You kissed me back," he reminded her sharply.

Meekly, she nodded her head. "I know. But then, I remembered all that had gone before and, for a moment, the kiss seemed an insult—and—"

"Don't say anything more!"

His arms were about her, holding her close. She clung to him. The strong arms tightened.

"I'm going to kiss you again, Jan," he warned her.

"I want you to," she whispered back, her hand tenderly stroking the cheek that, weeks before, she had so soundly slapped.

He kissed her—with all the fervor of the time before—and she answered his kiss.

She whispered, "Kiss me again, Peter."

And he did.

CHAPTER XXVII

Peter had kissed her! They had sat in the moonlight and talked of love. Peter had admitted he loved her, thought he didn't want to love any woman—yet, Peter loved her! But he had said nothing of marriage. Casually, he had spoken of when she would be leaving the mountains and he would be returning to Illini, as though their love would make no change in the pattern of their lives.

But she had his admission of love. For the time being, that was sufficient. It was only early August—there were still six weeks in which she could hope to make him realize that he could not go on without her.

The next afternoon, just as the sun was setting in a burst of glory, a plane flew overhead, circled and banked, dipped and soared. Jan watched it. It was not Red's plane, but a huge silver bird which seemed trying to locate a landing spot. Presently, it disappeared.

Jan thought no more about it. She had work to do. Peter and a much-chastened Hugh were coming down to her camp for supper.

It was while they were about the fire, eating hungrily after the hard day's work, that Rex jumped to his feet with a growl, then suddenly bounded into the woods with a glad bark.

"It can't be Red, unless he's flying a different plane. Besides, he'd have been here before this," Peter commented.

He rose and walked across the clearing toward the path where Rex had disappeared.

As he reached the edge of the clearing, Rex bounded back, followed by a lovely girl with golden hair.

"Down, Rex, down!" she protested as he whirled to jump up on her in his excitement.

He whirled again and rushed to Jan, who had leaped to her feet in astonishment.

"Why, Ivonne!" she exclaimed.

"Hello, Jan. What a heck of a place to be in!" Ivonne replied, with a silvery little laugh, her eyes straying to Peter and Hugh. "Thought I'd drop in to see you. Brought along Wylde and Brad."

Just then, Wylde came into the clearing, and Jan's heart skipped a beat. Wylde here! Color rushed into her cheeks. She had thought she would never see him again, and here he was, smiling at her.

"Hello, Beautiful!" he exclaimed. "Darned if you aren't beautiful even in those boyish togs!"

"Hello, Wylde." Jan's manner was cordial.

She introduced Peter and Hugh to Ivonne, watched Wylde and Peter shake hands, and then herself was introduced to Bradish Braxton.

"Food!" exclaimed Wylde, and sat right down to the fire.

It was he who told the story in his brisk manner. Ivonne, Brad and he had tired of California and decided to fly back to New York. The papers had been so full of Jan's bravery in connection with the capture of Hank Willard, even printing a map showing the location of Jan's claim, that Ivonne had decided to drop in to see her heroine sister. So here they were, and they probably would stay a while, for Ivonne had damaged her plane in landing and until it could be repaired, they would have to remain.

"How delightful!" Jan assured them. "Ivonne will stay here with me, and I'm sure Peter will put you boys up at his camp."

Wylde studied her with open admiration. She knew he wanted to talk with her alone, but was determined to put off the ordeal as long as possible.

"Have to work for your board," Peter stated flatly. "No work, no grub."

Jan flashed him an approving glance.

"That's right," she agreed. "Everyone works here. Wylde you will love watching the riffles for slugs, and Brad,"—she looked at him appraisingly—"probably Brad can gather firewood, or maybe shoot a few rabbits or—can you hit a bird on the wing?"

Ill at ease, Brad announced arrogantly that he most certainly could, and Jan, though a little skeptical, nodded her approval.

"And Ivonne?" asked Wylde.

"Ivonne can help me pan," Jan stated flatly.

Her sister looked at her with the same expression that her mother had when things were not going as she wished, but Jan ignored the look. Ignoring dissatisfaction would be the way to handle this spoiled, ease-loving sister who had always lived in the luxury of her father's home.

"Ivonne pan gold? That gives me a laugh! Why, Janice, she wouldn't soil her pretty hands," Wylde exclaimed.

Jan looked ruefully down at her own hands. For a moment, she felt inclined to hide them, but then, the pride she felt in herself made her hold them out for all to see. Her eyes met Wylde's defiantly.

"Mine are soiled with honest labor," she said quietly.

"Gosh!" muttered Wylde, his eyes agleam with admiration.

CHAPTER XXVIII

After supper, they considered the problem of the damaged plane.

"How do we get word outside that we need aid?" Ivonne demanded. "Also, my radio went on the blink just after we left Los Angeles, and so, I can't communicate with Father. By now, he must be wild. I didn't tell him I was going to stop here, and he'll expect a call from one of the airports."

The mention of her father brought a stab of anxiety to Jan. Her father must not worry. What could they do? Red would fly overhead tonight, but it would be two days before he was due to land here on one of his regular visits.

"It's a two-days paddle to town" muttered Peter, frowning.

"Peter! We could signal Red," Jan suggested. "We could build a fire in the centre of the clearing where he lands—a high torch fire. There's little wind, so we could keep the flames from spreading. Red would surely see it. Then, we could douse the fire with water, and scatter it and stamp it out, so that he could land as soon as the ground cooled."

"The very thing!" exclaimed Peter and Hugh together. They jumped to their feet, ready for the undertaking.

With the aid of flashes, they all made their way to the clearing. While the others gathered wood and piled it in the centre of the field under Hugh's direction, Peter fussed with the radio in Ivonne's plane until he was sure he could not repair it. Then he joined the others.

It was he who touched the match to the dry wood, sending flames leaping high. The night was clear, the moon shining brightly, and the slight breeze carried the smoke high.

They waited. And then, after what seemed hours, they heard the distant hum of a motor, and Jan jumped to her feet.

"It's Red!" she cried.

He blinked his sailing lights, and they knew he was peering down at them through his glasses, seeing them around the fire, seeing the plane at the edge of the clearing, tilted like a wounded bird.

He circled and circled, as he waited for them to put out the fire and clear the field. Then he swooped downward and landed.

Not five minutes later, he was tersely radioing a report to his station, asking them to relay a message to Ogden Flagg of the Continental Radio Corporation. Jan saw relief on Ivonne's face, and realized that Ivonne, in her own selfish way, loved her father and did not want him to worry.

Red promised to bring in the necessary repair parts and a mechanic when he came on Thursday afternoon. With that, they had to be satisfied.

He laughed, saying, "I seem to be guardian of the peace, communications to the outside world, and air service, all combined. Good thing the forest service gives us the authority to use our own judgment in emergencies."

"You're a mighty kind person," Ivonne told him, "and I'll see that my father writes to the proper authorities to recommend you for promotion."

She did not mean to be condescending, did not mean to hurt Red with her assurance that, through her father, he would be rewarded, but she had hurt him, and his polite "Thank you" made it apparent.

Jan hastened to soften the hurt to his feelings.

"Thanks, Red — you are again proving to be a friend in need. I'm going to be terribly indebted to you by the time I leave here."

"It's a pleasure to do any little thing for you, Jan."

His smile assured her that he understood, and his hand on her shoulder for a moment gripped with friendly pressure. Ivonne might be the daughter of Ogden Flagg, able to scatter favors and rewards, but Jan was a pal, whose smile was thank-you enough for Red Buckner.

"No offense meant, Mr. Buckner," Ivonne explained, coming forward with her hand outstretched. "I thought you'd like a notice of merit, and Father is one who can pull strings."

"No offense taken, Miss Flagg. I just didn't stop to realize that you didn't know that people sometimes do things, not for what they gain, but just for friendship. Jan wanted to communicate with her father—that was enough for me."

"I see," murmured Ivonne, and looked at Jan curiously.

She was sizing up this sister who could command service just for herself—not through the magic of the name of Ogden Flagg. She felt a little envious and, at the same time, wondered what was the secret of her sister's attraction—for, surely, she was not feminine or fetching in her grimy costume, with saggy hair ill cut, and hands that looked more like a day laborer's than a girl's.

Also, Ivonne had never been put so thoroughly in her place as by this young red-haired forest ranger. It was disconcerting, happening before Wylde and Brad. But she must not show her annoyance. Red Buckner was their means of communication with the outside world. She forced her lips to smile.

They stood in the clearing until Red had taken off. Then they retraced their steps to Jan's claim.

Soon afterwards, the men said good night, and went on to Peter's camp.

CHAPTER XXIX

All the next day, Ivonne sat on the bank of the stream, watching Jan at work. She flatly refused to ruin her hands working in the water, handling that grimy gravel and sand, but her eyes brightened each time Jan pointed out the dust in the bottom of her pan. Rex remained near Jan, though from time to time, he stretched beside Ivonne for brief moments, and allowed her to stroke his head.

"Rex likes you almost as much as he likes Father," Ivonne said, a little enviously. "You know, Jan, Father's awfully keen to have you home with him."

Jan went on with her monotonous swirling of the pan, not taking her eyes from her work.

"And you?" she asked.

"I? Why, of course I want my sister at home. Really, Jan, aren't you tired of all this?"

"No, I'm not tired of it," Jan said decisively, "but at the end of the summer, I'm probably going to take Rex straight home and stay—for a while, anyway."

"Father will be glad," Ivonne told her earnestly. "Just wait until I put that news through to him."

"You're not putting that news through to him, Ivonne," Jan told her quickly. "That is between Father and myself."

"All right," Ivonne pouted, "but he is such a good guy that he should know."

Jan warmed to her sister. "He will know, because I'm going to tell him myself." She smiled, and Ivonne smiled back.

Brad and Wylde came into the clearing at that moment, both tired and disgruntled. Jan had to laugh at them, for it was so apparent that Peter had kept his word and put them to work, only relenting when he had seen they were really tired from the unaccustomed labor.

"Come on, Vonne," Brad said. "I want that liquor and some cigarettes from the plane."

Ivonne rose gracefully and snapped her fingers at Rex. He stood looking doubtfully at Jan.

"Go on, Rex—don't let them wander away and get lost," Jan ordered. Then, to Ivonne, "He knows his way around here—better to follow him and not trust to your sense of direction."

Alone with Wylde, who sat on the bank, protesting at her industriousness, Jan went on with her work. She would not stop until she had panned her usual amount. Wylde soon realized her determination and ceased to protest. He sat talking to her as he smoked.

"Why did you sneak off from Florida in such a huff, Janice?" he asked at last, coming to the subject which Jan had hoped could be put off for a while longer.

"Why are you rambling all over the country with Ivonne?" Jan countered.

"To keep her from marrying that bounder Brad," Wylde replied quickly, but there was an embarrassed flush in his cheeks.

"Not to keep in with the Flagg millions?"

"That was uncalled for, Janice!"

"I don't know about that. Your mother made it very clear to me that you had to marry money."

"Oh, Mother didn't mean it quite so badly."

"Or do you figure that, if you hang around with Ivonne, you may be welcome to the Flagg home on the day I return to it?"

"Are you going back?" he asked quickly, his eyes brightening.

"Some day I will go home."

"You know, you make a dozen of Ivonne. And capturing a bandit! Little Jan becoming a heroine!"

"Enough of that, Wylde! I don't like it. Peter and Rex did the job."

"Don't go modest!" Wylde laughed delightedly. "And a reward to boot!"

"The money meant nothing—it was my safety and Peter's that really counted."

"Going soft on Peter? Remember, Anson said he didn't see girls...."

Just then, Janice looked up to find Peter standing at the edge of the clearing, silently listening, a smile of amusement on his face.

"Hello, Peter," she said. How long had he been there? How much had he heard?

Marjorie Hitchon, one of this city's outstanding feminine athletes, added to her prowess by winning the senior girls' championship and established the only new record in the running high jump. Thelma Beale of Trenton won the intermediate girls' title while Miss L. Taft, also of Trenton High, won the junior girls' championship. Albert College, competing only in the senior and intermediate boys' categories, massed the greatest number of points in any one series as Pete Beach's Albert senior boys' stood out in their series, however.

Good Time Made

Times and distances were equal to the usual records as attained during provincial Secondary School track and field events, while many words of favorable comment were heard in favour of Jack Hodgson and Miss Maloney, respective athletic directors at the O.S.D. for the splendid laned quarter mile track and other facilities which made the meet a memorable one.

The meet continued from early morning until late Saturday afternoon when the final event resulted in new Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. champions being crowned. N. A. Beach of Albert College and Geo. Laughlin of the B.C.I. acted as starters for the track events, while Mr. Egan, of Napanee, Mr. Connors of Tweed, Mr. McEwan of Trenton and other district teachers assisted as judges. The clerks of the course were Harold Vaughan and Alec Gordon of the O.S.D.

PHIL MARCHILDON WINS FOR BISONS

Sent Out for Seasoning With Cornwall Allows Gloversville Four Hits

(By The Canadian Press)

The power that carried New York Yankees to three successive world series titles crops up periodically among the American League leader's farm team and when it does it spells disaster for opposing teams.

Amsterdam Rugmakers of the Canadian-American League have the punch that characterizes the Yankees play and one of the reasons they are pressing Oswego Netherlands for the league leadership is because of their ability to come through in the pinch with base hits

The little Yanks went on a batting spree yesterday, clubbing out 18 hits, four of them extra base blows, to trounce Ottawa Senators 16-3. The victory was Amsterdam's 11th in a row at home and left them undefeated in their own park this season.

It was a timely victory too as it moved the Rugmakers to within a game of Oswego Nets dropped their sixth game in 25 starts as Bill Hurley of Ogdensburg scattered 13 hits while his mates made 15 blows good for a 12-5 victory.

Bore Down in Pinches

Hurley was in trouble most of the way, twice filling the bases with only one man out, but he bore down in the pinches and Nets had to take their runs one at a time.

Phil Marchildon, sent down by Toronto Maple Leafs to the Canadian American League for more seasoning, gave Cornwall a split with Gloversville as he tossed four hit ball for a 4-3 victory. Marchildon was wild, issuing nine passes, but kept out of serious trouble and was aided by four Gloversville errors. Glovers won the second game by the same score.

In the only other game yesterday Rome Colonels pushed over two runs in the ninth inning to defeat Utica 10-9. Five errors cost the home team the victory.

In Saturday's games Amsterdam pounded out an [illegible]-4 victory over Rome, Oswego beat Cornwall 5-3, Gloversville swamped Utica 12-5 and Ogdensburg and Ottawa tied 4-4.

BOTH FIGHTERS BATTERED AS NOVA BEATS BAER

Cincinnati Reds Continue to Pace the Field in National League

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

A lot of attention is paid home runs in the Major Leagues but proof that they are not altogether vital has come from an unexpected quarter.

St. Louis Browns, who took over squatters' rights to the American League cellar with an 11-game losing streak, swept a doubleheader yesterday without a single round trip ticket while their victims, Washington Senators, collected three.

Furthermore the Senators stayed in and around fifth place for six weeks with only four home runs in 44 games but within eight days have dropped to seventh although hitting eight home runs.

The Browns came from behind both times to win yesterday, a four-run rally in the eighth giving them the first game, 5-4, and a six-run flurry in the same inning of the second game sewing up an 11-3 decision.

New York Yankees, who can take the home runs or leave them alone, forged their fifth link in a new victory chain by beating Detroit 8-4, with nothing more violent than a solitary double. Red Ruffing scored his eighth triumph with a six-hit pitching job which he had to turn over to Johnny Murphy in the eighth because of a finger injury.

Impressive Hurling

The day's most impressive pitching performance was another six-hitter by young Bob Feller, who stands a good chance of becoming the year's outstanding pitcher in view of his record of nine victories and two defeats. As usual the Cleveland Indians hit for Feller and the result of their 15-gun salute was a 10-2 victory over Boston Red Sox in the first half of a doubleheader.

Lefty Grove quieted the turbulent tribe in the second section with a seven-hit diet which enabled the Sox to win, 7-1.

Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics split a double decker loaded with enough base hits to last a lot of clubs a week.

35 Singles in Game

There were 35 singles in the first game which the White Sox won, 14-9, by teeing off on Henry Pippen for eight runs in the first inning. And there were 24 more in the second game which went to the A's, 11-6, on the steady hurling of Nelson Potter and an incessant drive against four Chicago chuckers. This victory and Detroit's defeat lifted the A's into fifth place.

Cincinnati Reds resumed their triumphant tour of the National League by belting New York Giants, 4-1. They forced Carl Hubbell out of the box after he had pitched to three men and finished up their assignment in the second inning when Bill Werber hit his first homer of the season with a teammate on base.

Chicago's Cubs crammed six runs into the first three innings to beat the Phillies, 9-4, in the first half of a scheduled doubleheader and lost a chance to clean up when Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law halted the nightcap after three innings. Dizzy Dean was on top of a 2-0 lead at the time.

Pirates Divide

Pittsburgh and Brooklyn divided a doubleheader in the day's other meeting, Johnny Rizzo hitting a home run with two on in the eighth to swing the Pirates in front and on to a 7-3 victory, while the Dodgers staged a 19-hit assault on two pitchers to take the second, 14-1. Every Dodger shared in both the hitting and scoring in the nightcap.

St. Louis Cardinals were rained out of two games at Boston.

In Saturday games in the National League New York defeated St. Louis 6-5, Chicago blasted Brooklyn Dodgers 10-5, Boston topped Cincinnati 4-3, and Pittsburgh Pirates won 10-7 over Philadelphia. In the American League, Philadelphia took both ends of a doubleheader from St. Louis, 5-3 and 8-6, New York Yankees bested Cleveland 3-2, and Chicago edged out Washington Senators 8-7.

TRIES FOR NEW RECORD

Grace Huntington, Pasadena aviatrix, is pictured in the Fairchild in which she will soar aloft in an attempt to better the present women's altitude mark, now held by Jacqueline Cochrane. Miss Huntington will carry a sealed baragraph when she attempts to better the present mark of 33,000 feet.

ST. CATHARINES ON TOP RUNG IN PENINSULA GROUP

Transports Win Eighth Game in Nine Starts from Niagara Falls

BRIGHTS DEFEATED

Al Yarnell, Veteran Toronto Hurler, Suffers Slight Concussion

(By The Canadian Press)

Four weeks after the teams left the barrier, the Niagara District is the only league affiliated with the Ontario Baseball Association with a pacemaker in front of the field.

St. Catharines Transports won their eighth game in nine starts Saturday to set a definite lead in the Peninsula group. Their loss was to Niagara Falls Brights, now two games behind them.

In maintaining their pace, Transports fought 10 innings before subduing Niagara Falls Brocks. St. Kitts won 3-1 when Ike Heximer, Brocks' third baseman, dropped an infield grounder to let the winning runs in for the visiting team.

On a day when extra inning games were the rule, the fourth place Fort Erie Macs showed power over the route to take Brights 2-1 in 12 innings. Milton Zimmerman outlasted three Niagara twirlers before a home crowd, coming through in the pinches to offset Fort Erie errors.

Cellar-place Welland Aces rebelled against Thorold Mounties at Thorold, cracking out 13 hits at the expense of A. Kerr to win 11-1. Latinovich held the Mounties to three singles.

Sailors Tie Brights

Port Colborne Sailors tied Brights in league standing by defeating Merriton 6-2 at home. Thompson, with a home run and triple, Upper with a triple and single and Rumions with a double and single led the Tars' assault on Schooley. Leeson scored his second home run in two games for one Merritton tally.

Galt's smart shortstop, Sarkasian held up the Terriers to their first victory in three Intercounty starts by taking 11 infield chances perfectly on the home grounds. Kitchener Panthers were the Terriers' 13-4 victims, failing to use nine hits to advantage.

Behind perfect hurling of Ken Watson, Brantford Alerts won 10-3 from Woodstock at the Red Sox field. The Alerts left 10 men on bases in a poor offensive display, but Watson kept seven Sox hits where they did least damage.

Guelph Defeats Preston

Eleven errors were counted at Guelph as the Leafs came from behind to edge Preston 12-10. Riversides threw away a seven run lead, built up on ragged Guelph fielding, by doing the same thing.

Waterloo was rained out of the other Intercounty game at Stratford.

Al Yarnell, veteran Port Credit pitcher, suffered a slight concussion, when beaned in the seventh inning as Credits defeated Danforth Aces 2-1 at home in an Intercity game. He was discharged from hospital today by doctors who ordered a two-weeks rest.

Two Toronto teams took marathon honors for the day, Columbus Grads winning 8-5 from Parkdales in 14 innings.

Central Hastings Track and Field Champions Declared

Held in conjunction with the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. annual track and field meet at the O.S.D. grounds on Saturday, the field day champions of the Central Hastings High Schools were declared. The Central Hastings High School athletes competed in the senior event, the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. competition, while their points gained on track and field counted in both competitions for the athletes from Stirling, Marmora, Tweed and Madoc high schools only.

The individual champions announced for the 1939 Central Hastings High School competitions were as follows:—

Senior boys—Don Harris (Madoc.)

Intermediate boys — R. Gale, (Marmora.)

Junior boys—D. Connor (Tweed)

Senior girls — A. Thompson (Tweed.)

Intermediate girls—A. Morton, (Tweed.)

Junior girls—M. Morrison (Stirling.)

Each competing school won at least one individual championship while the athletes from Tweed High School dominated the meet, winning three individual championships.

The crests were presented to both groups by Mr. S. McEwan of Trenton, Vice-President of the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic group.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

Trenton High School athletes proved tops, that is collectively speaking, at the annual Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. field day and track meet held at the O.S.D. on Saturday, the Trenton lads and lassies garnering 56 points to win the school championship while the Belleville Collegiate placed second with 48. A word of praise is due Jack Hodgson and Miss Maloney, respective athletic instructors at the O.S.D., for the splendid facilities, which were afforded the competing interscholastic athletes from throughout the entire district. Of the six individual championships won the Belleville Collegiate entry walked off with three championship awards, Marjorie Hitchon winning the girls' senior, Bill Pigden the boys' intermediate and Gerald Theobald the boys' junior. A tie was created between Steve Graziano, O.S.D. and Ted Powell, Albert College, for the senior boys' championship, while Trenton took the remaining two girls' individual top honors, Thelma Beale the intermediate and L. Taft the junior.

Two local athletes stood out in their respective classes, Marjorie Hitchon and Bill Pigden. Miss Hitchon established a new district record for the girls' running high jump when she neatly cleared the bar at 4 feet 8 inches. Miss Hitchon had won the senior high jump at four feet four, but continued to raise the bar until she set a new Bay of Quinte mark. Miss Allison's B.C.I. entry was handicapped through the absence of Betty Gilbert, who was unable to compete on Saturday. Miss Gilbert won two events at the Eastern Ontario interscholastic meet in Kingston the week previous and would have doubtless placed well on Saturday had she competed. As for Pigden he was not pressed in any of his specialties, the pole vault and middle distance track events, Pidgen winning the vault, the 880 and the mile run with apparent ease. Pigden is one of the most natural track men we have seen locally in years and it is unfortunate he was not given the opportunity to compete in Kingston, where he would have doubtlessly placed sufficiently well to be selected to attend the Ontario Athletic Commission camp at Lake Couchiching.

When the officials announced that a total of 557 athletes competed, they did not mean that actually 557 individual contestants competed, but that collectively, counting the entries in each individual event separately and tabulating them it resulted in 557 having competed during the entire meet, although actually perhaps only 200 or so individual athletes were present, but many competed in two or more events. Much credit should be given Jack Hodgson and Miss Maloney, respective athletic instructors at the O.S.D. and their contemporaries at the O.S.D. for the splendid facilities afforded the visiting and contesting athletes, nothing was left to be desired in this respect. Although the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. championships were featured, the Central Hastings track and field meet was held in conjunction with Saturday's meet, the Central Hastings athletes competing in both meets at the same time, the records of the senior meet being accepted by the Central Hastings group as their official records as well.

In a recent issue of the English publication "Speedway News", a booklet published solely for the interest of motorcycle racing, much credit is given to George Pepper, Belleville's gift to that big time sporting event in England, where George is captain of the Newcastle team. Against Sheffield recently George broke the track record when he completed the opening race in 74.8 seconds, being chased over by Ernie Evans one of England's top-ranking riders. On this particular night Pepper won four firsts in as many starts and the same week against Stoke City, Pepper gained 11 of a possible 12 points. In commenting on Pepper's track-breaking record the Speedway News says: "Pepper pushed home in a new record time of 74.8 seconds,.4 better than Spencer's. Pepper, even more brilliant than usual, was again unbeaten, the third meeting runnings."

Do you remember when Grover Cleveland Alexander, for 20 years a master moundsman in the major leagues, was given his release by Philadelphia Athletics, nine years ago today. "Old Pete" pitched in more than 600 National League games.

Babe Marchildon, Penetang-born hurler who signed with Toronto early this season, was farmed out to the Cornwall Bisons over the week end. Marchildon gained considerable pitching experience during his short stay with the Leafs despite the fact he was usually the losing pitcher. Marchildon was sent to Cornwall for seasoning. Eaton Jones of Windsor and Gaston Trudel, Art Calhoun, former Belleville slabsman, hurled a four hitter for the Bisons last week and won his game.

Did You Know—Bob Feller chalked up his ninth win of the season over the week end while Carl Hubbell was getting nicked for his fourth loss of the year....The Reds won and lost over the week, while the Cards dropped one leaving the Redlegs 3 1-2 games afront the National League parade as the Yankees are making another runaway of the junior circuit, winning over Detroit and Cleveland since Saturday....The Peterboro lacrosse team recently signed four members of the discontented Orillia Terriers and the gutted stick game seems to be headed towards a banner season in the Liftlock City....Russ Van Atta was signed by the Toronto Leafs over the week end, Van Atta was brought out by the Yankees back in 1933 when he won 12 and lost four in the American League....He came from the Penn State University nine.... The Belleville intermediates are scheduled to pry off the baseball lid at Picton in a twilight fixture on Wednesday.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Bob Feller, Indians, and Lefty Grove, Red Sox—Former held Boston to six hits in winning his ninth game of season while latter gave seven safeties to take second game of double header.

Jack Russell, Cubs—Saved victory over Phils for Chicago by effective relief pitching.

Johnny Rizzo, Pirates— Rizzo hit home run with two on in eighth to give Pittsburgh first game of doubleheader.

Red Ruffing, Yankees— Held Tigers to six hits for eighth win of season before injury to finger caused him to withdraw in eighth inning.

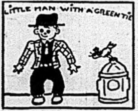
Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health and I said, Is it ever all right to tell a lie, pop?

Are you thinking of some you've told or some you're thinking of tellinz? pop said, and I said. Some I've told.

The truth is mighty and will prevail, so in the vast majority of cases you might as well come right out with it and get it over with, although the small minority of cases are sometimes altered by circumstances, pop said.



LITTLE MAN WITH A GREEN TIE

And we kept on going and pretty soon some man stopped going passed, saying to pop, Good day, stranger. or can I call you brother?

It's a lot more suitable than sister, pop said, and the man said, The day is coming when all men will be brothers because class and class war will of dissapeared from the surface of the earth.

And the surface of the seas too, let us hope, pop said, and the man said, Spoken like a true brother, I'm intristed in an organization to be known as The Stripe Shirts, and when we get enough members all over the world there wont be any fashists and there wont be any socialists or democrats or republicans, all there's going to be is brothers, brothers under the stripe, so if you'll join us now, brother, you'll be one of the founders, and if you're still undecided I'm sure I can convince you, I've got the whole afternoon free.

The whole yee gods, I'll join, pop said.

Proving it was proberly one of the cases altered by circumstances, and the man said, Here's your card, brother.

And he gave pop a card and kept on going being a little man with a green necktie and little shiny eyes, and the card having diffrent color stripes on it and saying, Founder of the Stripe Shirts, not transferrable.

SEASON'S BEST EFFORT

Biggest one-game headache for major league pitchers so far this year was furnished by Johnny Rizzo, ABOVE, second year outfielder with Pittsburgh Pirates, who flayed St. Louis Cardinal pitching in a recent game to the extent of five hits in six attempts, scoring four times and batting in nine runs, only three short of the major league record. Two of his blows were home runs and another a double.

UNITED STATES ONE GAME UP IN POLO MATCHES

British Team Defeated 11-7 in First Game for Westchester Cup

INGLEHART STARS

Defenders Had More Accuracy and a Little More Speed in Their Game

By H. M. PETERS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, June 5—(CP)— "We tried everything we had; it wasn't quite enough, but the series isn't over yet," said Gerald Balding today as the British polo team, one game down, glumly plunged into determined practice for next Sunday's match with the United States.

Despite years of careful preparation, a hard-riding team of British stars found themselves out-hit and out-manoeuvred yesterday in a bruising game at International Field, Westbury, and lost 11-7 as the three-game series for the Westchester Cup, emblem of International polo supremacy, got underway.

The United States defenders, winners of every series since 1921, always appeared to have a little more accuracy, a little more speed, at the vital moments of the game, particularly through the middle chukkers when the score was close.

Inglehart a Star

Their star was Stewart Inglehart, inserted into the game at the last moment when Cecil Smith, the Texan, was found unable to play after an accident last week. Filling in at No. 3, Inglehart scored only once and seldom caught the eye of the 18,000 spectators, but the Britons said he was the one who broke up their game with h's brilliant stopping of their drives down the field.

Tommy Hitchcock, an international player since 1921, and young Mike Phipps divided scoring honors for the winners, each with four goals. Winston Guest, besides playing a sturdy defensive game at back, hit two goals.

The losers scored four of their goals off free shots for the frequent fouls called on the recklessriding American quartet. Balding got three of them while Bob Skene, the young Australian, deflected one of Balding's penalty shots into the goal. Skene scored two other goals and Eric Tyrrell-Martin got the seventh.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

"CHAIN GANG" OF CARDINALS ON UPGRADE

Rochester Red Wings Have Won Eight Straight and 22 Out of 28

TORONTO DEFEATED

Leafs Lose on Saturday to Jersey City and to Royals on Sunday

By the Associated Press

Although the surmise is based solely on happenings in the International League, it may be that St. Louis Cardinals' original "chain gang" is on the upgrade this season while New York Yankees' numerous little brothers are going down.

The Yankee farms reached a peak of success last season when Newark and Kansas City met in the Little World Series. Rochester Red Wings, the Cards' No. 1 farm floundered about like their big and little brothers in other leagues and finally slipped into third in the International.

This season Rochester has climbed to the top of the standing. The Red Wings have won eight straight and 22 out of 28. And they gave added proof yesterday that they really have the stuff by licking Newark in both ends of a doubleheader, 7-4 and 8-2.

All that may be merely a reflection of conditions throughout the St. Louis chain, for the Cards never have been slow to call for help when they needed it or to shift players around among farms, when there was a surplus.

Plenty of Talent

And Rochester made it obvious by the way it won yesterday's games that there's plenty of talent on hand. The opener went 13 innings before Marty Marion broke it up with a homer—the only hit off relief flinger Norman Branch, who had just issued two passes. Si Johnson, veteran righthander, pitched the whole game for the Birds and gave up only eight hits. Then rookie John Grodzicki followed up with a three-hitter in the seven-inning nightcap while the Wings contributed 15 blows, including Jack Sturdy's four bagger.

The double victory, however, enabled Rochester to pick up only a half game on Jersey City's second-place club, although it put them six full games ahead of Newark. The Little Giants won a single neatly-played contest from Toronto, 3-1, as Hy Vandenberg allowed four hits and whiffed five to earn his seventh victory of the season.

Both Win Twin Bills

Baltimore and Syracuse, only a half game apart in the current fourth place duel, won a doubleheader apiece. Outhit in both games, the Orioles staged a couple of late rallies to beat Buffalo Bisons, 6-4 and 12-7, while the Chiefs also made their blows count to conquer Montreal Royals, 9-4 and 2-1.

The two second games were interesting affairs in different ways. Buffalo managed to commit eight errors and a good many unchanged mistakes in seven innings while Baltimore won out by scoring five runs in the first inning and five more in the sixth. Syracuse made two hits off Sam Nahem and Marvin Duke produced its second win, scoring its runs in the fourth when Nahem issued three passes, Iggy Walters sacrificed and Ben Sankey singled.

Dick West, Baltimore catcher, was hurt in the opener when he tried to block Roy Mack's slide to the plate and was spiked in the mouth.

In Saturday games Montreal blanked Toronto 2-0, Rochester beat Buffalo 8-2, Jersey City overcame Baltimore 4-2 and Newark edged out Syracuse 1-0.

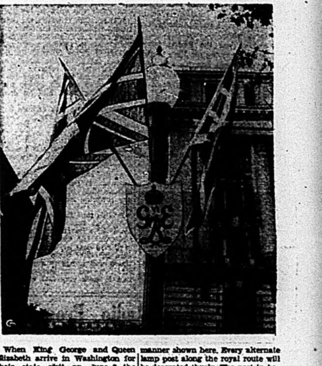
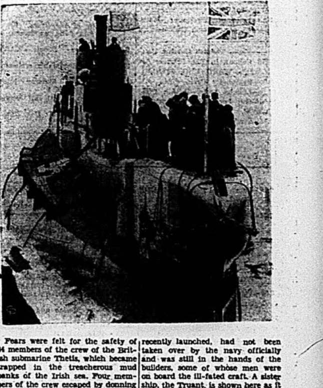
WASHINGTON DESIGN FOR ROYALTY



When King George and Queen Elizabeth arrive in Washington for their state visit on June 8, the streets of the U.S. capital will be decorated with royal insignia in the manner shown here. Every alternate lamp post along the royal route will be decorated thusly. The post in between will carry the American shield.

SISTER SHIP OF ILL-FATED SUBMARINE



Fears were felt for the safety of 84 members of the crew of the British submarine Thetis, which became trapped in the treacherous mud banks of the Irish sea. Four members of the crew escaped by donning oxygen masks and being shot through torpedo tubes. The Thetis, recently launched, had not been taken over by the navy officially and was still in the hands of the builders, some of whose men were on board the ill-fated craft. A sister ship, the Truant, is shown here as it slid down the ways following its launching a few weeks ago.

Dry Toast and Lettuce

By OSCAR SMITH

James Bradley filled a plate with generous helpings of chops, mashed potatoes, gravy and scalloped cheese, and passed it over to his wife.

"No, Jim. Keep that for yourself. I'm eating just lettuce and broiled halibut tonight. Saddles lie down! You can have a plate in the kitchen after a while."

Saddles was the Boston terrier they were keeping for Jim's brother Ben while Ben and his wife were in California. Saddles thumped his tail on the floor and lay down on the rug.

"What's the matter with you, Bess? Not getting finicky about your eating, are you?"

"Oh, Jim. Saddles and I went for a walk today. I got weighed down at the corner drug store, and, Jim. I weighed 150 pounds!"

"I can think of worse things than that. Suppose you do weigh 150 pounds. I see lots of women every day that look as if they should weigh 150 pounds. If women would forget about how much they weigh and think more about how they look, they would be easier to look at."

"But, Jim! Think of my weighing 150 pounds. I am supposed to weigh only 135. I think you are just horrid not to care."

"I wouldn't let that worry me. The scales were probably off. You look about the same to me."

"Oh no, Jim, It wasn't the scales. I went right over to the other drug store and I weighed just the same. Fix a plate for Saddles, won't you?"

Days of agony followed for Bess as she sat across the table and watched Jim eat creamed vegetables, pie, and heap sugar in his coffee while she ate lettuce without dressing, toast and an occasional chop.

Every day she took Saddles for a walk, and every day she just dreaded to pass the scales at the drug store. Of course, she didn't have to get weighed on them, but black coffee at mealtime was bad enough without having to look at the scales every day.

At the end of three weeks, Bess weighed 140 pounds and even she realized that her good disposition was suffering from her dieting regime.

By this time the scales were such a torment that she took Saddles down the alley and up the other street for his walk to keep from having to pass the drug stores that were on either corner of the block. There was a bakery shop on the street she was now taking, and Bess had to walk very fast and look straight ahead to keep from thinking about the thick pies and creamy covered cakes that filled the windows.

Every night she did the crane dive and the knee dip and rode imaginary bicycles in the air until she was dizzy from even thinking about exercises.

One day she was brave enough to take Saddles by the drug store for his walk, and she weighed 137 1-2. After that, she allowed herself sugar and cream for her coffee, and again as Jim came home one evening, she said:

"Jim, just think! I got weighed again today and I weighed 152. It's positively uncanny. I don't see what else there is that I can do without."

For another ten days Bess existed on lettuce, dry toast and coffee.

The Bradleys came home from California and Ben came after Saddles.

As he was leaving with him, he called out.

"Did he do any of his cute tricks for you Bess?" I taught him one that made Jane so cross. I claim it's pretty cute. Whenever she goes to get weighed, he puts his paws on the scales behind her. He got so he could just about make it fifteen pounds more. Sometimes he got a little higher than that. Until she caught on to what he was doing, Jane just about lived on dry toast, lettuce and black coffee. Pretty good, isn't it?"

Bess gasped, then rushed for the ice box.

When she came back, she had a cheese sandwich, salad with mayonnaise, and a thick piece of berry pie.

A brave women's fight for love, home, children!

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, June 5—(CP)—While no particular weakness was discernible in today's stock market, leading issues inclined to drift lower after an early rising gesture. Fractional losses were in the majority near the fourth hour. Trading was sluggish.

Minus signs were posted for U.S. Steel ,Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Great Northern, Philip Morris, Anaconda and General Elctric.

Shaded downward in the Canadian group were C.P.R. and Distillers. Most others, including Dominion 4s in the bond market, were neglected.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 5—(CP)— Volume touched a new bottom for the last five years on the Toronto Exchange during the first four hours of trading today and there was little pick up in the final hour. In the dull action prices weakened only slightly, especially in the gold group, and indices at the close were off less than hauf a point for the day. Aggregate turnover was about 200-o0o shares.

Trading was lifeless through the early hours of the session and volume dropped to 119,000 for the first three hours, a record low for the last five years. The price tone however maintained a show of firmness.

Weakness in the Canadian Car and Foundry issues pulled the Steel group down and spotty weakness appeared in the Utility group. Building and Food hares were firm.

Noranda and Smelters posted gains and other Base Metal issues were off slightly. Silver showed little change. In the Golds, Dome, Teck Hughes and Pickle Crow ruled higher. Home Oil was the only active issue of the Western Oil group, trading between 2.46 and 2.52.

Improved Demand Helps Cheese, Butter

Toronto, June 5.—Stronger English markets imparted strength to butter and cheese during last week's session of the Toronto open produce market, while eggs were firmer under better demand. Churning cream reflected the improvement on the butter market by advancing 1c.

Butter turned over in fair volume throughout the week, and, with offerings keeping well cleared, the market closed with a firm undertone. Production for May is reported to be under a year ago, with the result that current receipts have been running behind last year. Preliminary report on cold storage holdings in the nine principal cities indicates an improved statistical position of the market in Canada when compared with a month earlier. These factors along with the higher overseas cables have brightened the outlook of the market somewhat during the week's trading. Ontario creamery solids traded Saturday at 21½c for No. 1 grades and 20¾c for 38 score. Prints moved at 22½c to 23¼c for top grades.

Fairly good enquiry for domestic requirements, light offerings and a firmer English market combined to lift cheese values last week. For the month of May exports overseas have been well in excess of last year. Saturday, a sale of new, large paraffined sold at 10 7-8c, but further supplies were not available below 11c before the close, and, while no business passed at this higher figure, the market closed out the week at the nominal price of 11c for this commodity.

The seasonal decline in production was being shown in lighter arrivals in fresh receipts at some points on the egg market, and, with better demand, prices displayed a firmer trend. Warmer weather is said to be affecting the quality of eggs, which is tending to step up the percentage of top grades. As demand last week was concentrated chiefly on the top quality eggs, it was only these grades that experienced price gains. Another contributing factor to the improved tone of the market was the increased activity in breaking operations during the week. Saturday, graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium, 15 1-2c for B's and 15c for C grades.

Montreal Produce Firm

Montreal, June 5.—Butter, cheese and egg prices were steady to a shade firmer on open produce markets here last week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 7-8c. Receipts: 21.077 boxes, compared with 23,176 a year ago.

Ontario white and colored cheese was offered at 11 cents a pound. Receipts: 13,979 boxes, compared with 19,597 a year ago.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases offered at 21c to 21½c a dozen for A-large; 18½c to 19c for A-medium; 18c for B-large and 16c for C. Receipts: 9,382 cases, compared with 8,697 a year ago.

Printer's Send-Off Given J. A. McNeil

Montreal, June 5—(CP)— John A. McNeil, former managing editor of the Gazette who will succeed J. P. B. Livesay as general manager of The Canadian Press June 30, was given a typical printer's send-off Saturday by the news composing room staff of the Gazette. He put the last piece of type in the front page of Saturday's issue.

Afterward, Fred Pike, night superintendent of the composing room, presented Mr. McNeil with a watch, suitably engraved, on behalf of the printers. Mr. McNeil is a onetime member of the International Typographical Union and still holds an "honorable withdraw card."

SERVICES HELD

relatives of those aboard."

Queen Mary sent the following message to the First Lord of the Admiralty:

"I am deeply distressed to learn of the tragic disaster of H.M.S. Thetis. Please convey my heartfelt sympathy to the wives and families of all those who have lost their lives."

Memorial Services

The Admiralty announced additional Memorial Services at Portsmouth, Devenport and Chatham would be held Wednesday, and if the Thetis were not raised by then another service would be held at the same time over the scene of the disaster.

The mayor of Birkenhead said a meeting would be called tomorrow to consider raising funds for dependents of the dead.

A typewritten bulletin, admitting officially that all hope had been abandoned for the trapped men, today faced a deserted Birkenhead street which yesterday was filled with drawn-faced family groups hoping against hope.

Of four survivors of the Thetis, two still were suffering from shock and exhaustion. They were Lieut. G. F. Woods and Frank Shaw, civilian employee of Cammell Laird. Capt. H.P.K. Oram landed at Liverpool enroute to London and the fourth surviver, leading stoker W. C. Arnold was believed aiding in the salvage work.

Many Protests

Peter Bernard, song writer and comedy singer, whose reference to the sinking of a submarine in Saturday Night's Music Hall broadcast drew many protests, expressed deep regret over the incident.

"I wish to apologize sincerely to all of those whom I have hurt or pained unwittingly," he said. "There was no intention on my part to make a topical reference to the (Thetis) disaster and in fact I sent the script to the British Broadcasting Corporation earlier in the week before it happened.

"It was passed and neither they nor I thought of such a thing happening and inadvertently and without thinking I sang the song according to the script. I am terribly sorry."

The B.B.C. expressed its regrets over the incident Saturday night.

The Admiralty ordered withdrawal of the motion picture "Luck of the Navy" scheduled for showing in Birkenhead next week. Advertising posters were obliterated.

The picture is a naval spy drama filmed by Associated British Pictures with the co-operation of British Naval authorities. Submarines do not figure in the plot and the main action occurs aboard battleships, but the Admiralty considered showing of the picture inappropriate at present.

Stifled Sobs

Stifled sobs were heard in London newsreel theatres when pictures were shown of the rescue of some members of the crew of the United States submarine Squalus.

In Birkenhead relatives and friends of those aboard the undersea craft attended services at the old parish church of St. Mary's which rises alongside the yard from which the Thetis set out on her trial trip.

Rt. Rev. Paul de Labilliere, Dean of Westminster Abbey, in a sermon in London described the tragedy as one in which the whole world sympathized. He introduced prayers by the congregation with the words, "Let us pray before God for all who have lost those near and dear to them aboard the Thetis."

Newspapermen assigned to report the Thetis disaster complained of the official silence which met them at every turn, The Press Association said.

"Nearly all inquiries were met with a blank refusal of informaton or a negative statement," the Agency declared. "The regular statements which it was arranged should be issued to the press were mostly of the nature of 'Nothing to report.' "

Ojibway Woman Shows Papoose To Royal Couple

By J. E. DUNN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sioux Lookout, Ont., June 4 (CP)—A dusky Ojibway Indian wife nervously but proudly displayed her year-old boy papoose to King George and Queen Elizabeth last night when Their Majesties strolled along the station platform here, smiling and speaking to the Indians.

"Where do you live?" Queen Elizabeth asked the squaw

"Frenchman's Head, five miles from here," came the hesitant reply.

"What do you call the papoose?" the Queen continued.

"Gujench," was the answer but there was no explanation of the name. It was just "Gujench".

The chubby 12-pound papoose strapped to its board, gazed solemnly with round, dark eyes.

The squaw, who had stood with the babe in her arms for more than four hours, moved nervously before the King and Queen. She said her name was Mary Ojema, which means "Big Boss." Her husband, Thomas, remained in the background, silent and unmoved.

SUDDEN DEATHS

ing children to Saskatoon for the Royal visit overturned. And Walter Vasson, 28, was killed when his truck overturned thirteen miles north of Saskatoon.

At Wolfville, N.S., six-year-old Charles George was killed when he ran in the street on his way home from Sunday school and was struck by a car.

Many In Ontario.

The other highway deaths were in Ontario. At Blind River John M. Kelly of Toronto and James McGee of Thessalon were killed when their car left the highway. Edric Powell of Toronto was fatally hurt in a collision near Oshawa. St. Elmo Mullen of Owen Sound was fatally injured when his car was struck by another. At Toronto an Indian woman known only as Mrs. Johnson was struck by a motorcar and killed. Mrs. Evelyn Stewart died in hospital at Orillia after a head-on collision in which several were hurt.

At Dutton, near St. Thomas, the fast New York Central flier struck a motorcar during a thunderstorm, and Raoul Caron, a painter from Port Lambton, and Dorothy Simmons, farmer's daughter from Tillsonburg, died.

A triple drowning in New Brunswick headed the list of water fatalities. Charles Copp, 42, Lloyd Copp, 23, and Osborne Long, 17, were lost after their motorboat capsized off Harvey Bank in Albert County.

Boat Capsizes.

Another boat capsized in the Richelieu River near St. Blaise, Que., and Georges Lalliberte, 19, and Leo Lussier, 20, of Montreal, drowned. Fourteen-year-old Irma Myrahall drowned in Taffy Lake at Millville, N.B., when a canoe capsized.

Donald Coyne, a young journalist from Toronto, slipped from a rock at Port Sydney in the Muskoka district and was drowned. Another drowning was at Cochrane where Fernand Parisoe, French-Canadian river driver, lost his life during lumber operations on the Mattagami River.

The body of Edmand J. Demers, a U.S. army veteran, was pulled from the St. Lawrence River a few minutes after eye-witnesses told police they had seen a large object hurtling from the Montreal harbor bridge.

KING GEORGE

and escorted to No. 3 shaft. Only members of the party and mine officials will be permitted to go underground when the King and Queen step into a six-by-twelve foot miners' cage and drop 1,500 feet a minute to the main shaft station on the 2,800-foot level.

Most Miners Celebrating.

Most of the 2,500 men regularly employed in the shaft will be absent for the mine has been shut down partially to enable the miners to attend the Royal celebration. The King and Queen, however, will see actual mining operations as they cross the main cut to the main ore body.

After their trip down the mine, the King and Queen will return to the regular route where they cut off and continue on to their train. They are scheduled now to leave Sudbury about 10 p.m. E.D.T., an hour and a half later than the original departing time.

The trip to the mine off the main route will be made speedily. Authorities on the Royal train sent word to officials here to warn against people lining the road to the mine as the Royal party will travel too fast for the convenience of spectators.

As the hour approached for their Majesties' arrival, Sudbury was converted into the north country's gathering place.

Miners, prospectors and woodsmen who have set out from Sudbury in the past in search of fortunes came back today to see their King and Queen and to carry far into the night their celebration of the occasion. Boom-times were here indeed for the city's hotels and business places, and Sudbury fairly throbbed with an excitement it hadn't known since the nickel finds were opening up all through the district.

Arrival At 7:30 p.m.

Their Majesties will arrive at Sudbury Junction at 7:30 p.m. E.D.T. and from that time until the train leaves at 8:30 p.m. the northern night will resound with an acclaim from people to whom this kind of treat means much. Some of those who will greet the Royal visitors don't have visitors of any kind from one month to another in their backwoods camps. To greet the King and Queen, no matter what the trouble or expense to get to town, is the event of a lifetime.

The great body of welcomers, of course, will come mainly from Sudbury and from the nearby mining communities of Copper Cliff, Timmins, Haileybury and Cobalt. Hundreds will come from North Bay.

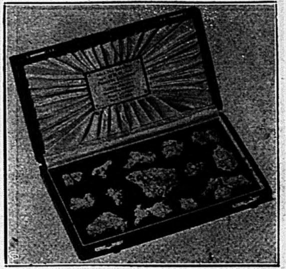
Children From Sault.

But scores of children will come 190 miles by train from Sault Ste. Marie, according to a plan devised by James Lyons, a former Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests. Sault Ste. Marie service clubs are joining Mr. Lyons in paying the fares of youngsters who thought for a time they would be unable to see their Majesties.

BRAKEMAN MANGLED

Chatham, Ont., June 5—(CP)—His right arm badly mangled when he fell from a moving freight car early Saturday, Hugh McGufan, 55, (225 Proctor Street) Sarnia, a brakeman in the employee of the Pere Marquette Railway, died late last night in St. Joseph's Hospital. Coroner Dr. P. W. Hall today opened an inquest.

A PRESENT FOR PRINCESS ELIZABETH



These gold nuggets, perfect specimens of Patricia gold from Ontario's northern mining area, will be presented to the King and Queen as a present for Princess Elizabeth at Sioux Lookout. Mr. J. E. Hammell, well-known mining man, will make the presentation to Their Majesties. The leather case containing the nuggets is inscribed to Princess Elizabeth.

'SUB' FLOODED

Take 2 Submarine le4'eorts,ri

To facilitate the escape of personnel, the Prime Minister said, all measures were taken by the crew to lighten the submarine and the stern thus came to the surface by daylight Friday.

Mr. Chamberlain said the personnel of the Inquiry Board was under consideration but he could not say when the investigation would open.

Mr. Chamberlain said that in view of the magnitude or the disaster it was proposed that afull public inquiry be held. Naval inquiries usually are private.

Three Killed

The Prime Minister said three men were believed to have been killed in trying to escape through the Davis Lung method by which four men saved themselves.

One of the survivors, Captain H. P. K. Oram, "with gallantry took upon himself before he knew the submarine had been sighted to escape from the submarine under conditions which were realized to be most dangerous in order to direct operations," Mr. Chamberlain said.

He added that Oram reported conditions in the submarine then were becoming serious but all on board were still alive.

Mr. Chamberlain related that a strong tide made diving operations difficult and efforts to raise the protruding stern higher were unsuccessful.

To attempt to cut a hole in the stern in her position then would have incurred severe risk of flooding which would have been unjustified, he said.

Water in Torpedo Boat

Before Mr. Chamberlain made his statement, R. S. Johnson, managing director of Cammell Laird Limited, Builders of the Thetis, had announced the original cause of trouble in the sunken craft was water in the forward torpedo tube.

But no one could say as yet, he added, whether this resulted from damage to the tube or whether there was failure to shut the forward door.

Mr. Chamberlain, continuing his statement, said the stern was submerged with high tide. Later a wire was placed around the vessel but it slipped, cutting away the marker buoy.

After a diver had reported he heard what he believed were tappings from inside the Thetis early Saturday morning, the Prime Minister said plans were made to attempt to pump air into the submarine.

But these were abandoned since it was found the operation could not be undertaken in time to save the lives of the entombed men.

Johnson Gives Explanation

Johnson in his explanation said: "The crew opened the door thinking there was no water in the tube. But water overpowered them and they were forced to retreat through the next water-tight door and to try to shut that door. But water again overpowered them and they were only able to shut it partially.

"They had to skip out of that section further to the stern and to make certain of closing the second bulkhead.

"Two forward compartments therefore were full of water. Nobody however, was drowned at that time."

Meanwhile Prime Minister Chamberlain decided because of "the magnitude of the Thetis question" to answer questions personally in the House of Commons today on the submarine disaster and the rescue efforts.

Clamor For nquiry

Clamor also grew for a public inquiry into the disaster.

The task of raising the submarine and towing her to shallower water off the nearby Anglesey coast may take ten days, Naval experts said.

Sharp attacks on the admiralty were printed in newspapers. One paper centred its fire on Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty.

An Admiralty invetigation proeably will be conducted as soon as the Thetis is beached.

Three questions frequently were asked: How did it happen? Why did it happen? Were there any means by which its tragic effects could have been reduced?

Jewish Women Protest British "White Paper"

Thousands of Jewish women gathered in the streets of Jerusalem to demonstrate against the British government's "white paper," which is seen as ending the Jews' dream of a "national homeland." A parade of protest is shown here, with the demonstrators bound for the district commissioner's office—when they did reach the office loud speakers on the roof ordered them to disperse, and when they attempted to continue on to the British military headquarters, British police barred the way and broke up the demonstration.

POLICE CONDUCT SERIES OF RAIDS

Two Places Entered and Quantity of Equipment is Seized

Two alleged gaming houses were raided by city police Saturday night and early Sunday morning as a result of which 16 men will be charged in police court, Chief Kidd revealed today. Sounds were heard, it is said emanating from one building upon the arrival of the police in tones that resembled —"Come on seven or eleven", while at the second place, police reported they heard the words—"pay me, I've got a full house." In the former place police it is said discovered ten young men manipulating the galloping dominoes in a game commonly known as craps, while at the second place on Front St., a quiet poker game was reported in progress, police seizing money, cards, dice and equipment in the raids.

The raids were executed with the greatest degree of secrecy, day constables having been instructed by Chief Kidd to report in civilian clothes at 11.00 p.m. Saturday night at the police station. At the zero hour, upon the toll of midnight, Chief Kidd handed Sergeant Arthur Booth warrants of search. The raids were quietly conducted with Sergeant Booth in charge, Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard, Constable D. Ellis in civilian clothes, while P. C. Arnott was the only uniformed officer on the raiding party.

All of the alleged "found ins", were escorted to the police station in the police car in relays, where names were given and those present were permitted their liberty upon the deposit of a small cash bail. Charges of operating common gaming houses will, it is stated be preferred against two men, while otherwise charges of being 'found in a common gaming house' will be laid against the remainder. The money and gambling equipment will be confiscated if a conviction is registered, Chief Kidd stated today.

POLICE COURT

John Martin, middle-aged Toronto transient, was convicted of indecent assault when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court, despite his vigorous denials of the offence. Martin was remanded for sentence.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced Martin's list of previous convictions, which proved to be of a most serious nature and included jail terms in many prisons throughout the middle and southwestern States, as well as Western Canada. Martin flatly denied the charges which he was charged to have made last week near Victoria Park following a wine drinking escapade.

Provincial police today are seeking the whereabouts of a man who gave his name as William Mitchell and a local address, both of which proved to be fictitious when police investigated. Mitchell advanced a cheque for $165.00 in payment of a motor car purchased from Edwin A. Pine, 8 College street. Provincial Constable A. A. Starke investigated the matter today and found that Mitchell's landlady had also been victimized after being paid for lodgings with a worthless cheque. Constable Starke is of the opinion that the name and address given by the man were both fictitious.

Refuse Containers Placed on Streets

Belleville is to have refuse containers at strategic points along the thoroughfares of the downtown district it was learned from City Hall officials today. Like, larger cities, where refuse containers are placed on street corners in an effort to keep the city streets throughout the business section clear of refuse, shining metal containers will be introduced in Belleville. The containers stand on four metal legs and are partially covered to keep the rain and weather from the inside. The metal containers stand about four foot in heighth, including the top covering, and will be easily accessible to children as well as adults, for the purpose of depositing discarded refuse such as old newspapers, cigarette boxes and other articles which today are seen thrown into the street. "Another step forward towards cleaning up our city streets," commented one City Hall official as he viewed one of the proposed containers exhibited as a sample today.

GEORGE A. REID CONTEST WINNER

MARIE GRACIOUSLY CURTSIED TWICE

Edmonton was different. Instead of confining the royal route to built-up areas, crowding spectators between office buildings, they drove Their Majesties along Portage Ave., a two mile paved street never built up since the slump following "boom days". And the government erected bleachers, free for school children, brought from miles around, with other seats for sale to adults. And instead of choosing the daughter of some high dignitary to present Edmonton's official bouquet to the Queen, they chose little Marie Stacey, nine, an orphan, to do the honors. Marie curtsied once when she presented the flowers, and once again for good measure.

RESCUED FLEET COMMANDER HELPS DIRECT WORK TO SAVE CREW

One of the first four men to come bobbing to the surface after escaping from the sunken submarine Thetis was Capt. H. P. Oram, commander of the fifth submarine flotilla, though not in command of the Thetis. Said to have been selected as one of the first out because he could help direct further rescue operations, Oram is seen here, wearing gray coat, CENTRE, aboard H.M.S. Vigilant, discussing operations at the scene. The Thetis lies below, in Liverpool bay, in the Irish Sea.

Slang Of The Assembly Line

A complete automobile, finished and ready to run, has a wishbone and a gooseneck. It also has a snowshoe, a dog collar, a hairpin and a tin hat.

You won't find these terms in the books but out in the shop, where, with a knack for the descriptive and a fine disregard for technical words and the authority of the dictionary, factory workers name things their own way, and call them as they see them.

The big machines that perform extraordinary operations with accuracy and speed, pop up with such names as Big Bertha, Player Piano, Percolator, Hay Bailer, Jack Rabbit and Corn Popper. To those who see them work the names match the action of the mechanisms and leave no question as to what's being talked about. Call them by technical terms and an engineer may be needed to interpret.

A curl is put in steel rings by the Permanent Wave machine. Coil springs are squeezed into place by a Robot. The Merry-Go-Round's spindles rise and fall, machining motor blocks that roll round its face. Only the tune is missing.

The list of oddly named parts in the average car is fairly long. While the car's Tin Hat is worn on the rear axle the Hair Pin holds pedal springs in place. Besides the Dog Collar which proves to be a muffler clamp, there is a Belly Band supporting the transmission.

Lamp guards are known as Fish, while down around the shock absorbers a set of Horseshoes is found. There's a Bottle Cap on the engine water jacket, and elsewhere a Pancake, a Spider, a Snowshoe and a Banjo.

There's humour as well as accurate description in motor factory slang. Little Percy is the appreciative name given a three-foot pipe wrench, while a device that puts pressure on drills to make them bore on through carries the authoritative title of Old Man. Higher mathematics are put in place by terming the slide-rule a Guess Stick.

Many terms mean different things in different plants since processes are not standardized. Some designations may be far from permanent. For instance hardly a plant today but has a Charlie McCarthy, which turns out to be the first device showing some quality of the famous little dummy.—From Automobile Facts.

WAR VETERANS AND CRIPPLED CHILDREN GET PLACE EN ROUTE

Edmonton thought of everybody. When the King and Queen came the "Social Credit capital's" usual 90,000 population was swollen to 200,000, but everybody managed to catch a glimpse of Their Majesties. Along Portage Ave., where bleachers, six-seats high, stretched for two miles, and again at the parliament buildings, crowds broke through police lines for a real "close up" of the royal couple. Their tour included the University hospital, on whose lawns provision had been made for wounded war veterans and crippled children, and a little child on crutches hobbled forward to present flowers to the Queen. Here William Graham, of Fort Vermillion, formerly in the 29th Battalion, has a chat with the King and Queen.

Framed in the window of the engineer's cab the Queen watches the breath-taking scenery which flashed past as she and the King rode "up front" for 14 miles along the rugged twisting course of Beaver Valley, British Columbia. When the train pulled into a tiny junction point for a service stop, Their Majesties left the royal suite at the rear of the train and walked its long length to the front where three giant locomotives were coupled together to draw them through the mountains. They climbed up into the cab of the giant Selkirk-type engine for one of the most thrilling experiences of their cross-Canada tour.

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 6 (CP Cable)—A foot-long firearm with a polished wooden butt was exhibited in Westminster Police Court today as Ledwedge Lawlor was arraigned on a charge of firing the weapon near the Duchess of Kent.

Lawlor, a 45-year-old welder's assistant, appeared in court after undergoing night-long questioning about the shooting in Belgrave Square as the Duchess, wife of the King's youngest brother, was entering a limousine to go to a theatre. No one was injured in the shooting.

The bald-headed defendant was charged technically with having in his possession "a firearm and ammunition with intent by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property contrary to the Firearms Act of 1937."

Lawlor Remanded

Lawlor was remanded a week. He was not asked to plead.

Constable Robert Tice told Magistrate Clyde Wilson that he seized Lawlor after a short chase, the accused man on a bicycle and himself in a commandeered automobile.

Tice said that he and a fellow constable were standing in Belgrave Square when the Duchess of Kent was driven past in an automobile. He said he heard a shot as the car crossed the intersection of Wilton Crescent and Belgrave Square.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Temperature of the air and well water! About this time of the year water in wells about 30 or 40 feet deep is coolest. Well water derives its temperature from the soil through which it percolates. The warmth of June and July does not penetrate the soil 30 or 40 feet down until the following January; likewise the cold of January shows its effect only during the next June or July. In consequence of this the lowest and highest temperature of well water at 40 feet depth should occur respectively in the summer and in the winter months. But this is not so unless the top of the well is closed during the winter months, thus preventing the cold air gravitating down and cooling the water.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Kitchener, Ont., June 6 (CP)—One group of Waterloo County farmers and their families were in the front rank for the Royal visit here today.

Bringing large hampers of food, they put up tarpaulins along the railway tracks and slept overnight about a quarter mile west of the station where their Majesties detrained.

Windsor, Ont., June 6 (CP)—Customs and immigration men worked in long shifts last night and today because of an unprecedented use of the ferry service from Detroit, caused by visitors coming here for the Royal visit. About 250 boats are expected to unloose a terrific din of whistles when their Majesties arrive tonight.

BOSTON TENDERS BRITISH SAILORS A TEA PARTY

Boston, June 6 (AP)—Boston threw another tea party yesterday, only this time they tossed the tea into British sailors and not into the sea. Tars from H.M.S. Southwestern Ontario All Primed to Receive Their Majesties

IN WINDSOR TONIGHT

Guelph, Kitchener and Stratford Will be Visited in One Day

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

King George and Queen Elizabeth, starting a two-day royal procession through Ontario before crossing into the United States, got the tip-off on the Province's enthusiasm this morning from 35,000 persons who greeted them at Washago, beside Georgian Bay.

It was only mid-morning and there was no assurance Their Majesties would start a day of public appearances that early, but Washago was invaded long before daybreak by throngs from all parts of Muskoka and Parry Sound districts and Simcoe County.

When the royal train pulled in from its overnight stop at South Parry, 60 miles north of Washago, the King and Queen saw cheering crowds lined for a mile or more along the right-of-way and congregated heaviest around the little station.

Presented With Views

There was no resisting such a display of affection and the King and Queen stepped out on the back platform of the train where eight-year-old Basil Hepplestall presented His Majesty with an album of photographs taken in the district.

Basil was assisted up to the platform and he made the presentation while the Queen held her arm about him.

Then the royal train sped down to Toronto for a brief, unofficial stop to take on supplies before moving into Western Ontario for formal stops today at Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford and Windsor.

At these and wayside stations the King and Queen will have been hailed by more than 1,000,000 persons before the day is over.

Where Brock and Tecumseh fought to hold Canada for the British just 125 years ago, they were welcomed by the grandchildren and great grandchildren of men who fought in the war of 1812.

Southwestern Ontario, grown to a territory of material and cultural abundance since it was a battleground, presented to Their Majesties a panorama of paved highways, prosperous farms, great manufacturing establishments and expanses of wood and water. For two days the royal couple will tour this hive of industry and agriculture before leaving Canada at Niagara Falls for four days in the United States.

REPUTED LEADER OF I.R.A. HELD IN DETROIT JAIL

Sean Russell Kept Incommunicado in Federal Detention Building

COMPANION NOT HELD

Detroit, June 6 (AP)—With King George and Queen Elizabeth approaching United States soil, Sean Russell, a reputed leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, was held a Federal prisoner here today.

Federal officers who kept Russell incommunicado in a Federal Detention Building, predicted he would remain in custody until the royal train left this area.

John Zurbrick, District Immigration Director, said he had instructions from Washington to release the prisoner only on $5,000 cash bond. He said Russell was arrested as he arrived by train from Chicago yesterday, on a warrant charging him with entering the United States by means of false and misleading statements.

The King and Queen are due to reach Windsor, Ont., just across the Detroit River from this city, early tonight and will make a brief stop before going on to Niagara Falls.

Russell, whose reputed chief-of-staff post with the Irish Republican Army gave rise to reports Scotland Yard wanted him because of the recent bombings in England, was placed under arrest as hes was about to enter a taxicab. He has been on a lecture of the United States.

280-Ton Apparatus is Being Built at Glasgow for Experiment

Birmingham, England, June 6 (CP)—Lord Nuffield has marshalled science in an attempt to split the atom in his latest effort to fight disease.

The millionaire motor manufacturer who has scattered fortunes about the empire on hospital charities has built and equipped a $300,000 laboratory and hopes the split atom will release energy producing radio-active materials which, like radium, will help in the treatment of disease.

The work will be carried out by Professor M. L. Oliphant, 38, Director of Physical Research at Birmingham University and assistant to the late Lord Rutherford, conductor of pioneer experiments at atom splitting.

Two-Day Pageant of Good Will in Honor of King George and Queen Elizabeth

VISITORS POUR IN

Pennsylvania Avenue Expected to be Thronged With Hundreds of Thousands During Procession on Thursday

By JOHN HIGHTOWER

Washington, June 6 (AP) — The steel gray lamp posts along historic Pennsylvania avenue were sprouting red, white and blue British and U.S. flags today, first visible evidence of the two-day pageant of good will honoring King George and Queen Elizabeth.

From Union Station, where their Majesties will arrive on Thursday morning, to the White House, where they will stay overnight, banners and bunting were being hung.

Decorations will be completed tomorrow when shields bearing the United States Coat of Arms and others inscribed "GRE" — George Rex Elizabeth—are put in place beneath the flags.

Their Majesties Share Lives of North Ontario 'Rock-Busters' By Descending into Nickel Mine

By R. K. TAYLOR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sudbury, Ont., June 6 (CP)—The King and Queen reached another extreme in their gamut of Canadian experiences last night when they donned the garb of the miner and descended nearly half-a-mile below sea level in a great nickel mine.

Accompanied by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, their attendants and mine officials, Their Majesties entered a cage six by 12 feet and dropped to the 2,800-foot level of the Frood Mine, the world's largest nickel producer. That was 2,000 feet below sea level. Only eight days before they were a full mile above the sea at Banff in the Rocky Mountains.

Visit Adds Zest

The mine visit added new zest to a vociferous welcome to Sudbury given Their Majesties by 100,000 subjects—a fair cross-section of Northern Ontario's population gathered in the mining centre. It was the first royal visit to an industrial undertaking in the tour to date. Sandwiched into the program by special request of the King, it stretched to 2½ hours a visit previously scheduled at only one hour.

Tireless Sudbury crowds prolonged the historic night until far into the morning. Long after the lights of the royal train had faded down the track on its way to Guelph and Western Ontario points, there was dancing in the streets.

On the southward journey Their Majesties also were late abed. A great crowd gathered at Parry Sound cheered as the royal train passed through at 1.25 a.m. E.D.T. and the King and Queen waved from the rear platform. The train left Sudbury at 10.06 p.m. E.D.T.

Shared Life of Miners

For more than an hour at Sudbury Their Majesties shared the lives of Northern Ontario "rock-busters" both in manner and dress. The King were the regulation khaki overalls and the safety helmet adorned with a standard battery and lamp. The Queen had a feminine version of the outfit in white waterproof silk with helmet, gloves and rubbers. She wore no lamp but carried a flashlight.

The King surprised his companions by his knowledge of a miner's equipment. From visits to British coal mines he knew how to adjust

Private Showing of Famous Cataract To Be Privilege of King and Queen

By JOHN W. TIBBS

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 6 (CP—For the first time since mankind organized Niagara Falls into one of the world's greatest crowd attractions, the famous Cataract tomorrow will put on a private showing.

Never before have Niagara Falls authorities taken such pains to ensure guests an uninterrupted view of the world-renowned falls as is contemplated in the arrangements for the visit of the King and Queen tomorrow.

Their Majesties will have a crowded program from the time they enter the history-steeped Niagara Falls country to their departure tomorrow night for the United States. The Queen has never seen Niagara Falls; the King paid one previous visit with a party of fellow midshipmen from H.M.S. Cumberland in 1913.

The King and Queen arrive at 7.30 p.m. and will entrain at 10.30 p.m. to cross the suspension bridge to the United States, to be welcomed to the Republic by Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the American end of the bridge.

Thus their Majesties have but three hours to receive the loyalty of the city, make two drives through the streets, appear on their Hotel balcony to hear massed school children sing, and acknowledge the cheers of perhaps 100,000 persons.

From the terrace of the Niagara Park administration building where the main reception ceremonies take place, the Royal party will see a panorama of both the Canadian and American falls.

Then the King and Queen will don the necessary water-proof equipment and take the trip along the galleries right under the falls.

The King and Queen will reach Niagara Falls after one of the most strenuous days of the Royal tour through Canada, including stops and receptions, and in some cases street drives, at London, Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton and St. Catharines.

Shortly after leaving St. Catharines the Queen will give her patronage to a new 14-mile four-lane highway from that City to Niagara Falls. An "electric eye" operated by the car will drop a string of flags to christen the highway "Queen Elizabeth Way."

Visit of King and Queen to World's Fair To Climax 'British Week' on Grounds

By ALAN RANDAL

New York, June 6 (CP)—The already spruced World's Fair of 1939 engaged in further sprucing up today for Saturday's visit by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth which will climax British Week at "The World of Tomorrow".

The giant perisphere—largest ball ever built by man—is being resilvered, its paint having blistered under the hot summer sun. The 700-foot trylon, towering up beside the perisphere, also will undergo refurbishing before the Royal couple see it.

The reception room at Perylon Hall too is being redecorated for the occasion. Tapestries, rugs and antique furniture have been moved in and two large antique chairs will be provided for the King and Queen with the Royal coat of arms above them on the wall.

Inside the grounds new roadways are being undertaken to provide an appropriate setting for the visit.

Long since, the Fair Grounds route of the Royal party has been checked so every second of the three hours and forty minutes the King and Queen will be at the Fair can be spent to best advantage.

Four thousand New York City policemen will be on duty within the grounds Saturday to handle what is expected to be the biggest crowd since the Fair opened. A day or so in advance of the Royal party Secret Service men will take over the Federal building where the King and Queen will be luncheon guests.

Fair authorities said the scheduled 10-minute visit of the King and Queen to the shamrock-shaped pavilion of Eire has been eliminated from the Royal itinerary. Instead, and to save time because of the limited duration of the visit, their Majesties will visit the historical and cultural exhibit of Eire in the Hall of Nations.

From there the King and Queen will go by tractor train to the Canadian Pavilion, later walking to the Southern Rhodesia exhibit, next door.

Other Empire exhibits on their itinerary are the New Zealand and Australian Pavilions and the British Pavilion where they will walk through the 180-by-75-foot court of honors, cross the Westminster bridge and inspect the north pavilion which houses the Hall of Democracy containing the Magna Carta. They leave the pavilion by way of the English Garden.

FOUR CITIES IN ROYAL SPOTLIGHT DURING THE DAY

Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford and Windsor Visits to Provide Plenty of Thrills

POPULATION DOUBLED

(By The Canadian Press).

Guelph

Guelph, the Royal City, started lining up along the railway tracks at dawn today, about the same time that highways in all directions became choked with traffic. The city's population swelled rapidly to perhaps 50,000, more than double the normal population.

The best positions were snatched up by early arrivals. Some of these were on hand before 6 a.m., nearly eight hours before the royal stop at 2.35 p.m., E.D.T. They took places in front of the reception platform in in historic Priory Park, just east of the Canadian National Railways station.

John Galt, the Scottish novelist who founded Guelph, cut down the first tree marking the city's site in Priory Park.

Early arrivals today from out of town carried small chairs and stools, lunches and thermos bottles. Crowds along the railway line were entertained by a radio loudspeaker, set up on a nearby factory.

Six-year-old Janet Ditner, grand daughter of Kitchener's Mayor, George W. Gordon, got up early today—to try on the "Brownie" costume she was to wear when she presented the Queen with a bouquet later in the day.

Perhaps Janet was more excited than thousands of other Kitchener and Waterloo County children who were satisfied just to see Their Majesties at the railway station.

The royal arrival was at 3.15 p.m., E.D.T., but hundreds of those without reserved seat tickets for stands near the station lined up in the morning. Many of them carried lunch and the majority was armed with cameras.

Kitchener had its largest police force for the day, made up of the Scots Fusiliers of Canada and 800 district war veterans. The veterans, from Kitchener, Galt, Preston and Hespeler, were kept busy directing thousands of visitors to vantage points.

DETACHMENT SENT TO GUARD KING

Under Sergeant Harry Thompson a detachment of Ontario Provincial Police from out the Provincial District No. 8 left Belleville today for the Niagara Peninsula, where they will be on special police guard duty during the Royal visit to that district. Constables McBrien, Smith and Carruthers of Belleville were in the party, while Constables from other parts of the district joined Sergeant Thompson's detachment before departure today.

W.A. PETERS, KINGSTON, DIST. GOV. DIST. NO. 6 OF KINSMEN CLUBS

The first president to be elected from Eastern Ontario clubs, W. A. Peters, Kingston, was on Saturday elected district governor of District No. 6 of the Association of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada.

Mr. Peters is a past president of the Kingston Club, has been treasurer, secretary and director of the club and at present is chairman of the program committee. This is the first time a Kingston official has ever held a district office.

Police Blotter

Grant Thompson, student at the Belleville Collegiate, reported the theft of his bicycle from the local seat of learning yesterday. Young Thompson parked his bike outside of the school at noon yesterday, but after school hours the machine was found to be missing. Although at first thought to have been taken by some mischievous lad ~~for joy~~ riding purposes, subsequently the bike did not turn up and has not been found at noon today.

Belleville police took a statement from a 15-year-old juvenile lad yesterday who admitted he had stolen a quantity of motor oil from a building at the rear of 336 Front Street. The lad stated he crawled into the building through a hole in the wall, removed the oil and later sold it. Further investigations are pending, police revealed at noon.

Lawrence Speller, a teen-aged Toronto youth, was found riding on a C.N.R. freight train by railway authorities yesterday. The boy was removed from the train and placed into the hands of the city police after it was established that he had run away from his Queen City home. Today while awaiting the arrival of his father Lawrence was assisting Chief Kidd in tidying and cleaning up the police station. "Better get on the end of a broom, laddie. Satan finds work for idle hands to do, you know", commented Chief Kidd.

Only seven transients sought shelter at the police station last night, a marked decrease being noted since the advent of warmer weather.

AGED MAN LOSES LIFE AS HIS HOME BURNS

Washaga, Ont., June 6 (CP)—John Stewart, 80, died today in a fire which destroyed his home. An explosion which followed the outbreak thwarted the efforts of police to rescue the aged man. Provincial Constable Vincent Shearer of Britt had his eyebows singed and the back of his neck burned by flames that shot out at him as he opened the front door. Another provincial constable, Harold Finger, Powassan, endeavored to enter the house by the rear door but found the flames blocking his way.

Cause of the fire was not determined.

Kingston Hospital Gets An 'Iron Lung'

An iron lung, the gift of Lord Nuffield of England, will arrive shortly at the Kingston General Hospital it was announced yesterday by officials of that institution.

Any Canadian hospital may possess this equipment for the cost or transportation, it was pointed out. The Ontario Government has supplied iron lungs to hospitals needing this equipment whenever an epidemic of infantile paralysis has prevailed, but this service will no longer be vital to the Kingston institution.

The Ontario Government keeps the "lungs" at strategic points from which they are shipped to localities needing them.

The iron lung is an artificial mechanism capable of making a victim of infantile paralysis breath after the respiratory organs are paralyzed. By means of bellows operated by an electric motor, air is forced in and out of the lungs, so keeping the patient alive.

Parasite Laboratory Open For Inspection All Day Wednesday

Ten years ago a small group of scientists came to Belleville coincident with an announcement of the purchase by the Department of Agriculture of the Dominion Government, of the T. S. Carman home on Dundas St., where headquarters were established for work of the Department of Agriculture on biological control of insects and parasites. Today, a full decade later, sees a modern industry now in operation on this location in Belleville where scientists daily are laboring over test tubes in man's fight against insects, especially of the parasite nature.

Today Mr. A. B. Baird, entomologist in charge of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory on Dundas St., announced that on Wednesday June 7th., open day would be held at the Laboratories in both the afternoon and evening and during which time the public of this community is cordially invited to take a tour of inspection of the premises and view the marvelous advancements, which are being made by this department in their fight against parasites, which are annually infesting our crops and lands. Experienced scientists will be present to conduct tours of inspection around the buildings and premises and more fully acquaint the general public with the efforts of the Department.

When first opened in Belleville in 1929 one of the chief parasites to command the efforts of the department was the Peach Moth, whose ravages were at that time threatening the peach industry of Ontario. Thorough research by the Belleville Entomological branch employees, who labored feverishly in an effort to combat this ravenous parasite, were finally rewarded and the Peach Moth today has been reduced to a pest of minor importance. Other successful experiences in combating parasite insects were subsequently completed in the Belleville laboratory, which the public is invited to inspect on Wednesday and observe the wonders of this present and scientific age in man's never-ending battle against the ravages of the increasing injurious insects. The general public is cordially invited, Mr. Baird stated today.

ROCHESTER CLUB MEMBERS TO COME ON SECOND VISIT

In a Letter to Owen Herity, the Club President Tells of Unanimous Decision to Return

ARRIVE ON JUNE 16th

The whole-hearted hospitality of Belleville resident, the genial hosts of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and last but not least the natural beauty, and vacation facilities of this part of the Quinte District made a lasting impression on the members of the Rochester Club when they paid a visit here last year at the invitation of the local Chamber of Commerce.

The "boys" had a swell time. They fished and they played tennis. They visited the golf courses of the city and played several rounds. They met the hail-fellow well-met attitude of the local people with a hearty reciprocative spirit — and above all they haven't forgotten what a fine place Belleville is and what fine fellows live in it.

That was exemplified at a meeting of the club held a few nights ago when members stood up and unanimously voted that they pay another visit to this city and its environs this year .This information contained in a communication received yesterday by J. Owen Herity, manager of the Chamber of Commerce was accompanied with a fine appreciative note of the splend'd reception afforded members of the club during their visit here last year.

Signed by President Guy Mitchell, the letter states, "We appreciate very much all the effort put forth by Belleville residents to make our visit a pleasant one. Our only regret is that you people have not visited Rochester and allowed us to return the courtesy. The club made a unanimous decision to visit Belleville again this year. We will arrive approximately seven-twenty a.m. on Friday June 16th."

Elderly Man Walks 9 Miles To Return $5.00 Overpayment

Shannonville, June 6—Although this village does not boast of a very big population it can at least pride itself on having the world's most honest man.

Last week an elderly gentleman of the village went to Belleville and while in that city cashed a cheque for twenty-five dollars. When the clerk handed him the money he did not count it and later on in the afternoon when he arrived home he found that he was five dollars ahead on the day's transactions. After pondering for a few minutes as to where he could have obtained the five dollars he decided that the bank clerk must have given him five dollars too much money, and therefore he immediately decided to return to the bank the next morning. During the evening, however, he worried over the matter so much that he could get little or no sleep and early the next morning he set out for Belleville and he walked every step of the way, a distance of nine miles and when he arrived there the bank had not yet opened. When the bank finally opened he rushed inside and at first he could not locate the clerk who had cashed his cheque, finally however, he spied him and walked over to where he was standing.

In a very gruff manner he asked the clerk if he remembered cashing a cheque for him the previous day. The clerk replied in the negative and the gentleman replied: "You did and you made a mistake" and he went on to ask the clerk if he didn't notice it when he checked the books at closing time. The astonished clerk replied that he had noticed a shortage of five dollars in his acounting. "Well by golly," replied our friend, "I was the man that got it" and reaching inside his pocket he handed the stunned clerk the five dollars and left the bank without further ado to the amazement of the clerk who apparently did not believe that such honesty prevailed in the countryside.

Prime Minister Chamberlain has promised a full public investigation into the sinking of the British submarine, Thetis, which went to the bottom of the Irish Sea with the loss of 99 lives. Stunned and bitter by the tragedy, the British public is demanding to know why the trapped men were not rescued and indignation meetings were held in the streets of London and Liverpool. Demonstrators are pictured here outside the Admiralty Building in London as they protested the sinking of the ill-fated Thetis. This picture was radioed from London to New York and sent from there by phonephoto.

Dr. Robt. S. MacDonald Noted N. Y. Surgeon Dies At Hunting Lodge

Was Born and Educated Near Wellington, Ont.—Practised Medicine at Plattsburg, N.Y.

A sorrowful gap was created in medical and surgical circles of New York State on Sunday when Dr. Robert Stevenson MacDonald, noted surgeon of Plattsburg, N. Y., succumbed to a sudden heart attack while spending a week end holiday at his hunting lodge in the Gatineau Hills.

The late Dr. MacDonald is a brother of Mr. James MacDonald, prominent retired Wellington agriculturist.

He was born in the MacDonald homestead one mile northwest of Wellington, now owned by Mr. George Baitley. In his early days, after receiving his education in the little red schoolhouse in the vicinity of Wellington and Hillier, he graduated from normal school and returned to teach in the "Swamp College" schoolhouse, the place where he first learned the elementaries of the "three R's."

Later he attended Cornell University Medical School at Ithaca N. Y., and placed third in the N. Y. State medical Council examinations out of a large class. He later located in Plattsburg N. Y., where his fame as a surgeon became nation-wide. He owned hunting lodges in the Gatineau Hills and flew there on week end holidays in one of his private planes. He was sixty-two years of age.

The funeral takes place tomorrow in Plattsburg, N. Y. Messrs. James MacDonald, Wellington, and C. D. Stevenson, of this city, will attend the last rites.

Drives Royalty in Mountains

Vic Riley, veteran chauffeur at Jasper Park Lodge ,who drove Their Majesties to Mount Edith Cavell and return during their stay in the Canadian Rockies on their eastbound trip.

Riley, who is in an engine cab in the winter, and has driven a Lodge car for many summers, says the King and Queen were interested in everything they saw and took hundreds of feet of movie film during the trip. They spent more than half an hour walking around the foot of the Glacier of the Angel.

Kinsmen Members Hear Impromptu Address On Credit

An impromptu dissertation on "Good Credit" described by members as an appropriate topic was given the Belleville Kinsmen Club at their regular fortnightly dinner last night by Past-President Cleo Colling. Mr. Colling spoke with a thorough knowledge of his subject in spite of the fact that the speech was of the impromptu variety. His effort was well received by the large attendance.

Decision to hold a "ladies' night" at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on June 19th was made during the business session of the meeting. Members will be afforded the opportunity to invite guests at this function at which honor will be paid the wives and friends of the club members.

Prominent visitors at the meeting were President Dick Parker, Past-President Gordon Dundas, and other members of the Cobourg Club. They were accorded a hearty welcome by local members.

Reports on the forthcoming Kid-Kar Derby given by chairmen of the various committees in charge of the affair revealed that satisfactory progress was being made.

Help Those Who Cannot Help Themselves By Buying A Tag On Saturday from The Belleville Humane Society

Local Humane Society Deserves The Encouragement of All Citizens

Has Done Much in First Year of Organization in Preventing Cruel Treatment of Animals

EDUCATION NEEDED

When an effort was being made a year ago to form a branch of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Belleville many expressions of sympathy and encouragement were received which helped in no small measure to bring about the desired organization. At that time Belleville was the only city in Ontario that did not have a branch of the Society and, indeed, most towns and villages were carrying on this work.

After one year of organization the local branch can look back with satisfaction to what has been accomplished in alleviating the suffering of animals in this district in so far as the limited funds have made it possible.

Organization is being effected now to promote the teaching of humane education in the schools and that this education is needed has been demonstrated by four cases of cruelty to animals by children during the last few weeks. On one occasion a cat was tortured and finally hung by a string around its neck until it died, another was the stoning of a black squirrel until it was left lying with both hind legs broken, another was where a live kitten was thrown into the river and the other was the stoning of a cat. It is possible that there is something pathologically wrong with children who are cruel to animals as it is natural for the majority of them to love pets of all kinds. But in some cases the training to love all things great and small may do a great deal to prevent such occurrences as those mentioned above.

On Saturday the Belleville Humane Society will hold its second Tag Day and it is earnestly hoped that the same generous response on the part of the public will be forthcoming as it was last year so that the work of the Society may not only be carried on but may be extended until the desired results are attained:

The Voice of the Voiceless

I am the voice of the voiceless,
Through me, the dumb shall speak;
Till the deaf world's ear be made to hear
The cry of the wordless weak.
From street, from cage, and from kennel,
From jungle and stall, the wail
Of my tortured kin proclaims the sin
Of the mighty against the frail.

For love is the true religion,
And love is the law sublime;
And all that is wrought, where love is not,
Will die at the touch of time.
And Science, the great Revealer,
Must flame his torch at the Source,
And keep it bright with that holy light
Or his feet shall fail on the course.

For he who would trample kindness
And mercy into the dust—
He has missed the trail, and his guest will fail;
He is not the guide to trust.
Oh, shame on the mothers of mortals
Who have not stopped to teach
Of the sorrow that lies in dear, dumb eyes,
The sorrow that has no speech.

The same force formed the sparrow
That fashioned Man, the King.
The God of the Whole gave a spark of Soul
To each furred and feathered thing.
And I am my brother's keeper,
And I will fight his fight,
And speak the word for beast and bird,
Till the world shall set things right.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

THEIR MAJESTIES

the battery connections for his lamp and he did it for "greenhorns" in the party.

For 39 minutes the Royal party were underground and when they returned to the surface, the Queen shook hands with guides in blue overalls and said: "thank you very much; it was most interesting."

Veteran Miners Impressed

Veteran miners and hoist men were impressed by the casual air of the King and Queen while the cage, travelling at a speed of 1,500 feet a minute, descended more than a half-mile into the solid rock. "Why, they were as unconcerned as veterans during the 'big drop'," commented a miner, Danny Fitzgerald.

Their Majesties and about 20 other members of the party stepped into the cage—an ordinary affair used by miners on their daily trips to work. Six bells were sounded and then seven to indicate all was ready. The gate was closed, and two bells signalled "lower away."

"If you swallow, it will take away the feeling in your ears," the King told the Queen. Their Majesties chatted casually with the others as the cage plunged down and down in a manner that might give even a veteran a sinking feeling in the pit of the stomach.

Ride on Mine Train

Down on the 2,800-foot level there was a brief wait for a second cage-load of visitors. Then the Royal party boarded a small electric locomotive and were driven for 500 yards through the workings. Their Majesties kept the mine officials busy answering questions on the mine and the hours of work and pay of the miners.

Arrived at the rock face, their attention was taken up by two miners operating compressor drills. The King was interested in just how the drills worked while the Queen wanted to know where the miners came from and how long they had worked in the mine.

The Royal couple were especially interested in the safety measures taken by the company to protect the men. Later in the mine hoist house, they had surprised comments for the powerful machinery operating the drums that haul the cages up and down. They were also shown a battery of compressors that supply compressed air to the pneumatic drills used on the rock.

During the two-minute descent into the mine in the cage and the slower trip up, the lives of the King and Queen were in the hands of Tom Joyce, a taciturn native of Rouyn, Que., who operated the hoist machinery. Joyce preserved a poker-face as he pulled the great levers but he said later he had spent an anxious 39 minutes.

Newspapermen covering the Royal tour tried to get down into the mine with the King and Queen but company officials barred them. They appealed to the Prime Minister, but he was powerless. One reporter for an English weekly managed to outwit the watching officials by getting himself mixed up with the official party.

The mine management was represented by Donald Macaskill, vice-president and general manager of the International Nickel Company of Canada, Ltd., and Ralph D. Parker, General Superintendent of the company's mining and smelting divisions.

The mine visit came as an unrehearsed climax to the rest of the official round in Sudbury. From Sudbury Junction where the Royal train arrived at 7:31 p.m. EDT., the King and Queen drove for five miles down solid avenues of cheering subjects. After a two-mile swing through the city, they made the never-omitted gesture to the younger generation at Athletic Park.

17,000 Children Seen

A throng of 17,000 youngsters, drawn from all over the north country, raised a shout that was heard for miles through the clear night. Each waved a Union Jack, turning the gathering into a weaving mass of color.

There was a brief civic reception, in which Mayor W. J. LaForest of Sudbury and Mayor E. A. Collins of Copper Cliff presented their councillors. Winsome Margaret LaForest, 19-year-old daughter of the Mayor, stepped forward to present the Queen with a bouquet of northern wild orchids. The elaborate offering was gathered by a party of botanists, guides and Indians in the swamps of Manitoulin Island.

The uproar of Athletic Park contrasted strongly with the deep stillness of the Frood Mine—the final stop on the Royal route. Their Majesties were welcomed at the property by Mayor Collins. On the way to the change house and cage they were kept warding off a swarm of mosquitoes. Down below in the main chamber on the 2,800-feet level, the Queen remarked smiling that at last they were free of the pests.

A New Experience

Like the King, she recalled a previous visit to a coal mine, but she said the nickel property where 11 different metals are worked was new to her experience. The metals produced at Frood are nickel, gold, copper, silver, platinum, selenium, tellurium, palladium, rhodium, iridium and ruthenium.

The main gallery reminded the royal party of a London tube station with its whitewashed walls, concrete floor and mine railway tracks. As on the transcontinental tour, a small pilot train preceded the royal train through the workings. The royal train was driven by J. Morris, but he switched with a colleague on the return trip so as to share the honor.

Aboard the train, the party sat back to back and were covered with rugs. This was to protect them from the expected chill, but the air was neither noticeably cold nor damp. Lady Nunburnholm, lady-in-waiting, was dressed like the Queen in waterproof silk with helmet and goloshes.

A Skeleton Shift

Only a skeleton shift was at work and these had been specially assembled for the occasion, as the mine was officially closed for the royal visit.

The King showed a close interest in the ore body on which the drillers, Jim Hadley and Bill Simpson, were working. He asked how they learned the job, what shifts they worked and the purpose of the heavy boots they wore. The boots are to protect the feet from falling rock fragments.

Their Majesties saw the ore being dumped into the crushers and on the surface later saw the trucks carrying the ore to the railway siding.

ENTERING

"I saw the prisoner cross the road towards a bicycle. A man and a woman who were in a car spoke to me and from what they told me I boarded the car and entered into Halkin Street.

"On our arrival there I saw the prisoner in the distance turn out of Halkin Street into Grosvenor Place. We followed him until we got to the junction of Chapel Street and Grosvenor Place where the car swerved and stopped the prisoner."

Report of Firing Gun

The constable said he told the prisoner in the presence of other witnesses: "I have been told by the driver of this car that you just fired a shot from a gun in Halkin Street, which I also heard."

"The prisoner said: 'I didn't hit anyone, did I? I have a certificate for it (the gun).' "

Tice said Lawlor produced the certificate from his pocket and, on being asked, took the gun from his hip pocket.

The court had adjourned while Tice was advised to attend the hearing. Inspector Heyward earlier had told of questioning Lawlor at the Gerald Road station following his arrest.

Seen Discharging Weapon

Heyward said he met the accused at Gerald Road Police Station last night following his arrest in fashionable Belgrave Square and told him: "At 8.20 p.m. tonight you were seen to discharge this weapon at a motor car in Belgrave Square."

The Inspector then handed the court usher the firearm.

The court adjourned while police sought a witness who could tell of the alleged discharge of the weapon.

Heyward said Lawlor told him the weapon was "my own property and I have a certificate for it."

The Inspector added: "Then I cautioned him and I said to him, 'That certificate does not entitle you to have it in the street or to discharge it in the street and you will be detained.' "

The Inspector said the prisoner did not reply when he was charged at 11.15 p.m.

Fumbled Fedora

As the evidence was given Lawlor sat fumbling the fedora hat with which he had shielded his face as he left the Gerald Road station for Police Court. He wore a double-breasted suit.

Magistrate Clyde Wilson asked Lawlor if he wished to question the Inspector but the defendant replied "No sir."

The Magistrate then asked Heyward: "Is there another witness who can give evidence that this man had this weapon in his possession in Belgrave Square?"

Heyward said he could get another witness.

Magistrate Wilson: "At the moment it's hearsay."

Heyward: "He has admitted it, sir."

Wilson: "You did not see him discharge this weapon in the street?"

Heyward: "No, I did not."

Wilson: "You had better get someone who did."

The magistrate adjourned court as constables took Lawlor from the dock.

The Belgrave Square shooting occurred about the same time a hole was discovered in a window pane at the residence of the Princess Royal, Countess of Harewood. Both were investigated by Scotland Yard in an effort to determine whether there was any connection between the two incidents.

Mystery Surrounds Motive

Mystery surrounded the shooting and the motive behind it. The only authorized statement from Scotland Yard was:—

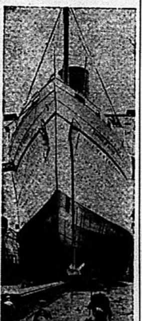
"As Her Royal Highness (the Duchess of Kent) was leaving her residence, 3 Belgrave Square, at 9 p.m., it was alleged that a shot was fired in the direction of her car.. Later a man accompanied police to the Gerald Road police station."

The Duchess went to the theatre despite the shooting. With her was the Countess of Portarlington. They saw "Wuthering Heights."

The Duchess was not aware of what occurred until her return home.

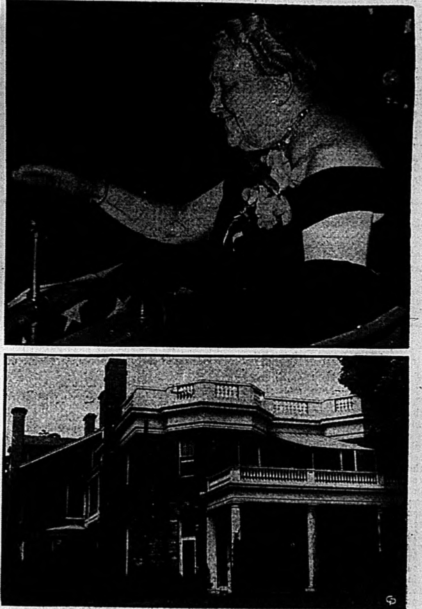
The Duke of Kent had left the house a short time before his wife to keep a speaking engagement and he also was advised upon his return to Belgrave Square. Their two children, Prince Edward and Princess Alexandra, are staying in Buckinghamshire.

Groomed for Royalty



The Empress of Britain, which has been selected for the honor of carrying King George and Queen Elizabeth back to England on completion of their Canadian tour, is shown in drydock at Southampton as it received an overhauling in preparation for the royal voyage,

"No higher honor could come to us than for the rulers of the British Empire to sleep and eat under our roof," maintains Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President. At 84 she is the active head in planning for Their Majesties' visit to Hyde Park this week. Her greatest disppointment is that she will not be able to accommodate the whole of the royal court. She and her son took time out for this picture a few days ago.



HYDE PARK'S CHATELAINE AWAITS HER ROYAL GUESTS

Not one moment of "trouble or anxiety" has President Roosevelt given his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, she proudly claims. His rise to fame and power she describes as "most natural" since the day he left his Hyde Park home, LOWER, to take his place in the world She has followed his career with the closest attention, glorying with him at such events as the annual President's Ball which she regularly attends, ABOVE. After weeks of preparation, the chatelaine of the Roosevelt ancestral home is ready to entertain the King and Queen.

THE ROYAL JOURNEY

One more day in Ontario, four days in the United States, and four days in eastern Quebec and the Maritimes and a call at the coast of Newfoundland, will wind up Their Majesties' tour of North America. So far it has been an epoch-making event, one of the finest demonstrations of democratic empire development. So far as the royal tour has been carried out, all nations know what freedom British Dominions enjoy through what they have learned of Canada as it was revealed to them by the coming of King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth. But more is to come of it. There is the tour into Washington, New York and Hyde Park, as guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt of the United States. Britain and the great Republic are friendly nations, with political ideals largely the same under democratic liberty. These great nations are bound by ties of language, of race and of constitutional development and it is inconceivable to think of them ever as anything but the friends they are today. Then when the American journey ends, there is a hurried visit to Eastern Quebec and in the Maritimes, three Canadian provinces will greet and acclaim the King and Queen and say farewell for Canada. When the last farewells are said Thursday of next week, the royal ship will visit the coast of Newfoundland, the oldest English colony and then leave for home.

Today the royal party is visiting in Western Ontario, tomorrow they make seven official stops as they move eastward to Niagara Falls. Into the latter part of this week will be crowded perhaps the greatest demonstration any monarch has ever received in a foreign land as Britain's King and Queen become the guests of the United States. Busy days then follow in Canada, from Monday to Thursday of next week, and then farewell.

So accustomed to the visit of royalty has Canada become, so deeply have the kingliness and manliness and courtesy of the King and the graciousness of the Queen touched Canadian people that Canadians have had an experience they will never forget—their Sovereigns have been in their midst and shown themselves very human and likeable. It is therefore impossible to believe that Canada has not been visited before by Kings and Queens, and that no reigning monarch of Britain has ever been in the United States. This is difficult to realize because the King and Queen are found to be so much in sympathy with the New World. Yet it is true that only in this year 1939, four hundred and forty-seven years after Columbus discovered America, has such an event taken place.

King George and Queen Elizabeth therefore are pioneers. They have brought the Old World very close to the New World, they have made the Crown a very understandable institution and have proven its democracy.

So these days have made and are making history, with goodwill, understanding, which are more enduring than treaties, because the bond of friendship and personality is in it all.

SPAIN PAST AND TO BE

Spain's civil war is over, Italian and German troops have gone home and Franco says he wants Spain so powerful that she can preserve peace and that she will be independent.

New York Times says "Now that the whole Spanish struggle is seen as an episode in a larger war, the chief interest of the return of Spain to the Spaniards centres in the question whether it is symbolic or real and if real, what part the new Spain will play in the balance of Europe and what its weight will amount to. It cites the view of Major George Fielding Elliot that "Spain has 21 divisions of fighting troops worthy to rate with the first-line units, Britain which has only four and France which has thirty-two." He sees in this war-hardened Spanish force, plus the strategic position of the country which is near Gibraltar and looks on two ocean highways, an important factor in the new line-up now in formation.

The Times gives as the opinion of most European observers that the Spaniards are too exhausted and unsettled and also unwilling to fight again and that the most to be expected of Franco by his allies is a benevolent neutrality. The Times says this opinion was confirmed by Franco's speech to the women Falangists.

The foreign soldiers leave Spain as the Times remarks "for reasons of their own," adding that Spain belongs to Europe as never before in her recent history, and says that she is not left to herself.

WOMEN HAVE WATCHED FOR MEN DOWN MANY ROADS

Women have watched for men down many roads,
Look now upon the dark sea for their sail,
Hear in the wind a last despairing wail,
Know how the deep tide alters their abodes.
Now clouds go westward with their crimson loads,
The hills reach up to heaven with dark hands,
The sea-birds wheel above the crumbling lands;
I fear some desperate destiny forebodes.

The wind is like a moaning on the night
As of all souls who drowned in sight of land;
And on this haggard shore, this final height,
Here at this last place where the feet can stand
Suddenly I am riven with alarms . . . .
O God, send back my lover to my arms.

KING GEORGE VI AND QUEEN ELIZABETH will sit down to a strictly American meal when they visit the World's Fair June 10 and have luncheon in the Federal Building as the guests of Edward J. Flynn, United States Commissioner to the Fair. After luncheon they will have one hour and fifty minutes to inspect seven different exhibits representing the Empire over which they rule.

x x

The time that the British Sovereigns will pass at the Fair's grounds will be so limited that it has been scheduled from minute to minute by those in charge of the arrangements. Only a few odd minutes have been left for unforseen delay, while the royal party walks from pavilion to pavilion, or if the British rulers want to take a short respite between their visits.

x

The whole visit to the Fair will last three hours and forty minutes, from noon to 3.40 p.m. The party will enter the grounds through Boulevard Gate and leave the British pavilion, last to be inspected, from the entrance facing the Gardens on Parade.

x

The principle event of the visit will be the luncheon, which will begin at 12.50 p.m. sharp, with a few minutes provided for the King and Queen to rest beforehand, and ending at 1.50 p.m. The preparations for the luncheon, the choice of the menu, the decoration of the dining and rest rooms and the selection of the guests to be invited have taken most of Mr. Flynn's time and energy since he returned to his duties on Wednesday after being ill with influenza.

x

The menu for the royal luncheon has finally been set as following:

x

New England Sea Food Cocktail
(made of shrimps, scallops, lobster and crabmeat)
Jellied Gumbo Louisiana
Breast of Capon Maryland, with Baby Lima Beans and Corn Fritters in Mid-Western Style
Alligator Pear and Grapefruit Salad
Washington Log
(a chocolate mousse with fresh cherries flambees)
Mints and Coffee

x

Martin Sweeney, New York caterer, will direct preparations for the meal. Yter Jardin will be the chef in charge and Dante the maitre d'hotel.

x

The list of guests invited to the luncheon will not be published until the day before the reception. Mr. Flynn said that it would be fairly representative of the nation, state and city's official and social life. It is understood that the seating capacity in the dining room of the Federal Building does not exceed fifty-four persons. When the members of the royal party, the high officials of the state, city and Fair, the official representatives of Great Britain and Canada in the United States and their wives are taken into account there could not be many seats left.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 6th., 1919.

Fruit farmers state that strawberries will cost more this season than they did last year. They are now being offered by wholesalers at record prices. The yield, however, promises to be plentiful.

A deer landed from the water at Massassaga Park last evening and was seen from a distance making for the woods. Where the deer came from is still a mystery.

The automobile owned by Mr. E. Morris of Marmora which was stolen here recently was found yesterday on Charlotte Street in this city, where it had been abandoned.

During the past few days the retail prices of a number of foods have advanced in price. Last week sliced bacon was quoted at 58 cents per pound, this week the price is 64 cents per pound; boiled ham was 70 cents per pound, now 75 cents per pound; cheese was 38 cents per pound, now 40 cents per pound; eggs were 50 cents per dozen, now 52 cents per dozen.

30 YEARS AGO

June 6th., 1909.

The business block on Front Street for some time owned by Mr. George Boyle, has been purchased by Miss Elizabeth Corbett.

A little girl tore her pretty dress on the side of the footbridge yesterday. That picturesque old relic is about as safe to touch as a barb wire fence.

Some towns have what is called a "Back Yard Improvement Society". Why not form a branch in Belleville?

Mrs. J. W. Dunnett is visiting friends in Pakenham, Ont.

Mr. George Moxam of this city was a guest at a banquet given in Toronto by the William Rennie Company to its employees.

40 YEARS AGO

June 6th., 1899.

About three o'clock yesterday afternoon heavy, lowering clouds were seen gathering in the sky in a northwestern direction from the city. The rumbling of distant thunder denoted that a storm was approaching and it gave evidence of being severe. Before any rain descended the wind blew with considerable force in the city, but from accounts which we have received our city was fortunate in escaping the path of the tornado (for such it proved to be) that swept through a portion of the townships of Thurlow and Huntingdon. After the storm had subsided, its path was plainly visible on all sides. On the 8th concession of Thurlow Township the Zion Hill Methodist Church, a brick structure, was levelled to the ground; the Methodist Church at West Huntingdon was bereft of its spire and a portion of the front brick work was torn out; the Bethel School House was unroofed; the school house near Roslin was badly damaged; the Presbyterian Church near Ivanhoe was damaged considerably; scores of barns were unroofed, wind mills blown down and many fences and trees were levelled to the ground. Some of the stages coming to the city today were forced to drive through fields, as the roadway was blocked with fallen trees and fence rails.

50 YEARS AGO

June 6th., 1889.

The Hillsides and the Wideawakes played a baseball match yesterday afternoon in West Belleville which resulted in an easy victory for the former club. The final score was 22 to 7.

Nine Belleville boys who are now residing in Buffalo, N. Y, several of whom when they lived here were members of the old "Alerts" baseball team, played a game of baseball on Decoration Day in Buffalo with the "Ramblers" of that city and defeated them by a score of 6 to 5. The old Belleville boys who formed the team were as follows: E. Cherry, pitcher; E. Waldo, first base; W. Owens, centre field; Fred Howard, short stop; R. Connor, second base; G. Reeves, catcher; H. Howard, right field; W. Jamieson, third base; L. Williams, left field; Charles Westlake, mascot.

Mr. Henry Tammage has resumed the management of the opera house. One of his first acts will be to thoroughly renovate the building.

Mr. M. Robinson, Warden of the County, was in town today.

WELCOMED

Cannonballs are sometimes ploughed from the fields about Queenston Heights, where Sir Isaac Brock fought back invaders from the United States. Indian relics are turned up in the fields near Moraviantown, where the great chief Tecumseh died fighting for his British allies in the Battle of the Thames.

Few Scars of Combat

But few scars of combat mark Southwestern Ontario today. The enthusiastic interlude that greets the visit of the King and Queen is a pause in the business of getting ahead and keeping the peace with one's neighbors.

What is more, when Their Majesties go to Windsor tonight more than half the 500,000 who will hail them will be from the United States. That same atmosphere of international goodwill will prevail at Niagara Falls for the royal visit there tomorrow night, symbolizing the century and a quarter of peace between the two countries.

Bridges, tunnels and ferries have carried thousands of United States visitors, without passports, into Canada for this occasion. It is more than just an occasion, too, when United States and Canadian residents gather to cheer a British King and Queen.

Guelph, Kitchener, Stratford

Late today Their Majesties enter the ground over which the red coats fought the Americans. Their earlier official stops, at the gateway to this sun parlor, were at Guelph, Kitchener and Stratford, where great crowds of townsmen and country dwellers began to gather at sun-up for the demonstrations of loyalty and affection.

Windsor likely will play host to the greatest gathering in the two days. At a rate of 30,000 an hour transportation systems carried residents of Detroit—it was Fort Detroit when Brock gave it up—into Windsor for the celebration.

The royal train will back along the Detroit River front into the Canadian National Railways' station for four miles, while cheers rise from crowded stands and loud whistles of welcome from dozens of steamships and yachts. At the station the King and Queen will be greeted by Mayor David Croll and Mrs. Croll, whose daughter, Constance, will present a bouquet to the Queen.

After other civic officials have been presented, the train will move slowly from the station to Sandwich Street where Their Majesties will alight again to hear 35,000 school children sing "O Canada." Bands have been recruited from all through the district for the welcome.

Move Into London

Tomorrow morning the royal train will move into London, named in honor of the heart of the Empire, and for an hour the King and Queen will tour the city, thronged for the occasion by a crowd that will boost the normal population of 76,000 to 200,000. Ten-minute stops are scheduled then at Ingersoll, Woodstock and Brantford before the royal train moves into Hamilton at 2.45 p.m. E.D.T.

As in every community, the children will play a major part in the welcome to the royal couple at Hamilton. They will pack Civic Stadium, where a physical training exhibition is to be given by youngsters from all over the district.

At 4.10 p.m. the train will strike south for St. Catharines where, after a 10-minute stop and civic reception Their Majesties will enter the royal automobile to drive by way of Port Weller, Niagara-on-the-Lake and Queenston Heights to Niagara Falls through the fruitlands along the Niagara River.

There, saying farewell to Ontario the King and Queen will be taken through the wind tunnel to view the majesty of the Falls. At night, while searchlights play brilliant colors on the white spray, Their Majesties will dine on a balcony overlooking the magnificent cataract. They will leave at 10.10 p.m. for their four days in the United States.

Litter From the Skies

Beetles scuttling along their tiny runways, chips floating on the water—the most impressive vehicles man has made for himself look no more than that from the air, and at such heights one would suppose their builders incompetent to achieve the amazing feat which they already have accomplished.

It would seem beyond human powers and assiduity, yet man has done it. Long ago the little creature managed to pollute rivers, so that with modern times he could establish earth's greatest city as an island in a sewer and abolish its shad; later he actually filled Conrad's "sovereign and incorruptible" sea with garbage, and strewed its sands with tobacco, cellophane and peelings; when enough machines had been assembled he successfully poisoned the lower atmosphere, turning much of it, and his own insides, black.

Making gases further-flying and lethal, he increased the possible area and speed of human defilement, but these gales of torture have been reserved for purposes of murder and there are still tracts of earth where even during a peaceful war people can breathe without dying.

The Zoological Park is deep in refuse every Sunday! A trifle. What really startles one who has followed the development of man's ability to litter is foreshadowed in a complaint from farmers in Ontario, who report that their fields are being turned into waste-baskets by 'planes flying between Detroit and Buffalo. Down on waving wheatland and into clean furrows of potato patches rain airy gravies—dirty paper plates, cups and canisters.

Elk storming through the springtime woods are pelted with ice cream containers and old salad. Upon the first violets rests an unlicked spoon. The maple bough bears paper napkins late from the moustache of some traveller. Have the advertisements offered tents "rain, insect and snake proof, with garbage-resistant roofs"?

It was a big thing to fill the ocean with rubbish. To make deadly gases dirigible was still more ingenious. But to have strewn the Canadian farming country with scrapings is a deed which proves that no limit can be placed upon man's "littery" gifts.

Birds, deer, bears, foxes, otters, fishes, turtles occupy forests and streams for centuries and leave them clean and sweet. Give Homo sapiens modern facilities and in a few years he has left his ugly traces not on cities and rivers only but over the northern wilderness, the ocean, and even in the air. No other animal can do this.—New York Herald Tribune.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

He came forward. "Looking for my laborers," he explained .

"You can go to the devil if you think I'm doing any more today," Wylde flung at him. "I'm tired. And if you won't feed a guy, Janice here will—won't you, Janice?"

"I wouldn't like to abet mutiny," she said, with a smile, "but I'd probably have a hard time keeping you from sitting down to my table when I served supper."

"There, see — Janice is a good sport."

Peter laughed and dropped down on the bank beside Wylde. He lighted a cigarette and smoked with eyes half closed, watching Jan until she put down her pan.

"Come and take a rest," he suggested then. "You've done enough for today. The atmosphere around here is very demoralizing for honest toilers."

She agreed readily and joined the two men.

Wylde turned to Peter with smug satisfaction and announced, "Janice is going back home at the end of this adventure."

Jan looked quickly at Peter, to see how he took this announcement, but his eyes did not tell her anything.

"That's a very wise plan, Jan—I wouldn't let anything interfere," he said, with a meaning that she immediately caught.

"There is only one thing which could interfere," she said slowly, deliberately.

"Nothing should be allowed to interefere," Wylde stated determinedly.

But Jan was not listening to Wylde. She was thinking of Peter, and knew he understood that her love for him could keep her from returning to her father's home — could take her from the mountains to his home instead — if only he would propose to her.

CHAPTER XXX.

That evening, Jan took Peter's hand and led him away from her fireside for a walk in the woods. She knew Wylde's eyes were enviously following them, but she did not care. Peter was acting so peculiarly and that statement of his in the afternoon that nothing must keep her from going home to her father needed explanation.

"You love me, Peter?" she asked softly, her arm clinging to his.

"You're such a sweet kid, nobody could help loving you," he replied, his eyes looking down tenderly into her upraised face, "but you are such a kid, that I wonder if you know your own mind."

"Don't be silly!" she protested quickly, annoyance in her voice.

"I mean it, Jan. Wylde is crazy about you, and you once thought you loved him. Are you still sure you don't? How do you know that you love me and would be happy if I should take you to share the prosaic life I lead at Illini?"

"Why, Peter Hathaway!" she exclaimed in surprise.

"Yes! How do you know? You've a chance to go home to your father and lead the carefree sort of life that a girl your age should live."

"Are you trying to send me away from you—to my father?" She paused and faced him, her hand dropping from his arm now.

"I believe that your father's home is where you belong—for the present," he admitted.

"You've—you've repented your declaration of the other night!" She was angry now.

"No," he hastened to assure her, "but——" He paused.

"Oh, you don't have to struggle to take back what you said! You really said nothing very binding—only kissed me and told me you loved me. You didn't ask me to marry you, so now you can safely back down and be free of me."

"Jan, don't talk that way! I'm thinking of you—not of myself. I'm thinking that you are very young and must go away where you can think things over—can see life clearly. You shouldn't stay on here, anyway. This is no place for a girl."

"Oh, very well. Have it your own way. I don't have to stay here. I can go other places—but I don't have to go home to my father. I've money enough to go on proving that I can take care of myself."

"That's just what you mustn't do!" Peter exclaimed anxiously. "You must go to your father. You must realize that there is where you belong."

"Oh, you don't love me—you want to get rid of me—you don't care how I feel!" she exclaimed in desperation.

She turned from him, blindly stumbling back along the trail toward the camp. She could hear him following her, knew his eyes were upon her, and struggled for self-control. No tears. No matter how her world was tumbling about her, no tears. No showing this man how deeply he had hurt her.

She must hide her hurt, go away from here with chin high. And, yes—despite her words just now—she was going to her father. She had to go to him. He would understand all the turmoil in her heart, help her to pick her way through the darkness and unhappiness that had closed about her. She could unburden her heart to him, and find comfort in his love and guidance.

Before she reached the clearing, she had regained her self-control. She slowed her steps until Peter was at her side, then began talking to him casually of the expected arrival, tomorrow, of Red with a mechanic to repair Ivonne's plane.

Peter looked at her with a puzzled expression, as though he could not understand how she could so suddenly put their recent scene behind her.

He did not stop to realize that Jan's mother had been an actress, and that Jan had inherited the ability to play a part when necessary.

The next afternoon, when Red and the mechanic arrived, it was learned that it would take a few days to get Ivonne's plane repaired. Brad, chafing at the delay and hating the hard work required of him here in the mountains, arranged with Red to take him out that afternoon.

"Mr. Flagg is to be on the air at four o'clock," Red told Jan. "He wants to talk to you and your sister."

"How grand!" Jan exclaimed in delight.

When Red made his contact with his radio, she listened eagerly. A puzzled frown puckered her brow as she heard his opening words.

"Howdy, Mr. Flagg. Yes, everything is going great. Plane will be fixed in a couple of days. Yes, Jan's right here. Miss Ivonne wants to talk to you first, though."

He turned to Ivonne and offered her the mouthpiece and earphones.

While Ivonne talked with her father, Jan did not listen. She confronted Red.

"You've talked to my father before this," she accused.

Red nodded. "I knew about you the day before you arrived. Had my orders to keep an eye on you. Jan—and it's been a sweet job. The first time I talked with your father, last spring, I told him flatly that his name didn't mean a darned thing to me, but that I'd keep an eagle eye on you because you reminded me of my sister. From then on, we've been good friends."

Jan could not resent this guardianship that her father had secretly extended to her. She could not be angry at his anxiety for her safety. She smiled at Red.

"You've been a grand friend, Red, and I'll not forget our good times together," she assured him, and shook his hand warmly.

Then she took the instruments Ivonne was offering her, and spoke to her father over the short waves.

CHAPTER XXXI

"You don't have to kill the fatted calf, Father," Jan said in a voice that trembled, "but Rex and I are coming home as soon as Ivonne's plane is ready."

She listened to his reply, then glanced at Ivonne with mischief in her eyes, as she spoke again into the radio's mouthpiece.

"You say Rex and I can't fly in Ivonne's plane? You don't trust her? Father, surely you don't expect me to tell her that ....Oh, you'll tell her? No need. Just send that other plane and pilot, and we'll follow orders like meek children....Tomorrow? Yes, we'll be ready tomorrow."

Then, Red got back on the air, and talked long and earnestly with Ogden Flagg, completing arrangements.

Brad would not even wait until Flagg's chartered plane would arrive on the morrow with two pilots, one to take out Ivonne's plane when repaired. That something had happened between him and Ivonne was very apparent. They seemed at sword's points and, in retaliation, Ivonne was being very sweet to Wylde.

Her relief was evident when Brad finally flew away with Red.

"Well, that's that!" she exclaimed. "What I ever saw in that wet blanket, I don't know. We could have been grounded in lots worse places than this—this has been fun."

"Swell fun!" agreed Wylde, his eyes going to Jan.

Jan glanced quickly at Peter and knew a disconcerting moment, for she saw that Peter had caught Wylde's look and understood it.

Did Peter really think that she did not know her own mind? Could he really think that she was still in love with Wylde and would realize it when she got home and took up the life that should normally be hers? Could he believe that it had been only propinquity and the romantic background that had made her love him—after the way she had bared her heart to him, told him that she had come here only to be near him?

"And now the heiress returns to her own," Wylde remarked, with apparent satisfaction. "I knew you'd have to come to it sooner or later, Jan."

"I don't have to come to it," she retorted hotly, and Ivonne came immediately to her aid.

"Listen, Wylde, you haven't got Jan's number, and you're only going to get her mad. If you don't behave yourself, we'll leave you here when Father's chartered plane comes tomorrow, and make you wait and fly out in mine when it's repaired."

Peter, too, spoke in Jan's defense.

"Jan's not going back because she has to. She's got a neat pile salted away."

"Then why are you going home?" Wylde demanded of Jan.

"For a reason you could not understand," she replied quickly.

"I'm not completely dumb," Wylde protested. "Don't be so secretive!"

Jan looked at Peter for a moment before she answered. She knew that he would understand that she was not telling the whole truth, was only giving a reason that the others would accept.

"Because I promised to return Rex to Father, and because I have business to settle with him. He advanced me a hundred dollars toward my grub stake, and I've got to pay my obligations."

"You're not going to stay home?" Ivonne asked in surprise.

"That will be decided after Father and I have a talk," Jan said quietly, but she knew she was going to stay with her father.

Peter moved restlessly about, building a fire, putting on a pail of water to boil, preparing the coffee pot and placing it over the flames.

Their last supper together, thought Jan. She had panned her last gold.

She spoke to Peter, telling him he could have her supplies, her burros. He nodded his head, absently, replied that he would sell them and send her the money. She did not demur. If Peter sent her the money, she would hear from him—and she wanted to hear from him—often.

There was a restraint over them all that evening as they sat about the fire. Hugh soon left to return to Peter's claim. Wylde and Ivonne talked in low tones.

At last, Jan said, in a small, wistful voice, "Take me for a walk downstream, Peter. It's my last night, and I'd sort of like to say good-by to everything."

They walked out of the light of the fire, followed by Rex.

"I hope you're satisfied," Jan said bitterly, as they got out of earshot of the others.

"You are a very sensible girl," Peter told her.

"And is that all you have to say?" She could not let it go at that. The love for him which burned in her heart could not be denied so easily. "Aren't you sorry to see me go? Won't you miss me? Will I see you again? Aren't you human, Peter?"

"Of course I'll be sorry to see you go." He paused and smiled down at her, but there was great restraint in his tone. "I'll miss the swellest pal a fellow could ever have."

She knew he had deliberately ignored her last two questions. She repeated them.

"See you again?" he mused. "Yes, sightseer, we'll be meeting again—and, being human, I'll be glad when that time comes."

That was all she could get out of him, and with that meager consolation she had to be satisfied. "Yes, sightseer, we'll be meeting again." Did he mean that he suspected she would again make their paths cross, or that he would come to her, anxious to renew the friendship that had blossomed into —but had it really blossomed into love on his part?

CHAPTER XXXII

The chartered plane had arrived. It was with deep sadness that Jan looked for the last time on the familiar surroundings of her claim. The towering mountains, the gurgling stream, the friendly pine trees, all meant home to her.

Wylde, on the contrary was elated that he had reached the end of his brief stay here. He had not enjoyed working, and was glad to put the hard labor behind him. He shook Peter's hand, and invited him to drop in on him if he came to New York.

"I'll take you up on that," Peter said quickly. "I'll be in New York in late September—on business." His eyes went to Jan's face as he said the last two words.

"Then you must not fail to visit us, too," Ivonne invited. "Father will want to thank you in person for protecting Jan, and Jan and I will both want to see you again."

She laughed, and her eyes flashed from Jan's flushed cheeks to Peter's enigmatic eyes. There was something going on here, and she wished she knew exactly what it was.

"I wouldn't think of coming to New York and not calling upon Jan and her family," Peter replied.

Jan's heart was pounding. She would see him again in September, and it would be he who came seeking her! But would he be seeking merely a friend—or a girl whose image he could not eradicate from his heart?

The flight East was uneventful. After an overnight stop, the plane landed at the Newark Airport the next afternoon.

Rex was the first to alight. He streaked straight for his master and jumped on him excitedly. Then, Ivonne went into her father's arms.

Jan, for a moment, hesitated. Then, as her father turned to her, she hesitated no longer. She wanted those strong arms about her in the same fatherly greeting Ivonne had received. She clung to him, her arms about his neck, hugging him hard.

As they walked toward the Flagg limousine, beside which a liveried chauffeur stood, Rex walked between Jan and her father, occasionally nosing his master's hand.

"Good old Rex!" Ogden Flagg approved. "Took good care of Jan and brought her home. Good Rex!" And the dog whined, wagging his tail with delight at the words of approbation.

In New York, they dropped Wylde at the Greene apartment, then went ont to the building where the Flagg penthouse apartment was located.

As Jan entered the spacious rooms that were now to be her home, she looked about her with unfeigned interest. It was just the type of home she had imagined her father would have. Roomy, simple, and beautifully furnished.

She faced him with her whole face alight.

"Home!" she exclaimed softly. "Daddy, I'm home!"

And the light in his blue eyes told her that nothing she could have said could have made him happier than those three words, "Daddy, I'm home!"

She was delighted with her own room. It was not as feminine and dainty as her sister's, but lovely in its simplicity. She learned that her father had had it specially furnished and decorated for her.

"It's plain," Ivonne said, "but Father was sure that you'd like it."

"He was right," said Jan. "Yours is lovely, for you, but I'm not used to all those frills. You go in for the froth and fluff, Ivonne, and leave the plainness to me."

She went into her father's arms again.

"Dear Daddy, I'm going to be very happy here!"

It was not many weeks, however, before Ogden Flagg began to wear a worried expression on his face. Jan, he could see, was not happy. The thrill of shopping, of pretty new clothes, of theatres and parties, was wearing off. She seemed restless and bored.

Finally, one afternoon, as she was driving him into the country for a round of golf, he took the bull by the horns.

"You're not happy, Jan."

"Not unhappy—just restless."

"What do you want?"

"What would I be doing if I were your son?" she asked suddenly.

"College?" he answered quickly. "Is that what you want?"

"No, Daddy, I don't want college. I want work. I've been practicing my shorthand, taking notes from radio addresses. I've got back my old speed."

"I don't want you to work, Jan —there's no need."

She raised her eyebrows, her eyes on the road ahead as her foot pressed down a little harder on the accelerator.

"But," her father went on. "if work will make you happy, there is a need." He watched her profile. "I can't let you go now, Jan—I've grown to depend upon your companionship."

MARRIAGE NOTICE

WILDER—GARRISON — On Monday, May 29, 1939, at the Alliance Church, Oakland, California, by Rev. Dyke, Beatrice Gustena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Garrison to Richard Dixon Wilder, son of Mr. Geo. Wilder and the late Mrs. Wilder. On their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Wilder will reside in Oakland, California. j6-1t

Mr. Elmer Scott spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Scott, Lindsay.

Mrs. S. Gummow, Oshawa, and Mrs. J. Anderson, Toronto, have returned home after visiting Mrs. Gummow's daughter, Mrs. E. B. Walker.

Miss Marjorie Doolittle, Reg.N., of Toronto, has accepted a position on the staff of the Shriner's Hospital, Montreal, and left Sunday evening to take up her new duties.

The graduating class of Belleville General Hospital was entertained at a theatre party by the undergraduate student nurses last evening.

Among the nurses who will receive diplomas at Hotel Dieu annual graduation exercises on Monday are Miss Catherine Josephine Trualsch of this city, who will be awarded the General Proficiency prize, Miss Agnes Ellen Reegan, Frankford, and Miss Mary Veronica Long, Trenton.

The many friends of Gena Branscombe (Mrs. John Tenney of New York), a native of Picton, will be interested to know that her new song "Canada from Sea to Sea", the words of which were written by the Canadian author Arthur Stringer, and the music by Glena Branscombe will be played in Washington during the visit of Their Majesties. It will be played by the United States Army Band and can be heard over the radio on Wednesday, June 7th on the CBS program from two to two-thirty when it will be the seventh number played, and on the NBC network on a program on Friday, June 9, from two to three when it will be the third number. This rousing new patriotic song has already achieved acclaim and popularity. It was played by the Coldstream Guards band from the British pavilion of the World Fair recently.

A delightful evening of fun and good fellowship was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Meades, Chatham Street, when they entertained members of the play "Look Who's Here" which was presenced a short time ago, in Christ Church Parish Hall, under the auspices of the Sunday School teachers of both St. George's and Christ Church. Mr. Meades directed the play which proved a success, the players all playing their parts very well indeed. The guests last evening included Mr. and Mrs. Donald Flindall, Harry Henley, Allan Bone, Misses Gladys Lummiss, Marion Topping, Evelyn Duncan, Eileen Staples. Tasty refreshments were served after which dancing was enjoyed the rest of the evening.

In honor of the graduating class of Belleville General Hospital, Mrs. George H. Stobie, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, entertained at a delightful tea at her home yesterday afternoon. Guests included the staff nurses of the Hospital and members of the Auxiliary, who had an opportunity of meeting the young graduates and extending congratulations and good wishes to them on their success. Mrs. Stobie received the many visitors. The spacious rooms were charming with Spring flowers of every colorful variety. The tea table was especially attractive with its centrepiece of irises and ivory tapers in silver candelabra. Mrs. W. C. Mikel and Mrs. Mackenzie Robertson poured tea and those who assisted during the afternoon were Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. G. A. Morton, Mrs. J. H. Forrester, Mrs. G. A. Freeman, Mrs. J. W. Imlah, Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn, Mrs. G. K. Graham and Mrs. R. G. Stafford.

Sh! Here Is Secret Of Poise

KATHRYN KANE

Always exhibits a charming personality

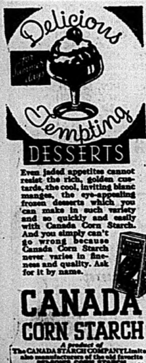
By HELEN FOLLETT

THE SECRET of poise and an air of distinction that sets a woman apart from the crowd is in mental training. No woman has poise who flies off the handle upon a slight provocation, who bawls out her husband before others, who is self-conscious or jittery. A little heavy thinking and any woman can learn a lesson in deportment every day, a lesson that will help to make her more charming.

If you have poise you don't chatter like a magpie; you listen when others talk, and your don't enter into the conversation until you have something to offer that is worth listening too. You won't relate the story of the movie you saw last night or tell about family illnesses or dwell upon personal matters which are interesting only to yourself.

It's not enough to look pretty, one must behave prettily, make one self agreeable, be affable. Charm is more compelling than good looks though there is no reason why a girl should not be both charming and a joy to the eye. Conversation has so much to do with charm that all of us should ponder on our manner of talking and what we say.

Charm is expressed in a smile, a twinkle of the eye, a movement of a hand. It is recognised by even the dumbest. It is as natural as the flowers of the fields. It is free of play acting, self-centredness, self-pity. If you haven't it, go git it!



Even jaded appetites cannot resist the rich, golden custards, the cool, inviting blanc manges, the eye-appealing frozen desserts which you can make in such variety and so quickly and easily with Canada Corn Starch. And you simply can't go wrong because Canada Corn Starch never varies in fineness and quality. Ask for it by name.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Father's Day . . . Write it in Your Heart

The most charming woman I know, when she introduces her father, says the words, "This is my father", with such affection and such radiant pride that it is a heartwarming experience to watch her. The warm inflection of her words seem to say, "Behold this is he . . . . . my father."

It is as if beautiful banners were suddenly unfurled. The spiritual banners that are the salutation of one fine human being to another.

"Behold this is he . . . my father" —eloquent words for the theme of Father's Day. The story that we tell in the way in which we pay tribute to another human being reveals our own quality. These two lines say it perfectly:

"Two men looked out from prison bars.
One saw mud, and the other saw stars."

Those of us who scoff at the suggestion of observing Father's Day or Mother's Day or Memorial Day or any other anniversary of the heart, who prate about the fact that there are already too many holidays . . . . . these are the ones who "see mud". And, moreover, these are the ones who do their disagreeable best to "muddy" the ideal of the great-hearted men and women who have worked so generously for our greater awareness of the things of the heart and spirit in today's world, a world so sadly in need of this awareness.

Then there are the others of us . . . . those who see where stars are to be seen. And there are stars, bright ones, in the day we mark as Father's Day. Choose your own star for your remembering, hitch your wagon to it and pleasantly mark the day in the way you find most fitting. Make what you do and what you say "the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace".

On a good day, good words should be spoken.

Courtesy Tip

I've always loved this old nursery rhyme . . . . do you remember it?

"Hearts, like doors, will ope with ease
To very, very little keys,
And don't forget that two of these
Are "I thank you" and "If you please".

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

FATHER COMES INTO HIS OWN

There's a single guest of honor at a great country-wide feast. The guest is the American father. Father isn't used to it. It gives him a queer, happy feeling. Is he really being so conspicuously honored, just because he's a father? He can hardly believe it, if he does deserve it. Are you sure you've done your part?

Modesty is characteristic of this American Father. Nobody asks so little and gives so much. What he gives is, in fact, his whole life. And in return, he has—what?

Well, sometime he has children who are affectionate and attentive. Who joy in sharing and doing things with him. Who love him and tell him so. This is all that Fathers warm heart desires. It's a complete reward. He's happy and his life is justified.

But children sometimes forget. Even good children.

They're distracted by school duties or youthful gayeties. A new job demands a big amount of time and thought. They've just married and the old bonds are slackening just a little. "Father? Why he's all right, isn't he? He's always all right. When we get a chance we'll call him up or something. But there's so little time".

Father's busy, too, year in and year out. He has to be. But he never forgets. Not for a second does it ever slip his mind that Junior is not only the pride of his life, but an extremely remarkable young man in every way. "That boy will show them some day!" And his feeling for young Jane, who, of course, couldn't possibly be as beautiful and sweet and gifted as he thinks she is, is nothing short of adoration.

Very likely these youngsters have a rather clear idea of their father's regard. They may consider that Dad is compensated merely in having such marvelous children.

Their egoism often goes farther than this. Youth goes in for a good deal of self-worship, nowadays; some young people believe that youth is the only worthwhile time of life. Fathers have had their day. They can't expect to have time spent on them.

Fortunately there are many of young men and women who have a natural feeling of love for their father. But they're often shy and backward about telling him so. In almost every family, Father has never been as close to the children as Mother has been. It may not be natural that for that reason they should love her more. But it is certainly natural that they should show their love for her more plainly And they usually do. They don't understand that Dad is love-hungry too—that he needs spontaneous affection to make him feel he isn't a failure.

From the moment that Mother laid aside her wedding finery and Father proudly started in to do things with hammer and nails to that first new cheap, shiny little flat of theirs, Father has devoted all his energy, brains, money and love to his family.

Shouldn't families at least show that they're aware of him? Should not they, if only once a year, do everything possible to make him understand that they are proud of him, that they cherish him in their inmost hearts and that they would not have any other father in the universe?

Which is, I'm sure, exactly what they want to do.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Recently we studied the growth and development of children when they reach the stage of adolescence. This period, a time of very great change in the individual, is a good time to take stock of the child and see how he is developing, for it isn't too late to make a change if you find that development has been in the wrong direction.

A good intellect, a sound body and good habits may not work out to be a very useful purpose in the individual unless they operate together to make a harmonious unity. That is why we sometimes find a healthy, intelligent, educated person of good family who not only fails to be successful in business but seems to be getting very little pleasure from life as well.

This isn't a problem that can be solved by casual observation. It is a situation that often has its foundation in childhood, and is very complicated and involved. One of the most common causes of such failure is the attitude of parents. Another factor is the early experiences in a child's life which give him a false evaluation of his own relation to the world.

Such twists in nature aren't introduced into a personality over night. It is a slow, slow process—the effect of environment over a long period of years. We don't need to wait until the child reaches adolescence to discover impending danger of this sort. From the time a child is born, his habits and personality traits are in process of development.

Many people get the idea that one is mature when the adult state is reached. I think we should get farther if we considered anyone mature who knew enough, as we say, "to act their age". There are standards of maturity for almost any age by which we can judge people. Thus, if a three-year-old child wets the bed, refuses to eat unless his parents feed him, and insists on being rocked to sleep every night, that child is immature.

If you have a child of eight who needs help in dressing, who requires constant supervision and who sets up a howl every time his parents leave him, then he is immature. A thirteen-year-old who is irresponsible in school work and chores, who gets grouchy when he doesn't get his own way, is immature.

Just because a person becomes an adult in years doesn't mean he is mature. If he can't stand anyone with authority over him, is extremely selfish, runs away from difficulties, takes to the use of alcohol as a retreat, uses illness as an excuse, then he, too, is, immature.

At adolescence, the individual usually becomes more aware of his own immaturity because at that time he begins to compare himself with others of his own age and social setting. If, for any reason, he gets a feeling of inferiority when he makes this comparison, then the situation is serious, for once he adopts this feeling, his whole personality will become a lot harder to mould.

INDIAN PRINCESS TO CHANT SONGS

Princess Te Ata to Appear Before King and Queen at Hyde Park, Sunday

New York, June 6—(CP)— A throaty-voiced Indian princess will chant the songs of her people before King George and Queen Elizabeth next Sunday at the country estate of President Roosevelt.

Wearing a buckskin ceremonial costume of the Dakotas, of the type worn by Indian women more than a century ago, Princess Te Ata of the Chickasaw Tribe will appear before the Royal visitors probably during the after-lunch period in a program devoted both to Indian song and legend.

Like historic Pocahontas, who married a white man and was presented at the Court of St. James' in 1616, to King James and Queen Anne, the resonant-voiced Te Ata is probably the most distinguished Indian Royalty to meet Britain's King and Queen on this side of the water.

She too is married to a white man, Dr. Clyde Fisher, curator of Astronomy at the American Museum of Natural History. She appeare dbefore Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald when he was given a state dinner by the President at Washington in 1933.

"I have been asked to be at Hyde Park at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, but I imagine I won't appear in my prgoram until after lunch," she said today, adding she was deeply conscious of the honor done her in inviting her to Hyde Park.

"Royalty Meeting" Dress

Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the U. S. vice-president, is pictured in the summery garden frock and hat which she will wear to the British Embassy garden party in honor of the King and Queen. Their Majesties will visit Washington on June 8.

"King of the Turf"

The Cast

Adolphe Menjou	Jim Mason
Roger Daniel	Goldie
Dolores Costello	Mrs. Barnes
Walted Abel	Mr. Barnes
William Demarest	Arnold
Alan Dinehart	Grimes
George McKay	Murphy
Charles Sherlock	First Trainer
Eddie Chandlers	Second Trainer

A "Family Picture," Adolphe Menjou in "King of the Turf" which is now playing at the McCarthy theatre, is the sort of entertainment that all lovers of wholesome screen fare will be enthusiastic in their praise for the marvellous manner in which producer Edward Small has woven a father and son story of "Stella Dallas" greatness, into one of the finest race-track dramas ever to be made into a motion picture production. It brings to the McCarthy theatre the finest offering on their screen to date.

The action is fast, also the acting is tops, since you can always be sure of men like Menjou, Dinehart, Demarest, and Abel to get every bit of entertainment possible out of their roles, big or little. The racing scenes are as thrilling as could be, but most of all, all women will love the picture, for it paints a story of a mother who believes that nothing is too much to ask for the sake of her son's happiness. Likewise it shows the father up as equally heroic, if not more so. Therefore as written in the above top paragraph "Family Picture" we whole-heartdly recommend and urge all mothers and daughters, also fathers and sons to see "King of the Turf" a picture that will live in the memory of your heart, like no other film, of recent making, has ever done before. In addition to the above, the program also includes a hilarious Edgar Kennedy, twenty minute comedy treat, entitled, "Cuock Wise" and also radio's famed comedian Colonel Stoopnagle in an entirely new screen novelty entitled "Cavalcade of Stuff" which also is a comedy-scream.

Adolphe Menjou and Roger Daniel in a scene from "King of the Turf" which also features Dolores Costello and is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Love Affair"

Making their first appearance together as a romantic team, Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer have the stellar roles in "Love Affair" coming to the Belle theatre next, produced and directed by Leo McCarey, who was responsible for the academy prize-winning hit, "The Awful Truth" the current offering affords Miss Dunne her first straight dramatic role in several years.

Miss Dunne is cast as the luxury-loving fiancee of a wealthy business man who sends her on frequent trips to Europe to collect art objects for him. Returning from one of these missions, she meets Charles Boyer the notorious continental play-boy.

Although Boyer is also engaged, the shipboard acquaintance of the mundane couple quickly develops into a genuine romance that virtually sweeps them both off their feet. At a brief stopover on the Portuguese island of Madeira, the romantic influence of the picturesque background fuses their love into an almost invulnerable solidarity.

Boyer who has known only a caviar-and-champagne life, decides to prove himself worthy of this great love by a six-month romantic moratorium, during which he will work in New York as an artist. Similarly, Miss Dunne goes to work as a night club singer.

At the end of the period, they rush to the established meeting ground, the Empire State Building. Boyer arrives first, but his sweetheart meets with an automobile accident and is taken to the hospital.

Believing that she is permanently lamed, Miss Dunne refrains from notifying Boyer. She prefers that he suffer this disappointment than marry her, who would be a burden.

The plot development mounts to an exciting, heart-gripping climax, after the principals endure an interlude of personal sacrifice.

As the title indicates, romance has its day in "Love Affair," even unto the backgrounds. Seldom pictured Madeira Island, Manhattan and all its smart social rendezvous, and a first-rate Atlantic liner are settings which are at once breath-takingly beautiful and exciting.

Miss Dunne sings two numbers in "Love Affair," "Sing My Heart" and "Wishing." Maria Ouspenskaya, as Boyer's grandmother, heads the featured cast of this RKO Radio Picture which includes Lee Bowman and Astrid Allwyn.

"Twelve Crowded Hours"

Playing together for the first time, Richard Dix, starred, and Lucille Ball, featured head the cast in "Twelve Crowded Hours" announced as the associate feature.

Dix is cast as a cocky newspaper reporter bent on crushing a policy racket. It marks his first reporter role since the saga of the West, "Cimarron," one of his biggest hits.

Miss Ball is cast as a dancing instructress whose brother is sent to jail unjustly, as a result of one of Dix's newspaper stories. The hectic romance of Dix and the girl in the constant shadow of danger, is woven throughout the dramatic story.

Dix was recently seen in "Sky Giant" and "Blind Alibi," while Miss Ball's two previous films were "Beauty for the Asking," and "Next Time I Marry."

Produced by RKO Radio, "Twelve Crowded Hours," also features Allan Lane, Donald MacBride, John Arledge, Cy Kendall and Granville Bates.

Errol Flynn featured with Olivia De Havilland in "Dodge City" now showing at the Belle with pictures of the Royal Visit to Toronto

WILLIAM WALLACE

Stirling, June 6 (Special)— One of Stirling's oldest and most highly respected citizens passed away early Saturday morning, June 3rd, when Mr. William Wallace died at his home West Front Street following an illness of five weeks. Coming to Stirling from Carmel twenty-two years ago he will be sadly missed by many friends throughout the district. He was born in Rawdon Township being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace and was in his seventy-seventh year. Many floral tributes silently expressed the esteem in which he was held in the community. He was a faithful member of St. Paul's United Church.

The funeral service was held at two-thirty on Monday afternoon, June fifth from his late residence to St. Paul's United Church where service was conducted by Rev. W. J. Scott, pastor of the church. During the service the choir sang "In the Garden" and Mrs. Percy Hubble, contralto soloist of Mount Pleasant sang "Some Time We'll Understand."

Left to mourn besides his sorrowing widow, formerly Miss Florence Green are two daughters, Mrs. Ernest Lott of Hamilton; Mrs. Ernest McKeel, Campbellford; one sister, Mrs. Nina Cadman, Glendora, Cal.; there are also five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Pallbearers were Messrs. Claude Tucker, Archie McGee, George Richardson, Sidney Murphy, Chas. Scott and Harry Kellar. Interment was made in Stirling Cemetery.

Injecting Hemorrhoids or Piles

While examining recruits for overseas service, cases of severe varicose veins in the legs were rejected. Some were so anxious to go overseas that they underwent operation and were later accepted. Cases of varicose veins in lower end of large intestine—hemorrhoids or piles—were likewise rejected unless they underwent operation.

Today in the great majority of cases operation is unnecessary as the injection of these varicose veins in the leg or bowel usually brings about a cure in a few weeks. The injection method, while known at the time, had been discredited to a considerable extent because of the failure of the sclerosing or hardening materials to work properly.

Hemorrhoids or piles are particularly distressing due to their pain, bleeding, and itching, yet many suffer for years with them rather than undergo the expense, danger, and loss of time, made necessary by operation. However, operation is not necesary now in a large number of cases due to the skill of the surgeon and the effectiveness of the sclerosing or hardening solution which "dries up" the hemorrhoid.

Dr. Lynn Krouse, St. Louis, in the Journal of the Missouri State Medical Association says:

"There are three methods of procedure used in treating hemorrhoids; first, surgery, which is invaluable in certain types of cases; second, injection which has merited use in a large group of cases; and third, palliation—giving relief with ointments and suppositories.

From a group of 100 cases 75 were selected for the injection treatment, ranging in age from 16 to 86 years. The interval, between treatments was from five to ten days. Pain, bleeding and the protrusion (piles coming outside) improved following the first and second injections. All cases showed the general effect upon the individuals such as nervousness, lack of endurance, and emotional disturbance. The hemorrhoids returned in less than 10 per cent of the cases which is not as large a percentage as by operation.

It is not the hard laborers but usually the office group with irregular diet habits that are mostly afflicted with hemorrhoids.

Remember, some cases can only be cured by surgery, but there is a large number of sufferers who can obtain relief by this injection method, who could thus rid themselves with little expense of this ailment which, aside from its pain and discomfort, greatly depresses the entire nervous system.

'Oilers' Lead Softball Parade By Beating Cementmen 12-5 Juniors In Cellar, Losing 10-9

Johnnie Bawden Hurls Fourth Consecutive Win of Softball Season

SCATTERS 8 HITS

Citizen Juniors force Dracups Into Extra Innings Before Latter Wins in Hard-Fought Struggle

Definite possession of the top and bottom rungs of the Belleville Softball League was established in a double header played last evening that saw the Shell "Oilers" move into sole possession of first place by virtue of a 12 to 5 win over the "Cementmen" at Point Anne last evening while here in the city at the Flats the Citizen's Dairy juniors dropped into the cellar slot by virtue of a 10 to 9 overtime defeat at the hands of the Dracup "tiremen."

"Red" Townsend's juniors didn't go down without a struggle, however, as they came from behind to lead the "Tiremen" going into the ninth, but a questionable decision coupled with two lusty base hits in the tenth spelled doom for the courageous juniors as they lost in the tenth when Dracup's scored the winning run with only one gone. Down at Ox Point, however, Johnnie Bawden, hurling his fourth consecutive win of the year without a defeat, had little trouble in baffling the Cementmen and coasted in after his team mates gave him eight runs in the first three frames.

Dracup's Advance

Using two pitchers and practically all of their reserve strength, the Dracup 'tiremen' eked out a 10 to 9 win over the "milkmen" kids, but not before extra innings had been necessary. Dracup's scored six runs in the first three frames while the juniors notched four. Dracup's led going into the ninth when the Townsendites scored three runs as Mansfield, Yarrow and Mallory came through with timely hits putting the kids one up, but Hal Kemp's charges added another in the bottom half of the ninth forcing the issue into overtime. The juniors failed to score in the tenth while Barriage and Henn came through with the much-needed moneyed hits to win. Barriage with three hits, Henn and Hanna led the winners on the attack as Samain led the juniors with a trio of safeties followed by Mansfield who clubbed a homer and single.

The win elevated the Dracup's into fourth place leading the cellar positioned Juniors by a half game.

Kennedy started on the mound for the Dracup's, but was replaced in the sixth by Dracup. Carson hurling the ten innings for the losers.

The lineups:

Citizen's Dairy: Samain ss; Ethier 3b; Yarrow lf; Mansfield 2b; Mallory 1b; Goyer rf; Doherty c; Rogers rf Carson p; Graham and Hook.

Dracup's: Barriage 3b; Henn 2b; Philp and Sinfield rf; Pointer and Tuttle c; Hanna lf; Little ss; Lunberg cf; Biggs 1b; Kennedy and Dracup p.

Too Much Bawden

With Johnnie Bawden scattering eight hits superbly, Frank Sedore's Shell "Oilers" chalked up their fourth consecutive win in as many starts, when they won handily over the Point Anne nine last evening. Bawden struck out seven and walked two as he eased off to win with apparent ease. Wild in the initial frame, when he walked two batters, an error and fielders' choice gave Point Anne two runs, after the Oilers had welcomed Luffman with a trio of hits for three counters to open the pastime. The winners got men aboard in every inning, except the seventh and won going away. Whalen and Bennett were the only two homeaters to count more than one hit off Bawden, as they got two each.

Dickey led the Oilers at bat with four hits in as many tries for a perfect day at bat. Ronsky and Amo had three hits each and Bawden helped his own cause with a home run in the third. Every member of the winning nine collected at least one hit as the Oilers touched "Ding" Luffman for a total of 20 base hits. The victory places the Sedore-led team in sole possession of the league leadership and leaves Point Anne second.

The lineups:

Shell: Rowbotham c; Ronsky 3b; Bawden p; Sero ss; Moon 2b; Amo lf; Dickey rf; E. Green 1b and Whalen cf.

Point Anne: Genereaux cf; Whitehead 2b; Gaulin 1b; Green c; Whalen 3b; Scott lf; Bennett rf; Hutchings ss; Luffman p and Brant.

CELLAR-DWELLING TORONTO LEAFS AGAIN BEATEN

Bob Carpenter of Jersey City Turns in Four-Hit Performance

BISONS LICKED

Buffalo Suffers Sixth Straight Defeat at Hands of Orioles

(By The Associated Press)

Bill Terry probably would be bounced right out of New Jersey if he tried such a thing, but he may be able to find some aid for his faltering New York Giants' hurling corps in Jersey City.

During the past two weeks, for example, the Giants have had only three starting pitchers to go the route in 15 games. Over the same stretch the Little Giants have had 10 out of 15 starters on the hill at the finish. And that's probably one big reason why the Jersey Giants are second in the International League, only a game behind Rochester Red Wings, while their parent club is sixth in the National League.

Bob Carpenter turned in Jersey's third straight low hit performance last night as the Little Giants beat Toronto's cellar-dwelling Maple Leafs 4-1. He gave only four blows, struck out six and walked two for his fifth triumph of the season and the cub's fourth in a row.

The victory enabled the Jerseys to pick up a half game on Rochester and Newark's third-place Bears who were idle. In last night's only game Baltimore Orioles handed the Buffalo Bisons their sixth straight defeat, 5-3, behind the seven-hit flinging of Harry Matuzak. A freak play in the eighth started the Bisons down as Baltimore put on a three-run rally to win. Pitcher Al Smith walked Moore and when Lillard bunted past him, Al threw his glove at the ball. The umpire promptly invoked the rule allowing the base runners to advance three bases. That tied the score and Matuzak then singled Lillard home with the winning run.

The Syracuse-Montreal game was postponed because of wet grounds.

TONY CANZONERI CUT TO RIBBONS

Negro Lightweight Fighting Sixth Pro Bout Too Fast for Former Champ

Buffalo, N. Y., June 6—(AP)—Young Harris Blake, Buffalo negro lightweight fighting his sixth professional bout, cut Tony Canzoneri, former World's Lightweight Champion, to ribbons last night to win a 10 round decision.

Blake was too fast for the aging New Yorker and kept his jabbing left hand in Canzoneri's face most of the evening. The former champion's left eye was cut by Blake's sharpshooting left in the first round and in the third the negro opened another cut over Canzoneri's right eye.

Blake weighed 134 pounds and Canzoneri 140 1-2.

Howie Spence, 160 1-2, Niagara Falls, N. Y., drew with Steve Sloan, 162, Niagara Falls, Ont., in six rounds.

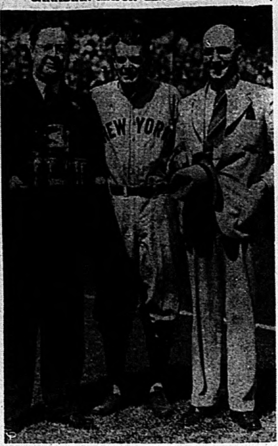
SIGNS WITH NEWARK

New York, June 6—(AP)— Hank Borowy, Fordham's right-handed pitching star, disclosed yesterday he had signed a contract with Newark Bears, No. 1 farm club of New York Yankees. Borowy, who won 23 games and lost only one during his two-year Varsity career, is expected to replace Marius Russo, recently recalled by the Yankees. It was believed Borowy received a bonus of more than $9,000 for signing.

TOURING SCOTS WIN

Vancouver, June 6—(CP)— The touring Scottish international soccer team scored a 4-1 victory last night over a Vancouver all-star eleven in a night game here before 4,000 fans. It was the Scottish team's sixth victory in seven games of their Canadian and United States tour to date. They tied against a New York team.

CANADIAN MAJOR LEAGUER HONORED



Performing in the best style of Canada's four major league ball players on the figures put into the records thus far this season, George Selkirk, ABOVE, born in Huntsville, Ont., 31 years ago, was honored by home town friends and fans when the New York Yankees, with whom he holds down an outfield post, visited Toronto for an exhibition game. George, currently well up in the American League home run race, is seen here with Harry Kelly, M.P.P. for Muskoka, LEFT, and Mayor Rice, of Huntsville, as they made their presentation on behalf of the northern Ontario town. The Yankee slugger, however, was unable to oblige by denting any fences.

Yankees Shutout By Bridges Of Detroit for First Time Since Browns Did It Year Ago

Detroit Hurler Allowed Only Four Hits and Helped by Two Homers

CINCINNATI IMPROVES

Reds Kick Three Giant Hurlers All Over Polo Grounds and Win 8-2

(By Bill White, Associate Press Sports Writer).

Detroit's Tommy Bridges is the big baseball man of the moment because of that four-hit 3-0 pitching masterpiece he turned in yestrday against the Yankees—the first time they have been shut out since the Browns did it June 18, 1938.

The downfall of the Yankees, their eighth loss in 41 games, added some fire to what coach Del Baker of the Tigers has said publicly—that he'd battle 'em to the last ditch and concede 'em nothing.

While Messrs. Greenberg, Higgins, Fox and Rogell—who produced all the Tiger runs, the first two via the home run route—were reviving hopes of making a race out of the American League, the siege guns of the National League—Cincinnati Reds—boomed ominously again.

As Bucky Walters limited New York Giants to seven hits. his mates kicked three Giant hurlers all over the Polo Grounds fashioning 16 hits into an impressive 8-2 victory. It was their 18th in their last 22 starts.

Allen Going Good

The second place American League Boston Red Sox couldn't solve the offerings of Cleveland's Johnny Allen, who scored a 7-5 victory by keeping most of those 13 hits on the scratchy side. Johnny got help from Earl Averill who banged out his first homer of the season who two aboard.

Otherwise in the American League, the third place White Sox took a cue from the three hit pitching of Jack Knott and whacked out a 12-1 victory over the none-too-agile Athletics. A couple of homers, by Gee Walker and Ollie Bejma, helped Jack to his first victory in five starts.

Washington and St. Louis Browns were idle.

National League

In the National League there were some other noteworthy happenings. Take for example the seven hit pitching exhibition put on by Brooklyn's Vito Tamulis which was good enough to pace the Flatbushers to a 6-2 win over the Pirates from Pittsburgh.

St. Louis Cardinals weren't treated any too well when Max West and rookie Eddie Miller helped themselves to three homers—West got two—and helped Boston Bees to a 10-4 victory.

Chicago Cubs were punched around for 13 hits by the Phillies and that was enough punching for an 8-7 victory. Larry French was charged with the loss—his first after four wins.

Bobby Britton Following Footsteps Of Famous Dad

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, June 6—(AP)—The son that Jack Britton never intended raising to become a fighter aspires to win the middleweight championship of the world.

The youngster is Bobby Britton, 21-year-old welterweight. His dad twice won the world's welterweight championship and fought with amazing success for 26 years.

Old Jack Britton's intentions for his son were the best but the youngster decided, at the age of 13, to fight for the fun of it just as his dad did in starting as an alley fighter in Chicago more than 35 years ago.

Young Britton was presented before a critical crowd of his dad's admirers at the Marigold Garden last night and dropped a close 10-round decision to Milt Aron, fighting son of a Dubuque, Iowa, Rabbi.

Britton was floored by a right hand smash to the chin in the second round for a count of nine but gamely got up, just as his father had done many a time, carried the fight to his opponent and won the praise of the crowd.

Old Jack, teaching his son the tricks of the game, doesn't boast he will become a great fighter, but he has hopes. He says the youngster is a fairly good puncher, a capable boxer and is game to the core.

"The boy likes the sport and that's the only reason I'm backing him up," the elder Britton said.

The youngster scales 146 pounds and is growing rapidly.

The father won the welterweight championship in 1915, lost it in 1917 to Ted "Kid" Lewis of England, regained it from Lewis in 1919 and retained it until 1922 when Mickey Walker knocked the crown off his head.

HOME RUN STILL BIG PAYOFF BLOW

Two Games in Canam Loop Decided by Four-Ply Swat

By the Canadian Press

The home run is still baseball's biggest payoff blow, ruining the hopes of many a pitcher who feeds the batters just one pitch too many. Rome Colonels and Ottawa Senators turned four-base hits to good advantage yesterday in winning Canadian American League encounters.

First baseman Eichenberger's homer with a man on base in the eighth inning was the measure of difference as Ottawa beat Gloversville Glovers 9-7 in a slug fest. Billy Southworth put one of Johnny Kane's offerings out of the park with a mate aboard in the eighth to clinch a 4-1 decision for the Colonels against Utica.

In the only other game, Amsterdam won its 12th straight at home, trouncing Cornwall Bisons 10-3. Home runs figured in this victory too as manager Sawyer and centre fielder Harbin of the Little Yanks drove balls over the right field fence.

Ottawa got only 11 hits off two Gloversville pitchers while Davis gave up 13 but the Senator hurler tightened in the pinches and the visiting team pulled through with the victory. Glovers rallied for one run in the ninth and had the tieing runs on base but Davis forced two batters to hit to the infield to end the game.

Joe Butsko gave Utica only five hits but Colonels didn't get very far on the 12 blows they made off Kane until the late innings.

Both pitchers were wild in the game at Amsterdam, Melvin Queen giving Cornwall nine bases on balls in addition to six hits and Paul Veach passing six Little Yanks batters. The victory boosted Amsterdam to within a half game of the first place Oswego Netherlands who were idle.

Today's games: Ottawa at Gloversville; Cornwall at Amsterdam; Rome at Ogdensburg; Utica at Oswego.

DAVE CASTILLOUX DEFEATS BAGNATO

Wins Canadian Lightweight Crown by Punching Out Clean-Cut Victory

Toronto, June 6 (CP)—If Dave Castilloux looks over his latest birthday presents he may find one tagged "from Dave himself."

The sharp-hitting Montreal fighter, who was 22 years old yesterday, won the Ontario Athletic Commission's recommendation for the Canadian lightweight crown last night by outpointing Joey Bagnato, Toronto. Approval of the Canadian Boxing Federation, considered a mere formality, is needed before the crown is officially his.

The Federation recently named Castilloux, who already holds the featherweight crown, No. 1 and Bagnato No. 2 challenger for the title forfeited by Maxie Berger of Montreal when he failed to make the lightweight limit in New York appearances.

Castilloux proved their choice correct as he hammered the Toronto Italian for nine of the 10 rounds in the main bout of a boxing program here. Bagnato won the final session after being down for a count of nine in the previous round when the colorful French Canadian held his fire. More than 5,000 fans cheered Bagnato's game display and Castilloux' sportmanship.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

A full generation has come and gone since Belleville first entered the Ontario Baseball Association wars and won its initial senior provincial diamond title in 1919. It was just 20 years ago this week that the first C.O.B.L. game was played in Belleville, after the old Grand Trunks had opened the season at Cobourg. Much water has passed under the bridge since the first O.B.A. ball was played in Belleville until today we find the offsprings of some of those players of yesteryear rapping at the city's sports doors. As we recall it Belleville was at first rejected as a member of the Central League, but when Bowmanville refused to accept the drafted schedule of games in 1919, the old Grand Trunks of Belleville under Tommy Fegg accepted the Bowmanville end of the schedule and therein lies the secret of how Belleville got into the league in the first place.

In 1919 the C.O.B.L. was composed of Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Peterboro, Lindsay and Belleville. The league continued to flourish until it reached its pinnacle in 1923 when nine teams were included in the league, there being two groups. Clubs from Leaside, north of Toronto to Kingston in the east and Lindsay in the north composed the loop that year. However, glancing back over the lineup of the Belleville Grand Trunks of 20 years ago today we find Joe Kelleher the pitching-third baseman of the Trunks, now has a son pitching for the Belleville intermediates. Peeney Mills' son Jimmie is a big factor in the baseball business up around the East End play grounds while Walt Gerow's son, Walt Jr. is playing under his dad's tutoring at Napanee. Harry Pringle's son, Reg. turned his thoughts to hockey while Allan Meagher's twin boys are making their mark in the Ki-Y ball circles. As for the offsprings of the other members of Belleville's 1919 O.B.A. champions, we cannot say with any degree of certainty, but we do know that Alex Weir was mascot that year, but now has retired from active participation in sports.

Alex Weir once told us he was the youngest player ever to play in the C.O.B.L. "Walt Gerow put me into a senior game at Lindsay one day when I was only 14 years of age." revealed Alex, who never played junior or intermediate ball, he went straight to the old Nationals from his chore of bat boy. We wonder where the members of Belleville 1919 champions are today. Fred Goyer is in Guelph, we believe Doug Simmons is in Brockville, Al Morden in Hamilton, while goodness knows where Manager Tommy Fegg is watching baseball games today, while Purtelle has not been heard of for years, he was a spare pitcher. Harry Whalen, Wicky Ross, the two Mills' boys, Cap Smith, Jack Casey, Joe Kelleher, Allan Meagher, Vern Weir and Harry Pringle are still in Belleville while as stated before Walt Gerow is in Napanee and that takes in the complete list of players who took part in C.O.B.L. games for Belleville in 1919. After this short period of reminiscing we'll now look into the future, because tomorrow the Belleville ball club goes to Picton for a Bay of Quinte League game, which may be referred to 20 years from today. Who knows?

The big softball bang of the season proved to be nothing but a squib last night when the Oilers beat the Cementmen 12 to 5. For the fourth consecutive time this year the answer was —"too much Bawden"; even if the Oilers clipped "Ding" Duffman for 20 base hits. Of course after the Oilers moved out into easy sailing in the third it was easy for Bawden and his team mates, as a winning team always looks the better, so now we'll have to wait for the next big tussle, which is slated for Friday night when Corbys clash with the Oilers. In their last meeting the Oilers cooled Chuck Barnett's coffee to the tune of 10 to 2, but we hear there's been a shake-up in the ranks of the Corbyville squad and their long-range guns are aimed directly at Bawden and the Oilers. Skipper Frank Sedore of the Oilers set out to win his first five games of the schedule and they've succeeded in getting four in the bag without much trouble.

Over at the Flats last night it was no walkover for Hal Kemp's "tiremen" as the Red Townsend's juniors chased Dracup's into overtime before they lost. The fiery sorrel-topped Townsend shouted "robbers, thieves and Jesse James" at the umpires last night as he claims his kids were given the short end of the business when it came to close decisions. The juniors did come through nicely in the ninth to take the lead as Mansfield, Yarrow and Mallory came through with moneyed hits, but Carson seemed to be weakening in the overtime as the Dracups touched him for a couple of hard drives after ten innings of hard fought softball. It was a tough struggle to lose, perhaps more so than to win.

Apparently the fight fans are not warming up to the Galento-Louis fight as quickly as Promoter Jacobs would like to see the shekels roll in. However, the publicity ballyhoo will soon hear the drums beating loudly and the usual New York fighting crowd will be on hand to see the slaughter, and it won't be the dusky Louis, who'll be bouncin'.

Here and There—Goody Rosen slapped the first pitched ball for a home run as the Dodgers won 6-2 over the Pirates yesterday... The Reds won and the Cards lost thus extending the lead of the Cincinnati Redlegs .... Flash, spot news and stop the press — 'Yankees are beaten'; believe it or not little Tommy Bridges hurled a four-hitter as the Tigers beat the Yanks for a change yesterday, score 3-0; a shutout for Bridges Selkirk got one of the four Yankee hits, however... Understand Nicky Sero will join the local baseball squad tomorrow at Picton thus bolstering Bud Wilkins' inner works considerably....Charley Henrich, 20-year-old brother of Yankee Tommy Henrich has been signed by the Canton club of the Central League.

GLEN ROSS IS WINNER BY 16-2

Canal Boys, Champs of Last Year, Put on Slugging Bee

Stirling, June 6 (Special)—With interest gaining momentum in the Rawdon Softball League, an increasing number of fans are attending the games and offering their favorite team plenty of enthusiastic support. 1938 champions of the loop played up to their regular form on Friday night last, when on their own park they swamped Springbrook 16-2. Going on a slugging spree from the opening of the game they clicked for four runs in each of the first four innings. Gerry Pyear homered in the first bringing two men and "Russ" scored an extra run on his homer in the fourth. Springbrook gained their runs, one in the third and one in the fourth. Russ Pyear turned in his usual stellar performance on the mound for Glen Ross. Gerry Broadworth did the tossing for Springbrook and seemed to have an off night. He was replaced by brother Don for the final inning.

In spite of the very overbalanced score of this particular game it is generally believed that the League is more evenly balanced from the standpoint of individual team strength this year than ever before and real close contests are looked for.

The teams:

Springbrook—B. Robinson, 3b; A. Holland, l.f.; Gerry Broadworth, p; D. Broadworth, s.s.; M. Gibson, 1b; R. Bailey, c; C: Thompson, 2b; Reid, c.f., R. Heath, r.f.

Glen Ross—B. Hagerman, c; R. Pear, p; R. Conley, l.f.; H. Brown 2b; J. Brown, 3b; Gerry Pyear 1b; A. Fraser, s.s.; E. Grills, r.f.; A. McDonnell, c.f.

KI-Y LEAGUE

Chalking up their third consecutive victory in as many starts the "Big Shots" eked out a 10 to 9 win over the St. Mikes "Irish" at Queen Mary School grounds last evening. The green-clad Irishers battled the Big Shots strongly, but faded as the winners swung potent bats in the last two innings to win. Terry McCabe handled the game as chief umpire.

The remaining two games played were in the Midget series, when the Score-getters again tasted the bitter pill of defeat at the hands of the Teef Benders, the score being 25 to 7 in favour of the latter nine. The game was played at Queen Victoria school grounds with Ross Clare acting as chief umpire.

At Queen Alexandra school grounds the Flying Arrows upset the good plans of Coach Bill Dennis' East End midgets as the Arrows literally flew into a 24 to 17 win over the East Enders. The game was marked with prolific hitting on the part of both nines. Jerry Bonisteel was the umpire.

$50,000 DAMAGE FROM BUSH FIRE

Parish Church, Priest's Home and Five Houses Burned at St. Esprit

Rimouski, Que., June 6 (CP)—Authorities here waited today for resumption of telephone service with the backwoods hamlet of St. Esprit, 35 miles away, so they could obtain a full account of the damage by a rampaging bush fire. Rough estimates placed loss at more than $50,000.

The fire, which destroyed the frame parish church, the nearby home of the priest, a sawmill and five homes, occurred yesterday but first word of it came last night after some villagers drove here over country roads when they were unabe to get word here by telephone. Villagers said a small fire in a clearing spread to the bush and then advanced on the hamlet where there are about 200 families.

Rev. Albert Lamontagne, parish priest, estimated damage to the church and his residence at about $20,000. The Senelier Wood Company, which operated the saw mill, valued the mill at $15,000 and said its tota loss through lumber and other property destruction would be $50,000. Value of the five homes burned was not given.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, June 6 (Special)—Arrival of a number of the new Oxford twin-motored R.C.A.F. bombers is anticipated at the local station shortly, and the two now here are being used constantly in training so that a greater number of qualified pilots for these big planes may be available. At the present time only a few of the local pilots are qualified to handle these big bombers, and since Trenton has now become the advanced training station for the R.C.A.F. more and more of these will be pressed into service. Motorists who crane their necks as they drive along No. 2 highway will shortly be rewarded with some further diversion, when a dozen or more of these Oxfords and a number of fast, modern pursuit planes get into service here.

One hundred members of the R.C.A.F. guard-of-honor left Trenton early on Saturday enroute for Niagara Falls and Hamilton and other points through which the royal tour will take Their Majesties within the next day or two. Other groups, totalling about four hundred will leave the air station on Tuesday to be in Niagara Falls on Wednesday. When that is done the majority of the airmen are looking forward to a long week-end with leave extending from Thursday night to the following Monday.

Church Parade Mooted

Plans are being made for a church parade next Sunday of troops of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment situated locally to the Salvation Army Citadel. A visiting Salvation Army band is expected here on that occasion.

Some time ago when merchants along the busiest portion of Dundas Street on the north side were looking for a means of ingress and egress to their stores, they were unanimous in the decision that the single alleyway between the Selrite store and the Couch & Newton store was not sufficient for their needs. Accordingly they arranged to buy a right of way to their properties from the rear from Elgin Street, and this was done and the new road runs just alongside the Salvation Army Citadel. Now work has been completed and the lot adjacent has been cleared of trees and shrubs and has been filled with gravel and clay, and is being used at present as a diplay site for used cars.

Tear Down Building

Workmen are busily engaged in tearing down the antiquated and out-dated old Grand Trunk freight office building on the corner of Ridgeway and Division Streets at the Market Square, and the several tenants, who have borrowed the old place in which to live, are somewhat indignant about the whole thing. Citing it as an example of unconscious wit, a local man tells a comical happening there a few days ago when a local resident asked the eight-year-old son of one of the families if they were going to move. He said he guessed they were, and said his dad had made arrangements to rent another house only to find that no children would be allowed there, "so Dad said he didn't guess he'd shoot me just to satisfy the landlord, and so we've gotta look for another place."

First Anniversary Of Moral Re-armament Observed By Leaders

Washington, June 6. — The President of the United States and a former Governor-General of Canada, Lord Willingdon, were among the numerous leaders who sent messages recently to the National Meeting for Moral Re-Armament held in Constitution Hall. The gathering, sponsored by five Cabinet Ministers, nearly a third of the Senate and other notable figures in the Capital, market first anniversary of "M.R.A.", the world program introduced by Dr. Frank Buchman at a birthday party given for him in West Ham town hall in the East End of London.

President Roosevelt's message read: "The underlying strength of the world must consist in the moral fibre of her citizens. A program of Moral Re-Armament cannot fail, therefore, to lessen the dangers of an armed conflict. Such moral Re-Armament, to be highly effective, must receive support on a world-wide basis."

Several of the English Labor leaders who had been Dr. Buchman's hosts a year ago were present for the Washington gathering and there were cables from all parts of the British Isles. Twenty-three members of the House of Lords, including the Earl of Athlone, the Earl of Strathmore and Lord Willingdon, wired: "Unity and peace, whether national or international, can grow only amongst men and nations who become spiritually equipped with faith and love. The responsibility before God rests upon every individual man and woman, with us and with you, that they answer to this call."

More than 200 members of the British House of Commons, including Anthony Eden, joined in a message which said in part: "We join you in affirming our loyalty to those moral and spiritual principles which are more fundamental than any political or economic issue and which are the common heritage of our people. Only if founded on Moral and Spiritual Re-Armament can democracy fulfil its promise to mankind, and perform its part in creating a mutual understanding between nations and restoring peace to the world."

Leader of America's wartime armies, General John J. Pershing, wired the meeting's sponsors as he sailed from New York for Europe: "This Moral Re-Armament should enlist the support of all thinking people. There is a spiritual emotion which underlies all true patriotism, and good citizenship itself is dependent upon the high sense of moral obligation of the people. Today, confronted by conditions so threatening to world peace, we must rededicate ourselves to the faith or our forefathers if we are to be worthy of our heritage."

The urgent need of the present, the restoration of confidence in business, was touched on by outstanding figures in British business, including P. H. W. Almy, President of the Rotary International of the British Isles; Ernest Broadbent; President of the National Chamber of Trade; and Henry Morgan acting President of the London Chamber of Commerce. "Realizing that the true function of industry, commerce and trade is to supply the material needs of mankind," they cabled, "we desire to co-operate with you to abolish economic warfare, to establish the standards of Moral Re-Armament in commercial transactions, to restore confidence to the machinery of business and thus to build on sure foundations a saner and kindlier world".

This morning a great M.R.A. birthday party linked Washington, London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, and Belfast in a five-way trans-Atlantic telephone hook-up. Fourteen hundred people in the East Ham Town Hall, and two thousand in the boxing arena across the street, listened in while Dr. Buchman announced that Armistice week-end would be "the focal point for Moral Re-Armament throughout the world — a time when all nations may pause to listen and every man be taught by God".

tion to the King and Queen. Children started milling around the platform at the station at daybreak. First special trainload of children, with more than 1,000 aboard, arrived at 10.20 a.m., E.D.T., from Huron County points.

Highway traffic officers reported in mid-morning that traffic was pouring into the city while throngs gathered at the railway stations between here and Kitchener, hoping the King and Queen would be on the platform as the royal train passed.

The Stratford visit was timed for 4.20 p.m., E.D.T., but it was an all-day celebration in the city and its 70,000 visitors from the rich farming counties of Huron, Perth and Bruce.

Windsor

An increase of 25 to 30 per cent in traffic through the port of Windsor over the average week-day was reported by immigration officials today.

Spurred by the visit of the King and Queen to Windsor tonight, automobile and bus passengers started pouring in late last night and facilities early today were extended to about the usual week-end level.

By 8.30 p.m., E.D.T., when the train pulls in at the station for a 15-minute stop, Windsor's population is expected to be about 500,000—five times normal. By mid-afternoon immigration people predicted they would be passing 30,000 persons an hour from Detroit to Windsor.

A score of marathon sitters obtained best positions for viewing the reception ceremonies at the station. They took up positions during the night. Several brought comfortable chairs and enough food to keep them going through the day.

HYSTERIA REIGNS AS REFUGEES' SHIP DRIVEN FROM CUBA

Refused permission to land 915 Jewish refugees from Germany at Havana, Cuba, the Hamburg-America liner St. Louis sailed from Cuba, RIGHT, to cruise in the Carribean until some other port was made available for the landing of the refugees. Failing this the liner will sail back to Germany with its cargo of human misery. Many of the women refugees became hysterical as the St. Louis sailed from Havana and had to be restrained from throwing themselves overboard, LEFT. Cuban police boats followed the unwanted ship out of Cuban waters to pick up would-be suicides who have threatened to jump into the sea rather than return to Germany.

JAPAN PROTESTS RUSSIA'S ACTIONS IN MANCHOUKUO

"Immediate Discontinuance of Challenging Attitude" is Demanded

FILED WITH CONSUL

Tokyo, June 6—(AP)—In a protest to Russia after a month of intermittent border hostilities, Japanese-protected Manchoukuo today demanded "immediate discontinuance of this challenging attitude."

The protest alleged that invasions of Manchoukui territory precipitated recent clashes. Domei, Japanese news agency, in its dispatch from Hsinking telling of the protest, said the note was filed with Soviet Consulate General at Harbin.

Russians and Japanese exchanged artillery fire for three hours late yesterday near Changkufeng, scene of last summer's vest pocket war," said a dispatch from Hunchun to the newspaper Asahi, Changkufeng lies near the junction of the borders of Manchoukuo, Korea and Siberia.

Ashai's correspondent reported infantrymen charged near the end of the shellfire but were forced to from Japanese positions, leaving two bodies and carrying other dead with them. One Japanese was killed.

This report said that the Russians were building additional concrete fortifications.

This trouble spot is in eastern Manchoukuo some 1,600 miles from the Lake Bor region on the outer Mongolian frontier where other fighting has taken place during the past four weeks.

A Japanese officer, Captain Shiro Ocawa, arriving at Shiminiseki, Japan, from Korea declared the fighting on the Mongolian frontier actually was between Russians and and Japanese.

Robert Finds A Way

By JENNIE M'GRAW

As Robert entered the front door Myrl came in from the kitchen. Her fingers were sticky with dough, and her usually smooth brow was marred by a crease of impatience.

"Rob, will you just run down to the store and get me a small sack of flour? I'm making biscuits and I haven't enough to roll them out."

Robert's own brow creased now.

"Gosh, Myrl, I've had a hard day, and I'm tired. Can't you use something else to finish the biscuits? Baking powder, or cornstarch, or something? Or let 'em go and have bread?"

Myrl's frown smoothed as she laughed.

"No, Rob, I can't use anything but flour, not even talcum powder. And you would have to go to the store for bread anyway. I was making biscuits because the bread was all gone. I didn't know the flour was so nearly gone, too."

Robert turned wearily and went out. He stopped at the corner of the house to see if the car was out, but the garage doors were closed, and he decided that it would not take much longer to walk than to get the car and then put it away again.

As he trudged the five long blocks to the store he was thinking hard. Every evening that week he had gone to the store to get something before he could have his dinner. Eggs one time, bread another, steak a third. And two mornings he had gone after things before breakfast. On both these mornings he had almost missed his train to the city.

Thinking back, he could see that Myrl had been getting more and more careless about keeping supplies in the house. There seemed to him to be little excuse for it. She had the telephone and the car to shop with.

She drove down to the little suburban shopping centre nearly every day for other things, but she could not seem to find time to stock the larder. She was always meeting friends with whom to visit over sundaes at the soda shop, or she had an engagement for luncheon, bridge or tea.

Everything else about the smart little bungalow she managed beautifully but the groceries were always running out. Robert reflected wryly that it had become easier to send him to the store than to order over the telephone or drive to the grocer's. He had become a glorified errand-boy, whose meals were delayed until he delivered the groceries.

He made his purchases from Mr. Smithson himself, and after asking for the bread that he knew must be had for breakfast he leaned over the counter and talked earnestly to Mr. Smithson for several minutes. That gentleman looked astonished at first, but as Robert talked on he chuckled and nodded sympathetically.

"It's a go, Mr. Kern. There's a lot of 'em do that way".

"Six-thirty then Robert said as he turned towards the door.

He whistled cheerfully as he carried the flour home, and waited patiently while the biscuits baked. Dinner over, they went to the neighborhood movie.

As she turned out the living-room lights for the night Myrl remarked.

"You bought bread for breakfast, didn't you? I'd like a melon though. Will you run down to the store and get one in the morning?"

"Yes," promised Robert with a grin note in his voice that Myrl missed.

When the alarm tinkled at seven Myrl awoke and saw that Robert was up and gone. She decided that he had awakened early and gone out to the store without disturbing her. The coffee was just starting to "perk" when a flivver truck rattled up the drive and stopped before the kitchen door.

Almost before Myrl had time to wonder the door opened and Robert came briskly in with a melon. But such a Robert. He wore a big white apron, and a pencil was stuck jauntily over one ear. Myrl stared, dumbfounded.

"There's your melon, Mrs. Kern and a nice one it is. Now if there is anything else you wish brought later, I can take the order right now, or you may telephone if you prefer" and he poised and expectant pencil over a notebook.

Myrl had recovered her voice, if not her wits.

"Robert Kern, what does this mean? What are you doing with that apron and that truck?"

"Well" answered Robert, meekly. "I've got a part-time job with Mr. Smithson delivering groceries mornings and evenings. I've got so used to being a delivery boy I thought I might as well make it pay."

Myrl leaned against the table and laughed till the tears came.

"I get the point Rob. Take the truck and the apron back to Mr. Smithson and tell him I'll telephone an order that will break his truck down."

The delivery boy kissed her and departed, grinning. He had counted on Myrl's sense of humor and it had not failed.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, June 7

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EXTREMELY likely and exciting day is forecast by ruling lunar directions, although these bear augury of conflicting circumstances. There is sign of advancement, preferment or honors from superiors or those in high places, and there is a prospect of profitable new contracts. Oil pertaining to writings hhould flourish, with business promotions and advertising greatly accelerated. On the private side, surprising and devastating denouements may be expected, with romance and adventure possibly being affected.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of conflicting experiences. Promotion, dignities and tokens of favoritism from those in place and power are probable, as are splended new contracts and decisive business expansion. But on the domestic, social and emotional side of life there may be sudde crisis, disturbances and surprising adventures of radical effect on the destiny.

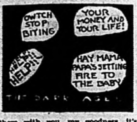
A child born on this day may have great versatility in either intellectual, artistic or business expression, and should attain distinction in professional lines. Its romantic or domestic life may need such solace.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, Willyum, do you realize that Europe is spending 20 million dollers a day for guns and cannons and battleships in other words just for rearmament?

I didn't know the exact figure, but I knew it was high enough to be ashamed of, pop said, and ma said, Eight hundred and 33 thousan dollers an hour, that's what it comes to by the hour, the statistics are right here in the paper, I wonder what it comes to by the minute.

I'm glad I don't know, it might really make me mad, pop said. Yee gods, half the population of the world is being deprived of the necessities of life just to make sure there will be enough bullets to fill their empty stummicks. If that's civilization I'll take the Dark Ages, he said, and ma said, And I'll take



OWTCH STOP BITING

HELP! HELP!!
HAY MAMA PAPA'S SETTING FIRE TO THE BABY
THE DARK AGES

them with you, my goodness, it's enough to make a person resign from the human race. All that needless expense for slawter and waist, I tell you Willyum it made me feel like a real peacemaker today when I bought that silver cream jug and sugar bowl this afternoon, she said.

Now what the dooce has a cream jug got to do with it and how the mischiff does a sugar bowl enter the picture? pop said, and ma said, Why, dont you see, the common people of Germany are forced to do without cream and sugar so the government can use all that money to pile up the ammunition still higher, so it seemed almost symbolical when I stretched a point and paid 16 dollers for the cutest little silver cream and sugar set, even though it was reduced from 22, it made me realize I was living in a free country.

A free country and a womans world, I'll see you later, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

WALL STREET

New York, June 6—(AP)—With sellers obviously timid, traders took a chance on the buying side of today's stock market and lifted leaders fractions to more than two points. Early transactions were exceptionally light and prices a trifle mixed. Near the fourth hour plus marks were around the best. Wall Street sentiment seemed to have taken a turn for the better mainly in the idea liquidation had dropped to almost zero.

Prominent on the upward swing were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Safeway Stores, Douglas Aircraft, Phelps Dodge, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Gypsum and Goodyear.

Lake Shore and International Nickel inched higher among Canadian shares while Dome dipped a small fraction. Most others were unchanged.

Steels took a new lease on life as the scrap metal at Pittsburgh was boosted 50 cents a ton and talk was heard of growing orders for steel products.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 6—(CP)— The Toronto Market today climbed out of the rut in the second hour and registered substantial gains around the noon period on increased volume, especially in the mining division. Volume picked up to show turnover of 196,000 by the end of the third hour.

Consolidated Smelters was prominent with a gain of 2 points to 44 and Nickel at 50 was up 3-4. Waite-Amulet gained 40 cents to 7.40.

Strong spots in the golds were Macassa, Kerr-Addison, Uchi, Preston, Central Patricia, East Malartic and others.

Utilities and foods were the strongest of the industrial groups and in the western oil list Home, trading in volume gained about 10 cents to 2.50 or better. Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton eased off 2 to 3 cents.

Toronto Butter Prices Up ½ Cent

Toronto, June 6.—With continued strength on the United Kingdom market, butter prices were given another fillip during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market, while cheese showed further improvement and eggs held unchanged, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Buyers stepped into the butter market with more confidence as English cables remained firm, and offerings cleared steadily despite the 1-2c per pound increase in the Ontario product. The odd sale went through in the early morning at 21 1-2c, basis No. 1 Ontario creamery solids, but prices soon rose to 21 3-4c and later advanced to 22c at which figure the market closed firm. Fresh receipts were arriving in fair volume, but they are still running behind last year. It was reported that there was some purchasing for storing purposes, while at the same time it was felt that there was a little speculative buying. Prints to the retail trace firmed in sympathy with solids, moving at 23c to 23 1-4c for top grades.

Although no price changes occurred on the egg market, a firm undertone was apparent on top grades, with demand centred on these grades. Graded shipments closed out the day at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium, 15 1-2c for B's and 15c for C grades.

Montreal Produce Improves

Montreal, June 6.—(CP)—Prices for most offerings gained ground in active trading on open produce market here, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized butter in wholesale jobbing lots made 22 3-8c. Receipts: 15 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese brought 11 cents a pound. Receipts: 927 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 1-2c to 22 cents a dozen for A-large, 19c to 19 1-2c for A-medium; 18c to 18 1-2c for B-large and 16c for C.

HOG QUOTATIONS

LONDONERS LINE MILES OF ROUTE

Bachelor - Mayor and His Mother Will Extend Greetings to Their Majesties

London, Ont., June 6 (CP)—Determined to get two glimpses of the royal train, if not of the King and Queen, Londoners lined up today along the route the travelling palace will follow on its way to Windsor through this city.

London's official welcome to Their Majesties will not come until tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock E.D.T., but because the royal train was to cross the city enroute to the Windsor reception tonight, London was stirred already with a great wave of anticipation. No official stop is scheduled and sightseers will be kept well back from the right-of-way by guards of police and Great War Veterans.

Tomorrow, with thousands from all through the district joining, the city will give a vociferous welcome to the royal couple. The Counties of Bruce, Huron and Elgin, not to be favored by a visit from Their Majesties, will join with London and Middlesex in boosting the city's population from 67,000 to an estimated 200,000.

ATTEMPTS TO RAISE ILL-FATED SUBMARINE FAIL, SEALING FATE OF 99 PERSONS ON BOARD

With a buoy in the foreground marking the exact spot where the British submarine, Thetis, lies under 130 feet of water, the naval air compressor ship, Camel, is shown lashed to the salvage tug from which divers went down to determine what best methods to use in a new attempt to raise the ill-fated submarine. All hope of saving any of the 99 persons trapped aboard the Thetis was abandoned when experts declared that chloride and carbon monoxide gases must long since have killed all on board.

This composite photograph, made up of an artist's drawing and an actual photograph of rescue vessels, graphically illustrates the desperate but vain, attempts of salvage crews to rescue the 99 men entombed in the sunken British submarine, Thetis, which sank to the bottom of the Irish Sea while on a trial run. Four men aboard the ill-fated craft succeeded in escaping by using the Davis lung.

FRANCO ASKED HITLER FOR AID EARLY IN WAR

Der Fuehrer Makes Disclosure to Men Back from Spain

LEGION THANKED

Berlin, June 6 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler disclosed today in an address to 18,000 erman fighters back from Spain that General Franco had asked him for help in the first month of the Spanish Civil War and "I decided to aid him".

A parade of the veterans before Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann oering was the first concrete indication of the extent of German help to the Spanish Nationalist cause.

The Fuehrer denounced anti-Franco campaigns in Great Britain and France, declaring that "for years French and English newspapers disseminated the lie that Germany and Italy intended to conquer Spain and to rob her of her colonies."

He thanked the Condor Legion for its "silent fulfilment of duty" in Spain.

In closing, Hitler said: "Long live the German people! Long live the Spanish people and its great leader, Franco, and the Italian people with its great leader, Mussolini".

REPUTED LEADER

approached them in front of the Michigan Central Railroad Station and took custody of Russall. McGarrity said he himself was "not wanted."

When the arrest became known, not made public. Officers insisted there was "nothing to say." Russell had been in custody six hours before word of it leaked out. He was arrested some time between 5.30 and 6 p.m. E.D.T.

When ther arrest became known, an Irish-American group here engaged counsel for Russell. The case was given Thomas Chawke, criminal lawyer, but neither counsel nor friends were permitted to see Russell during the night.

A Brief Interview

McGarrity would submit only to the briefest interview. He said he and Russell had known nothing beyond newspaper reports of the latter's contemplated extradition to England.

"We just laughed at it," McGarrity said.

The responsibility for the arrest meanwhile remained a mystery. Officers would not comment. The State Department at Washington said it had had no request for extradition.

McGarrity said Russell has been in the United States five or six week on a "legal passport."

When Russell was in Los Angeles May 31, the British Home Office was authoritatively reported to be considering efforts to extradite him. No charges were divulged. The contemplated extradition, however, was understood to be based on the bombings in England attributed to the I.R.A.

London, June 6 (AP)—The Foreign Office today said the United States' Government had been asked to keep an eye on Sean Russell, Irish Republican Army leader who was arrested yesterday in Detroit.

Officials declared, however, that no request had been made yet for his extradition to Great Britain.

EVEN THE WIRE DISAPPEARED

St. Clairsville, O., June 6 (AP) J—James Kaiser, to protect his orchard chards, fenced it with copper wire and charged the wire heavily with electricity. Today the wire was gone. How? That's what Kaiser would like to know.

"I'm going to bow to the King and then salute him," he said. "But Im just going to bow to the Queen because she's a lady."

Montreal Wants Winter Olympics

London, June 6 (CP)—Canadian delegates to the International Olympic Committee today expressed hope they could get the 1944 winter games for Montreal.

The delegates said they were using two arguments to persuade the committee to grant their request:

1. Montreal already is equipped completely to stage the games.

2. If the summer games are awarded to Great Britain the committee might as well make it an empire year.

Here to hear the decision, which probably will be given Friday, are P. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, president of the Canadian Olympic Committee, and William J. Northey, Montreal adviser to the Canadian committee.

Impressive Service Commemorates Landing Of U. Empire Loyalists

Bishop Lyons Conducts Service at U.E.L. Memorial Church at Adolphustown

Commemorating the 155th anniversary of landing of the United Empire Loyalists on the shores of Adolphustown, on June 16th., 1784, an impressive service was held on Sunday night in the Church of St. Alban the Martyr, better known as the U.E.L. Memorial Church at Adolphustown.

The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario was the special speaker and received a class for confirmation, presented by the rector the Rev. C. C. Brazill. His Lordship also dedicated the new electric lights recently installed in the church.

St. Alban's is an unusually beautiful edifice built in 1884 to commemorate the 100th Landing of the Loyalists. It was financed by parishioners and generously assisted by public subscriptions of Loyalists throughout the Dominion. It was erected during the incumbency of the Rev. Canon Forneri in whose memory there is a memorial tablet in the sanctuary.

The interior of the church is beautiful, with its lovely memorial windows and its several dozen plaques in a continuous band around the walls. These tablets are tributes to the memories of those prominent Canadians of Loyalist extraction, who at the time the church was built, contributed in no uncertain manner to the state and to the church. These tablets are of highly glazed tile work, and were assembled in Staffordshire, England. In the sanctuary are memorial windows to former rectors of the parish, including the Rev. Job Deacon, rector when the first Anglican Church was built on that site in 1823.

Rectors who have been in charge since 1823 (previous to that the district was a mission) are Rev. Job Deacon, Rev. J. Mulock, Rev. Canon Harding, Rev. Canon Forneri, Rev. Canon Roberts, Rev. C. Dickenson, Rev. H. Pringle, Rev. A. Strothers, Rev. C. H. Quatermain and Rev. C. C. Brazill.

'THIS IS STICKUP MAKE IT SNAPPY' AND $2,000 TAKEN

Lone Gunman Robs Dominion Bank in Heart of Hamilton Late This Afternoon

ESCAPES IN CAR

Hamilton, June 6—(CP)—A man who entered the Dominion Bank branch at the south-east corner of Gage and Barton Streets shortly before one o'clock today, showed a note through the cashier's cage, was handed $2,000 in bills which he put in a black bag, and fled in a car parked nearby. The note read: "This is a stickup; make it snappy."

There were no customers in the bank when the man came in. He was well-dressed, aged about 32, of medium built, about five feet, nine inches in height, and wore a light fedora.

A patch of adhesive tape under his left eye was noticed by the two employees in the bank, Sidney Easson, the cashier, and Frank Hollyoak, ledger keeper.

He sauntered casually over to the cashier's cage, and asked for 50 cents' worth of nickels. While Easson was counting them, he shoved the piece of lellow paper with the writing on it through the opening in the wicket.

Easson saw the man had his hand in his right coat pocket, as though he had a revolver.

"Hurry up," he warned the cashier. He was handed the money in ten, five, two and one dollar bills.

The man started toward the entrance, but on his way out wheeled around suddenly and headed back. He wanted his note back.

He carried a black bag open at the top and shoved the money in it as he went out.

J. W. L. Addleton manager of the bank was absent. He had stepped across the street to a drug store for lunch.

The car was said to be a new one and without licence plates.

New York, June 6 (CP) — Mayor Fiorella Laguardia, with a twinkle in his eye, professed complete inability today to understand why his 19,732 policemen needed 40,000 tickets for their families to see King George and Queen Elizabeth Saturday from especially selected vantage points along the Royal route to the World's Fair.

Then it became known that the city's 10,000 firemen and their families wanted to join families of policemen in the welcome, whereupon his honor indicated the problem had been clarified. A section of the two lane west side highway fom the Battery to 72nd street has been reserved for policemen and firemen's families.

MOTHER, CHILD ARE FOUND DEAD

Mrs. Sarah I. Morris and Daughter, Nora, Alleged to Have Taken Poison

Toronto, June 6—(CP)—Authorities will decide today whether an inquest is necessary into the deaths here last night of Mrs. Sarah I. Morris and her daughter Nora.

"We are considering the advisability of holding an inquest in view of several circumstances surrounding the double death," said Coroner C. M. Mooney.

A friend, George W. Robertson, found the 19-year-old girl lying on the floor in the kitchen of her home when he visited there last night. He took her to hospital where she died from effects of poison.

When police arrived, they found the body of Mrs. Morris, who celebrated her 58th birthday yesterday, in the bathroom. They said she apparently had drunk of the same mixture of poison and raw egg from which her daughter died, after joining the girl on the floor.

Won Beauty Prize

The attractive machinery company cashier, who won a prize for her beauty in a photographic competition in Montreal last autumn, left a note for her mother, sealed in an envelope. Police opened the letter, but did not divulge the contents.

Mrs. Morris, widow of a Hamilton physician, Dr. Irving Morris, had been living in Toronto with her daughter for several years.

"Nora was worried about her mother who had been suffering for two years," Robertson said. Other friends said the girl had been nervous since she was knocked unconscious by an unknown bandit during a robbery in March at the office where she is cashier.

Annual Report Of C.A.S. Issued

The annual report of the Children's Aid Society of Belleville, Hastings and Trenton, which has been issued in booklet form, is worthy of careful reading as it outlines the operations of the society. Besides containing the president's address and reports made at the last annual meeting, with the names of the elected officers.

The report of Superintendent T. D. Ruston contains facts about work from the standpoint of this officer who is brought into contact with the situation as related to the cases of children who require attention. This report makes an appeal for co-operation in the work, using the words on General Gordon's tomb in St. Paul's Cathedral, London. "He gave his strength to the work, his substance to the poor, his sympathy to the suffering, his heart to God."

Dear Margaret and John:—

Last winter when we saw and heard of the heroic efforts put forth by a certain young gentleman to reach the home of his lady love each Sunday, we were convinced that ere another winter arrived a new home would be established so that the gentleman would be spared such further hardships and the young lady such frequent anxiety. Therefore we were not surprised on Saturday to hear that you had embarked on the sea of matrimony.

As is usual in such cases—and we would not have it otherwise—we have gathered tonight to extend to you kindliest thought and sincere good wishes for many years of happiness together.

Margaret, most of us have watched you from babyhood to young womanhood in our neighborhood and have found you ever ready to help in our various activities. Especially will we miss you at our Ladies Aid where your nimble fingers and cheery disposition were such assistance. We trust that your husband will be able to spare you to continue your attendance frequently at our 'pot luck' dinners and that together you will often join us in our evening activities.

John, you are no stranger to us and we most sincerely congratulate you on the girl of your choice and we extend a warm welcome to you tonight. We are glad that your new home will not be far away.

On behalf of the friends and neighbors assembled tonight we ask you to accept these varied gifts, laden as they are with kindly thoughts. As you use each one in your new home may they remind you of those represented in this gathering.

Signed on behalf of Centre.

The president, Mrs. Everett Stratton, read the following verses in memory of our beloved member, Mrs. Ross Shetler, who passed away since the last meeting.

'Twas in the morning's early dawn
the Master walked among His flowers,
He touched the lilies one by one and took the one that was ours.
She had a nature you couldn't help loving, a heart that was purer than gold,
And to those who loved her and knew her, her memory will never grow old.
God knew that she was suffering and the hill was hard to climb,
So He closed her weary eyelids and whispered "Peace be thine."
Away on the beautiful hills of God in the valley of peace for fair
Some day, some time, when our tasks are done, we will meet our loved one there.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sea breezes! To get the best effect of these grateful breezes one must select his coast. They are most pronounced if the sea coast has hills or mountains for a background. Sea breezes are shallow, extending upward about 1000 feet. They depend upon a sharp change of temperature of the air from the surface upward. This is most pronounced after the heat from the sun has been acting for some hours, some time after midday when the soil is warmest, which in turn heats the overlying layer of air. In Jamaica at Port Royal, with the Blue Mountains for a background, the sea breeze is famous, said to be the strongest in the world.

HEADED FOR MARS FLIER INSISTS

Cheston Eshelman, Arrested for Larceny on Arrival on Land

Boston, June 7 (AP)—Still insisting he was headed for Mars, Cheston Eshelman, 22-year-old student flier from Carlisle, Pa., returned to dry land today only to be arrested for larceny of the airplane which sank when he was fished from the Atlantic, 175 miles from shore, yesterday.

"My only destination was Mars—the planet Mars," Eshelman grinningly told reporters aboard the police boat which took him from the trawler Villanova in the harbor. "I had no intention of flying to Europe."

"What were you going to do there?" he was asked.

"You've got me there," Eshelman replied.

Inspector Paul Crowley and Lieut. James Crowley handcuffed the youth, who had made only one solo flight previous to his unorthodox hop from Camden, N.J., Monday night.

Victims of Sub. Greeted First Hours Of the Accident with Laughter

London, June 7—(CP)— Stoker W. C. Arnold, one of four survivors of the sunken submarine Thetis, said yesterday the victims greeted the first hours of the accident with laughter.

"There was no panic," said the 29-year-old Arnold in an interview. "They were all calm and we all felt sure we should get to the top ourselves within a few hours."

Arnold and three others reached the surface with Davis lungs through an escape hatch. Ninety-nine men died.

"We dived about 1:30 p.m. Thursday, and then something happened about three o'clock," he said in giving the first detailed public story of how the men aboard reacted to the accident. "Her nose shot down, there was a rush of air from a forward torpedo tube, and there was shouting."

Arnold said that doors were slammed with difficulty against the incoming water, and then all aboard, from the highest naval experts to the lowest civilian, joined in discussing how was the best way to get out.

"Too Much Pressure"

Three officers and a crew member tried to get into the flooded compartment to open a suction valve and pump out, but, Arnold said, the pressure was "too much" for their strength.

With head bowed and his voice sometimes just a little above a whisper, the stoker said it was then decided to abandon the ship.

"Different jobs of work were done and we went up to the stern," he said. "When we were all there it was decided Oram and Woods (Cap. H. P. K. Oram and Lieut. G. P. Woods) should do their best to get out. They got into the (escape) chamber and away they went. We knew that they had gone because we could see the daylight shining in the water of the chamb-

Windsor Throng Augmented by Thousands from Detroit, Michigan

MAYOR PRESENTED

(By Chester Boughton Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Windsor, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Memories of a tumultous greeting to the King and Queen thrilled Windsor anew today but it took a lot of consoling to ease the disappointment of 30,000 school youngsters who at the last minute had to forego a promised close-up visit of Their Majesties.

Before the roars of the border city's international welcome had subsided, police and train authorities decided last night that the special stop at the children's stand on the way out of the city must be cancelled because of danger to the children's lives.

Their Majesties Travel Miles Thru Lines of Packed Humanity In Tour of Western Ontario

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Southwestern Ontario, bathed again in warm sunshine, cheered the King and Queen today as they moved through the rich fruit garden of the province toward a four-day visit in the United States beginning tonight at Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Crowds as great as the hundreds of thousands who welcomed the royal guests yesterday at the start of their two-day tour through the fertile agricultural section of the Province lined the royal route again today.

Excited throngs waited in sweltering heat for the King and Queen to pass through Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton and St. Catharines. The program began at London where the Sovereigns spent the night in the luxurious royal train after one of the busiest days in the tour to the Pacific Coast and back.

Ends at Niagara Falls

The day's schedule was to end with a 3½-hour stay at Niagara Falls before the royal train crosses into the United States. Thousands from both sides of the border thronged Niagara Falls for the visit, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. E.D.T.

After Canada surrenders its royal guests at the middle of the International Bridge over the Niagara River, the King and Queen will be greeted by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States. He will present them to State Secretary Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull at the old Niagara Falls, N.Y., railway station.

Yesterday was a revelation to Their Majesties, who found themselves in nothing less than a procession by rail. For 400 miles they paraded before throngs whose lines stretched almost unbroken from Washago, up along the Georgian Bay shore, through Toronto and down into Western Ontario to Windsor.

A hot sun beat down from a clear sky and the multitudes stood for hours, some for a good close-up look at the King and his beautiful consort, others for just a glimpse of the brilliant palace passing by. Scores fainted in the 80-degree heat and were treated in railway stations, in tents or beneath trees. But in all it was a happy holiday gauntlet Their Majesties rode smiling through.

Many In Shirt Sleeves

The King and Queen saw shirt-sleeved Canadian crowds for the first time and seemed to approve. Some of the people wore "pirate hats" fashioned from newspapers and others thought to bring along sun helmets or broad straw hats.

The Queen was so busy answering the acclaim she didn't change from her pretty pink costume to one of beige until the train drew near Windsor.

There never was a royal procession like this one. Four official and half-a-dozen unofficial stops were made. At each of the official stops there was the routine of civic presentations, but always there was the happy little unexpected incident aroused by the charm of Their Majesties themselves.

Boys from the brokerage houses and girls from the sweltering offices extended their lunch-hours at Toronto to scamper through police lines after the train, though there was no official welcome there. Then through Weston, Brampton, Georgetown, Acton and Rockwood the train crawled as the King and Queen got their first taste of Western Ontario hospitality.

Two Million View King

The first big, compact crowd of the 2,000,000 who saw the Sovereigns during the day was at Guelph, where the first official stop was made. There 50,000 or more saw the King and Queen accept pledges of loyalty and affection from Mayor W. G. Taylor in a setting close to the Park, where John Galt founded Guelph 112 years ago by cutting a tree.

Down the steps of the presentation stand Their Majesties walked to speak with war veterans. And William Humphries, 87-year-old blind veteran of the Fenian Raids, agreed after meeting them "It certainly was worth the labor getting down here for this occasion."

Among the most impressive gatherings of the tour were the great arrays from Galt, Preston, Hespeler, Elmira and all the surrounding district who pressed close to the tracks in the 30-mile run between Guelph and Kitchener. As he saw the rows stretch for mile upon mile the King had two moving picture photographers record for him this tribute while he and the Queen waved acknowledgment.

Scores Prostrated

Scores were prostrated in Kitchener's mid-afternoon heat but regained their vantage points after treatment to await the royal train's arrival. More than 100,000 were

Mine Sweepers Drag Bay Before Royal Trip Starts

(By John Hightower Associated Press Staff Writer).

Washington, June 7 (AP)— The minuteness of precautions for the safety of King George and Queen Elizabeth while in the United States was demonstrated today by a disclosure that mine sweepers would drag New York Bay before Their Majesties sail Saturday to Manhattan from Fort Hancock, N.J.

Elaborate instructions for the protection of the King and Queen at Fort Hancock, which they will reach by train from Washington, came from the second army corps headquarters at New York.

An anti-aircraft battery will move into position at the fort Friday, together with anti-aircraft searchlights and three sound-locators for detection of approaching aircraft. Three observation towers will be manned, in order to identify and report to headquarters non-duty ships near the shore.

Two 165-foot coastguard cutters and three smaller boats will begin patrolling the waters near the fort

Stanhope's Resignation Demanded By Paper

London, June 7 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today called for the resignation of Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, in connection with the loss of the submarine Thetis.

"It is the opinion of The Daily Express that Lord Stanhope has failed to give the leadership which the country demands of its ministers," the newspaper declared.

"He should have flown to the scene of the Thetis disaster to take command of the situation as well as to voice the sympathy of the nation."

The new submarine Thetis foundered last Thursday in Liverpool Bay with loss of 99 of the 103 men aboard.

Lord Stanhope told the House of Lords yesterday the public had not realized the difficulties of the rescue work and said fast-shifting tides made it impossible for divers to work efficiently around the sunken craft.

Swollen by gifts from the King and others of the royal family, a fund for relatives of the Thetis dead reach about £100,000 ($468,000). The King's contribution was £100.

THOUSANDS VISIT 'FALLS' TO SEE THEIR MAJESTIES

Steady Stream of Traffic Pours Over Bridges and Ferries at Fort Erie

PICNIC PARTIES

1500 Pupils from Fort Erie, Ridgeway and Stevensville to See King and Queen

Fort Erie, Ont., June 7 (CP)—A steady stream of traffic poured over the Peace Bridge and Niagara Falls ferries en route to Niagara Falls for the Royal reception to be tendered the King and Queen this evening. Many of the autoists from the Buffalo area planned picnic parties and carried provisions.

A party of tourists from lower California stopped at the Fort Erie Municipal Buildings to inquire the route to the Cataract City.

The day is a civic holiday in Fort Erie and already a large portion of the populace have left by motor to avoid congestion.

One hundred tickets thrown on sale for the special 15-coach train which will leave here at four o'clock over the Michigan Central were taken in a few minutes time for adult passengers. The remainder of the train was reserved for 1,300 school children from here, and 200 from adjacent Ridgeway and Stevensville.

FLASHING BULBS ADD TO STRAIN OF ROYAL TOUR

British Press Photographer Says Flash Bulbs Not Used in Daytime in England

HAVE ROTA - SYSTEM

(By R. K. Carnegie Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Aboard the Royal Pilot Train, June 7 (CP)—Despite the King's penchant for photography and Their Majesties' friendly interest in the press, continually popping flash bulbs must have added to the strain of the Royal tour, William Horton news photographer for The Times of London, said today.

If the King and Queen remained permanently in Canada, Horton said he is convinced some such system as that in force in the United Kingdom would have to be adopted.

"In London," he said, "we have a rota-system when Their Majesties make public appearances. Not more than three or four photographers are on hand and they supply shots to all requiring them."

"It would be too wearing," he explained, "if the Royal party were subjected continuously to so much photographing as they have had to undergo during this tour."

Horton, who is covering the tour for The Times, has been photographing Royalty in Britain for 16

King and Queen with Royal Party To Make Trip Underneath the Falls

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Ten brand new rubber mackintoshes and as many rubber helmets and pairs of high rubber boots, in assorted sizes, decorate a corner of the dressing rooms in Table Rock House.

They will cover the King and Queen and members of the royal party tonight when they go down into the vitals of Limestone beneath and behind the thundering cataract for the super-thrill of their Niagara Falls' visit.

The closed sign was up on Table Rock House this morning, while inside and outside the building put on its best dress for royalty. About the entrances dim lights were replaced; bright crowns and other insignia of high estate marked the decorations for the unprecedented occasion."

Marvel at Magnificence

Their Majesties will marvel, even as other visitors, at the magnificence and eternity of nature. Their tour will take them through 1,000 feet of dripping rock-cut tunnel, leading out behind the majestic arch of the roaring "Father of Waters." The portals lead to the very edge of the torrent, to clouds of mist rising from the swirling maelstroms beneath.

Here, after two days of long appearances before a clamoring Western Ontario people, the King and Queen will be almost alone and it will seem almost quiet while the waters boil and roar past them. Here, with four days of travel and reception in the United States ahead, Their Majesties will have full chance to look undistracted upon one of the world's wonders.

London, Ont., June 7—(CP)—A fresh and eager young London, set in the heart of Western Ontario, cheered King George and Queen Elizabeth on a four-mile drive today as Their Majesties made the first of seven scheduled royal visits to Ontario cities and towns.

Through streets lined with 200,000 residents of Canada's London and the surrounding district, Their Majesties rode smiling and waving from their motor car to the crowds that created a terrific din at every point.

The new London, far from home but quite as hospitable to Their Majesties as England's capital, obviously made a great impression on the royal couple.

King Concerned Over Soldier

The sun shone brightly from the time the King and Queen awakened in the royal train which was stopped overnight on a siding several hundred yards from the Canadian National Railways station. An hour before noon, when the train pulled in, the temperature was 76 degrees.

His Majesty, dressed in a Field Marshal's uniform, appeared greatly concerned when a member of the Royal Canadian Regiment, composing the Guard of Honor, was prostrated by the heat. The heat victim was Company Quartermaster-Sergeant Pannell.

All along the route and again at the station where more than 10,000 witnessed the departure for Ingersoll, Their Majesties waved and smiled continuously. The Queen wore a grey ensemble and a small flowered hat with veil.

Halt Before Veterans' Stand

An unscheduled procession halt was made in front of a stand filled with disabled veterans from Westminster Military Hospital largest of its kind in Canada.

While the crowds in the vicinity cheered the gesture, the King and Queen got out of the car and walked over to the veterans. They shook hands with several.

An old soldier from the hospital, standing stiffly at attention on the stumps of the two legs he lost in the Great War, listened attentively while an officer explained to the King how the man lost his legs. The soldier was Marc Ennon, a native of Finland, unable to speak English. The King and Queen shook his hand.

Pride in Bulldog Spirit

"I am pleased and proud to know that the British bulldog still can defend the Empire," James H. Watson, three times wounded in the war, told the royal couple who asked about his health.

London, Ont., June 7—(CP) — Standing at attention, 242 war veterans greeted the King and Queen in absolute silence as they walked through the station today to start their motor drive through the city. They broke into hoarse cheers when Their Majesties left the station.

Veterans of the South African War, the North-West Rebellion, the Fenian Raids and amputation and tubercular cases from the Great War were included in the group which lined the red-carpeted Royal path. Their Majesties spoke to several, the oldest Dr. Solon Woolverton, 95-year-old Fenian Raid veteran.

Edgar Hal lof London, a war prisoner in Germany with the Queen's brother, Hon. Capt. Michael Lyon, came on telegraphed command of the Queen. She said she would be "pleased" to remember him to her brother, now retired.

Police Blotter

While patrolling his beat early today P. C. Ellis found a man sleeping upon a bale of hay at the rear of Bishop's seed store. As the man who gave his name as Harold Sanders, no address given, was unable to give an accounting of his presence, Constable Ellis escorted him to the police station where he was detained until this morning. Upon questioning by Chief Kidd today, however, the man established his identity and assured the police he was merely a transient and was told to "get out of town".

With the exception of a man arrested for non-support, no serious crime was reported by city or provincial police during the past 24 hours, leaving the cell block available for ten transients who sought shelter in Belleville last night.

On the back of the envelope, at the bottom part of the flap is the inscription in French "Le Convoi Royal—Canada".

No other stamps or cancellations appear on the letters. Canadian postage to the value of six cents was used on each letter by Mr. Richardson.

Three Business Premises Robbed At Consecon

Intruders Steal Tobacco, Candy, Flour and Gasoline

A mild epidemic of robbery swept over the village of Consecon over the week end with robbers looting three business establishments before making a clean getaway.

SEES DADDY FOR FIRST TIME

Mrs. Grover Cleveland Bergdoll and three-year-old Vega take a boat for Governor's Island in New York harbor, where the child's father, convicted World War draft dodger, is being held prisoner. It was the first time Vega had seen her father, who recently returned to the U.S. from his voluntary exile in Germany. His family returned several years ago.

GEORGE FRASER GIVEN 3 YEARS

Sentenced for His Part of Robbery at Bradshaw's Mill, Tamworth

George Fraser, alias Harold Fraser who was arrested in Tamworth on May 28 last charged with attempted robbery, was sentenced to three years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary at Kingston by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in police court held at Napanee this week following the accused man's plea of guilty.

Fraser, and an accomplice who escaped at the time and is still at large, were surprised by employees of Bradshaw's flour mill in Tamworth as they were endeavoring to rob the company safe on Sunday, May 28 last. Armed with guns employees of the flour mill captured Fraser, but his accomplice escaped when he jumped through a closed window, cutting his arm as he fell. Fraser refused to divulge the name of his accomplice before being sentenced to the penitentiary by Magistrate Butler.

MINE SWEEPERS

Friday morning. At the same time hundreds of troops will search adjacent territory and clear it of unauthorized persons.

So minute are the precautionary arrangements that the soldiers detailed to the special duty will even be provided with head nets to protect them against poison ivy and mosquitoes.

In Washington the city fathers fingered an empty purse and looked with a regretful sigh at the gorgeous blossoming of flags along Pennsylvania Avenue in honor of the King and Queen.

All the money they had to spend on decorations went into the 600 red, white and blue banners and the British and United States shields being placed beneath them on the lamp posts.

The saddening note arises from a last minute turn of affairs which has given them another street to decorate—if they could.

For the benefit of the thousands who may not get a glimpse of Their Majesties in the initial procession, a sort of second parade has been planned, more or less as an after thought, from the White House to the British Embassy before tomorrow afternoon's garden party.

Instead of whizzing there with a motorcycle police escort, the Royal car will hold to a snail's pace over a route cleared of all traffic in advance.

It would be a fine thing, one official explained, if some more flags could be unfurled on this route, but he added that since the city purse is empty of decoration money, perhaps operators of the swanky shops along Connecticut Avenue will invest in bunting and banners.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE AND BARN IN P.E. COUNTY

Buildings on Premises of Dr. Vrooman and Donald Bongard Are Total Loss

ORIGIN UNKNOWN

Fire of unknown origin striking in widely divergent parts of Prince Edward County during the past two days caused considerable property damage to farmers and other owners.

Fire started in the barns of Dr. Vrooman, Big Island, destroyed two large structures containing several hundred bushels of grain. Large quantities of hay were also destroyed by the flames that rapidly reduced the large buildings to masses of flaming ruins. No livestock was lost.

Yesterday, the barns and home of Donald Bongard, Macaulays Mountain farmer, were totally destroyed by a blaze thought to have been the aftermath of a blazing chimney. Most of the contents of the house were saved. Flames from the house, that had made considerable headway before being discovered, ignited a nearby barn and shed both of which were totally destroyed.

FOXBORO VISITED BY EARLY FROST

Ditches, Marsh Lands, and Low Buildings Coated With White Covering

Foxboro, June 7.—(Special) — Early rising residents of this district were not a little surprised this morning, when in getting out an early hour they found ditches, marsh lands and low flat-roofed buildings lightly coated with that ominous white coating, which at this time of the year can mean only one thing—frost.

Dreaded by all agriculturists, but most particularly by market gardeners, frost during the month of June spells disaster to the tender young shoots of early vegetables just emerging from the ground and materially retards the growth of early corn and potatoes, while the strawberry crop is almost always affected with any visit of low temperature at this time of the year.

It is not thought, however, that last night's visit from Jack Frost was severe enough to cause any damage, but old timers, who in the past have been quite successful in foretelling the weather, are satisfied that the cool nights will continue for a while and say, that frost is still in the air.

Returning from a triumphant tour of the western portion of their Dominion, the King and Queen were tendered a rousing reception as they passed through Northern Ontario enroute to Western Ontario and then the United States. Seven-year-old Basil Hepinstal, of Washago, had to receive a helping hand to make his presentation to Their Majesties. Once up, he said his little speech of welcome and presented them with a wood-bound book of pictures of the district on behalf of the school children of those parts.

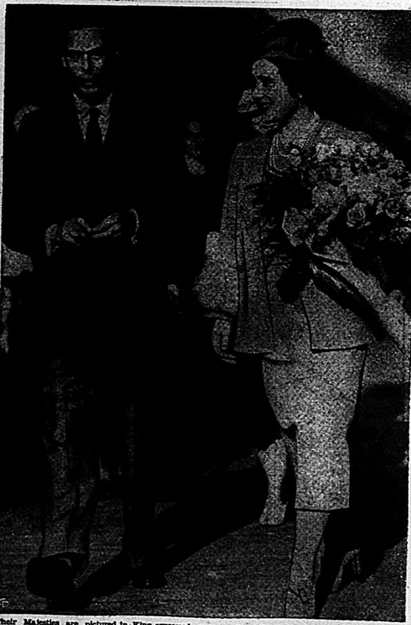
KING AND QEEN STROLL ON STATION PLATFORM



Their Majesties are pictured in this unstudied portrait as they strolled along the station platform at Capreol, northern Ontario. The King expressed amazement at the balmy weather that had met Their Majesties during their tour of northern Ontario and inquired, "Is this typical weather for this season of the year?" His Majesty was quickly assured that it was.

THE KING AND QUEEN AND THE PEOPLE

Instances abound of the sympathy and kindliness of the King and Queen as they make their way along their tour. The Sovereigns on so many occasions have given manifestation of their self-sacrificing interest and sympathy with their people in making unscheduled appearances so that the crowds gathered at stations along the route even by night may not be disappointed.

This tour has been of importance from the standpoint of Their Majesties and from the standpoint of the people of Canada. The benefits are mutual, the sacrifices have been largely on the part of the royal travellers who have passed through a strain which cannot be avoided on so long a journey with so many stops. Yet stories from many parts of Canada tell tales which will not be forgotten how many have travelled by primitive means of transportation from the far hinterlands to see their King and Queen. Such instances of natural and spontaneous demonstrations of loyalty and affection for the Rulers are bright lights among the tens of thousands of incidents which could be told.

What can be more inspiring than the appearance of Their Majesties at unscheduled stations! They know that nothing but love and loyalty would inspire men, women and children, poor and rich, to try even to catch a glimpse of the royal train. The sight of that alone would be pleasure, but to have the King and Queen appear—that has been the height of happiness to the groups gathered in various places along the line.

AT DOMREMY, FRANCE

In the world of heroic names which will never be allowed to die, is that of a girl, Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans, or Saint Joan, a native of Domremy, France. Of all warriors she is the one in many centuries whose name is blest. Other great names fail before the mystery of this wonderful girl who led the French armies to victory when it seemed as if France was all but falling into decay and restored the throne by the defeat of English armies. Names of men like Hannibal, Caesar and Napoleon do not stir as does the name of this maiden defender of her country. Today she lives as a potent force, not of militarism but of the things of the spirit. Looking back to her, Frenchmen are inspired to the defence of liberty.

It is difficult thoroughly to appraise the forces which led the Maid to the victories which have enshrined her in the hearts of Frenchmen. The period of time in which she lived, a day of chivalry, and yet a day of cruelty, but nevertheless a day when a new method of attack was not frowned upon but was given its opportunity may explain something. The militarists of her day lost, because they lacked what she had. Much that was beyond the usual conception of the age as part of the life of soldiering went into her nature, her faith in God and in herself, her realization that woman has a place and a task in the world brought recognition. However much today may boast of its broadmindedness it probably would not pay a modern Joan of Arc the respect that she had paid her by France of the fifteenth century. What nation in distress and dire straits today would name as commander-in-chief a woman, a mere girl in her teens? Today warfare is mechanized and lacks the very thing that Joan gave France and her armies, spirit or faith.

There have been great women leaders even in war but they have never reached the stature of Joan of Arc, who remained a woman, not an Amazon as most people today would call a woman soldier.

Joan has a lesson for the world today, and for democracy. However the nations of totalitarianism thunder with their boasts and their ironclad millions, democracy still has the opportunity of winning not by arms alone and by diplomacy but by the spirit which animates these nations.

Joan seems to have been the one woman of the middle ages and the modern world who was born to highest place. She filled that place in spite of what today would be insuperable obstacles, But she believed in her "voices" and triumphed.

Joan was destined to liberate England from ambitions on the continent. Through her England's hold on the French provinces dwindled and disappeared and England and France set out separately to work out their destinies. Many times since then they clashed but never sufficiently to cripple one another. Today they stand together with the light of experience and understanding in their eyes as two united in a common view of life. Joan of Arc fortunately for France and England turned the whole course of history and no doubt through them of the world.

If ever the sacredness of the individual was revealed in a life under divine guidance it was that of Joan. To most people she will remain the great mystery of history. These with others who try to solve that mystery hold her in high honor for her conquest of life through the spirit, for had it not been for her soul, there would have been no Joan as the world knows her.

It is no wonder that France honors and reveres her. More statues to her name are raised than to any human personage in all history. On Sunday it remained for her birthplace to have dedicated by Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec, a national basilica to her memory.

EXPLORERS: CARIBBEAN

It was an archipelago: a sea studded with islands: and we came there foreign,
by several hulls, by roadsteads known to wind,
by passages heaving toward musk and a landfall night.

We were alone, and lonely the various vessels;
black were the headlands and the tree-frogs savage.
Slowly we knew the slatting sails on the reeling stars and the mounting surf on the alien beaches.
The final island taking the brunt of the boat to the slope of sand and snubbing the low-slung planet gave us a troubled sleep: we smelled a continent, hearing the night-sea washing the restles gravel.

Frances Frost, in New York Times

THIS BEING THE AGE OF RACKETS IT IS NOT SURPRISING that variants of the old familiar game of getting money for nothing with sympathetic excuses keep cropping up. An old familiar scheme which has not been visible for some time has come to the notice of the Brockville Recorder. It is a racket worked with an artistic flourish which certainly evokes something not far from admiration. The modus operandi as revealed by the Brockville Recorded is as follows:

x

HIS PLACE IS ON THE STAGE

This is to serve notice upon the itinerant vendor of sheet music (reputedly of his own production) who has hawked his wares about this office on various occasions and who returned this week with a continuation of his hard-luck serial that he need not return, and that if he does he will be thrown down the elevator-shaft or handed over to the patrolman on the beat.

x

This obsequious little individual periodically turns up with a packet of sheet music in his arms and with a tale of near-destitution on his lips. He is down-at-heel in appearance and declares that for years past he has had only two months' work, spending the remainder of his time on the relief rolls and fighting always against nervous breakdown and other ailments. If only we will buy his music, he will be able to get a meal, and so on. He looks the picture of dejection and tells his story so mournfully and so convincingly that—we confess it to our sorrow—even hard-bitten people about this office have yielded various odd quarters to his importunities and returned in return sheets of so-called music which our wives have consigned to the nearest waste paper-basket.

x

This will not occur again and it is well that the gentleman in question, if he is within reach of this article, should know it. A short time after his latest visit to this office, the sad little man was seen by a member of the staff smartly entering a lane behind some house in King Street east. His portfolio of music was still under his arm but his step had acquired a spring previously lacking and altogether he looked rather pleased with himself. We wondered why he should enter this particular lane at some distance from the business district where he had plied his trade during the day, and we soon learned the reason, for within a minute or two the same individual, all trace of poverty having been shed, emerged from it at the wheel of a motor car of not too ancient vintage which had been parked in the lane, a cigarette in his mouth and plenty of loose change probably jangling in his pockets, en route to the next Suckertown.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

How Long Should You Live?

Some one has said that as you had a mother and father, two grand mothers and two grandfathers— six in all—that if you take the number of years each one of these ancestors has lived, add them together and divide by six, the result will give you the number of years you may expect to live.

Is this true? It might be true if there were some provision made for accidents, epidemics and other unusual causes of death.

However, the figures of insurance companies amply prove that heredity is or has a powerful influence on life expectancy; the longer the life line of your ancestors the longer is your own life expectancy likely to be.

Can you influence your life expectancy? I believe it will be generally agreed that folks live longer in the quiet places of life—in hamlets and villages, rather than in towns and cities. The "tension" of living amid the noise and speed of cities keeps the nerves and muscles tightened or tensed, which means a rise in blood pressure and heart rate. And a continuous rise of blood pressure and heart rate means just that much more wear or use of the "reserve" powers of the body.

Of course, one can live on a quiet farm and have worries, anxieties, and griefs that will take their toll even perhaps more than in a noisy place where one can, because of speed and crowds, get away from one's self for minutes if not hours at a time. Every individual has apparently an "inborn span of life" but this can be shortened by sudden and repeated attacks of infection, by accidents, shocks and emotional upsetments.

Generally speaking, the quiet or placid individual lives longer than the excitable but to this, of course, there are exceptions.

Dr. Raymond Pearl, the results of whose research work on life expectancy is considered sound says that longer life expectancy is found among those with (a) low blood pressure, (b) low pulse rate, (c) slender build, (d) small meals even if more meals than three are eaten, (e) cheerful outlook on life, and last but not least, to have long-lived parents.

Insurance companies state that there is a strong "family" tendency in heart and blood vessel ailments. This knowledge, instead of causing fear of heart diseases and strokes of apoplexy, should make the members of such families remember the three ways to prevent heart attacks —no overeating, no overexercising, and no overexcitement.

THEIR MAJESTIES

there—most of them springing from the German stock that founded and developed Kitchener and Waterloo—to acclaim a British King and Queen. Union Jacks flew from German-Canadian clubrooms and from business places operated by men and women of German descent.

Kitchener's Scottish-born mayor, George W. Gordon, and Mrs. Gordon were presented to the King and Queen by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who drew loud applause himself as a native of Kitchener. Another greeted vociferously was Hon. W. D. Euler, the district's representative in Parliament and Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Mike Weichel, an Elmira Great War veteran, told the Queen he knew a woman who knew Her Majesty in school and the Queen sent her "best regards" to the one-time acquaintance. Weichel said the Queen had "the bluest eyes I've ever seen."

Royal Couple Tireless

On the Petersburg, Baden, New Hamburg and Shakespeare the royal train rolled to Stratford and ever the crowds stretched out row upon row at each little station. The King and Queen were tireless and appreciative. It was authoritatively denied that His Majesty suffered an elbow injury by being lurched against the back of the observation platform as the train stopped at Stratford.

John MacDonald, twisted by arthritis, was one of a group of crippled war veterans the King and Queen spoke with at Stratford after introductions of Mayor Thomas Henry and other civic and legislative officials. MacDonald told of serving under the Duke of Connaught in the 1882 Egyptian campaign.

The train pushed right through London, for Londoners' turn to receive the monarchs comes today, but still hundreds waited for hours to see the coaches pass. Extra police had to be called to hold back the thousands at Hyde Park, just outside London.

Both Shook Hands

At Glencoe the train stopped and Ian G. Laird walked up to the observation platform and asked the King and Queen if he might "have the pleasure." Both shook hands with Laird and he was the only person of the 15,000 there who met Their Majesties.

Five thousand were at Thamesville, where the Queen stepped for a moment to the observation platform as the train went through. Then 40,000 jammed both sides of the tracks through Chatham, where a service stop was made and the King and Queen waved to the crowds. A few miles farther on French-Canadian and European-born onion farmers to the number of 3,000 crowded the station yard at Jeanette's Creek.

All the indescribable international significance of the royal tour was wrapped up in the reception at Windsor, where 300,000 residents of the United States and Canada roared a welcome.

All day Detroit people had crossed the Detroit River. Two hundred craft of all descriptions lay in the water beside the royal route. Most of the crowd jammed stands along the waterfront.

Met Under Lights

Under great arc lights the King and Queen met Mayor David Croll and Mrs. Croll and signed Windsor's new Golden Book. Mayor Richard Reading of Detroit was presented to Their Majesties.

There was disappointment for 35,000 school children in a stand along the route out of Windsor, who had been promised the train would stop for them. Some wept when they got only a fleeting look at the King and Queen on the observation platform. But the train was more than an hour late and darkness had fallen. Police and railway officials decreed the train must not stop for fear one of the youngsters might be injured by getting in the way of the locomotive when it started up in the dark.

HIS MAJESTY DESCENDS 2,800 FEET IN MINE

Expressing a desire to see the interior of the Frood mine, the largest nickel mine in the world, Their Majesties had the royal train stop at Sudbury Junction while they visited the mine. The King is shown here, wearing a miner's helmet, in the mine lift which dropped him 2,800 feet into the earth.

NORTHERN BEAUTY DELIGHTS THEIR MAJESTIES

Traveling through northern Ontario on their return from western Canada, the King and Queen were delighted with the beauty of the Canadian northland. At every possible opportunity, Their Majesties alighted from the royal train to view the beauty of the north.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

CHAPTER XXXIII

I wish you'd tell me just which one of you two girls Wylde is in love with," Ogden Flagg complained to Jan, as she sat beside his big desk in the study he had at the apartment, ready to take his dictation.

She had supplanted the secretary he had, a week before, and was proving herself most competent. The arrangement had curbed her restlessness to some extent, but her eyes often bore a faraway expression.

"I don't know myself," Jan admitted. "One minute he is paying court to me, the next to Ivonne."

"And you?" her father asked. "How do you feel about Wylde?"

"I answered that question when we talked in the hotel in St. Petersburg," she replied quickly. "I've not changed my mind. Oh, I like Wylde, despite his search for a wealthy wife—but that's all."

Flagg was silent a moment.

"Some other man?" he ventured at last.

Jan nodded.

"That chap, Peter Hathaway?"

Again a nod.

"Does he love you?"

"You tell me, Daddy," she begged him.

Then, the whole story poured out. Work was forgotten. Jan unburdened her heart to her father, and waited anxiously for his comment when she had finished.

"Doesn't sound like a chap who'd play with a girl's affections," he said thoughtfully, wishing he knew this young professor who had won his daughter's love.

"He isn't," Jan protested, valiantly defending Peter. "He admitted he loved me."

"But he didn't ask you to marry him."

"No—and the next day, Ivonne arrived, and there was continuous talk of my going home—and—he said I should."

There was a long, thoughtful silence, broken at last by Flagg.

"Would you have come home if he had asked you to marry him, Jan?"

Jan hesitated before answering.

"No—I would have stayed in the mountains as long as he did," she admitted at last.

"And when he left?"

"And gone where? With him to Champaign?"

Jan shook her head' "I would have come home first, to see you and to bring you Rex, but I'd have gone to him the minute he was ready to marry me."

Again a poignant silence. Then Jan lifted her head and looked at her father.

"I wonder....He sent me to you, didn't he? I wonder if he did not propose because he knew that, if he did, I'd not really come home."

"That may be the answer," agreed Flagg. "I can't tell—I don't know the young man."

"You'll know him soon. I got a letter from him this morning, enclosing a check for the burros he sold for me, and he said he'd be in New York next week on business."

"Then next week will bring the answer," Flagg stated with a confident smile.

But next week did not bring the answer. It only brought more confusion into Jan's mind and an added heaviness to her heart.

When Peter came, handsome and brown, he was as friendly as ever, as glad to see her as any good friend would be, but there was that old restraint in his manner. He took her out each night—to dance, to the theatre, or for long rides in her car—but never a word of love was spoken.

"How do you like being home?" he asked, on the last night of his stay in New York, as they drove out through Westchester County.

"Fine. I didn't know quite what to do with myself at first, but when father gave me the job as his private secretary, and there was something to do with all the hours in a day, I was happier."

"He's a mighty fine person," Peter declared enthusiastically. "I didn't know big business men like him could find the time to be so interested in everything."

"No?" Jan looked at him speculatively. "That's part of the secret of his success, I think."

"Going to stay on with him indefinitely?"

Jan nodded.

"Until a knight in shining armor sweeps you up on his black charger and carries you off?"

Peter's tone was light and bantering. Was it to hide a deeper emotion? But a study of his profile told Jan nothing.

"Yes." Her assent was in such a small voice that he turned to glance at her for a fleeting second.

She knew she was looking very lovely, very feminine—no longer the tomboy who had gunned a man off Peter's claim, who had panned golds with such doggedness. But Peter, who had made it so clear that he liked girls to be feminine, now didn't seem to notice the change in her.

He dexterously wove through lines of traffic and turned off on a less travelled road.

"Know where this leads?"

"No—and I don't care!"

"Just like that?"

"Just like that!"

"Aren't you going to be nice to me on my last night?" he asked.

"You're not being nice," she retorted.

"Oh, but I am—very nice—a perfect gentleman."

"Then I guess I don't like perfect gentlemen."

"Oh, Jan, let's not part on that note."

"It is you who are making us part on that note," she accused.

And it was on such a note that they did later part. Peter, leaving her at her door, took her hand and, though she knew he read in her eyes a plea for his love, for a kiss, he only smiled down at her and said, "Not good-by, Jan, for I'll be seeing you again—just goodnight."

CHAPTER XXXIV

It didn't take Jan long to realize that not even work could ease an aching heart. Peter had come to New York, had seen her again—in her home, in the environment where she belonged—and had gone away without a word to indicate that he still loved her—or ever had.

But she still loved him. That was the misery of it. She loved him more than ever, and nothing could keep her from thinking of him, from longing for him.

Meanwhile, Ivonne was contemplating a trip to Maine with a group of friends, and wanted Wylde to accompany her. But Wylde was loath to leave New York—and Jan.

"You don't love me, Wylde—you only use me to be near Jan," Ivonne accused, one evening.

"I loved you once, and you tossed my love back in my face," he reminded her. "Now, since you've discovered that Jan could have me by crooking her little finger, you're determined to annex my scalp to your belt."

"Nice girl, nice belt," Ivonne teased.

"Nice girl, but too many scalps on the belt. You know, Vonne, I'm not looking for a girl who would tire of me in a short while and trek to Reno. Jan would be faithful to her marriage vows."

"And I wouldn't?" Ivonne's eyes flashed. Her daintily shod foot tapped on the polished floor.

"Would you?" asked Wylde.

At that moment, Jan came into the room.

"You two here?" she said. "I thought you'd gone dancing at the Vincent Roof."

"Wylde has refused to go unless you come. Says he can't have you staying home nursing a case of lonesomeness after Peter calmly went away without putting a ring on your finger."

Anger flashed across Jan's face, but she held back sharp words. Ivonne didn't mean to hurt—she was just not capable of the depth of emotion that was a part of Jan.

"Oh, I couldn't! One man and two girls!"

"No excuses. We'll pick up loads of people the minute we show our faces," Wylde assured her.

"Come on, Jan," urged Ivonne. "Father's out, and we're not leaving you here alone."

So Jan went, and Wylde was proud of the two girls he escorted—both so lovely, but so different.

As they entered the Vincent Roof, friends waved to them from all directions.

"There's Sue!" Ivonne exclaimed. "She's just back from Reno. I must hear the dirt." And she was gone.

The headwaiter led Jan and Wylde to a table, seated them. A hovering waiter took their order.

Jan tried to be entertaining, but how can a girl be good company with the wrong man—even when her common sense tells her that the right man is not interested in her?

However, dancing with Wylde was a relief from her thoughts. He was a beautiful dancer, and Jan enjoyed every moment she was in his arms. Between dances, he was charming, exerting himself to the utmost.

At last, he forced her out of her unhappy frame of mind. She found that bantering with him was better than sitting at home, nursing thoughts of the man who did not return her love. Quick sallies came to her tongue as Wylde joked and teased.

And then, when she least expected it, he leaned across the table, his eyes suddenly sober, and spoke in a voice that vibrated with emotion.

"Jan, I love you. I know you loved me before—and now you love Peter—but if you'll only give me the chance, I'll make you love me again."

Jan started to retort "Still after the Flagg millions?" but she could not say the words. She knew Wylde was sincere. Maybe money counted some, but he did love her—or thought he did.

"I've talked with your father," he went on earnestly. "He knows I'll probably be a dud at business, but he'll give me a job. I thought that would make you feel more kindly toward me."

"How can I say yes to you when I love Peter?"

Jan's eyes were the deep troubled blue of a stormy sea. Wylde was sweet. He was as she had known him before his mother had so bluntly explained their financial need. Yes, he was the Wylde who had been Prince Charming to a little girl who believed in fairy tales. Prince Charming! But there was a Knight in Shining Armor!

"Peter's not interested in anything but his work," Wylde protested. "Don't you realize that? Look at how he talked shop with your father at every opportunity."

It was true. Jan could not deny it.

"You bring out the best in a fellow. You'll make me keep my nose to the grindstone and make something of myself."

"In other words, I'd have the job of making a business man of you if I married you?" Jan laughed at the idea. What faith Wylde had in her—but how well he knew her, how well he knew this would interest her, intrigue her.

"Just give me a chance and I'll make you forget Peter. I love you so much, Jan. Please!"

"I'm not the wife for you, Wylde. Ivonne is the one—and you like her more than you realize."

"You'd want me to like my sister-in-law-to-be, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, I don't know what I want!"

Her hands were spread out, helpless on the table. Wylde caught them in his.

"Let me show you what you want, Jan, darling," he pleaded.

"All right" she agreed, with a sigh. "You show me—if you can."

CHAPTER XXXV

Jan told her father, the next morning, that she was engaged to Wylde. She was hesitant about her confession, and suddenly felt that everything was all wrong.

Ogden Flagg was startled by her announcement—and dismayed.

"But I thought you didn't love him," he said.

"I don't —as I love Peter —but Peter doesn't love me, and so I might as well start in now to forget him and find other interests in life." There was desperation in Jan's manner.

"You sound, Jan, as though your mind were playing hop scotch on skates instead of gliding smoothly along. That sort of reasoning is beneath you."

Deep red dyed Jan's cheeks.

"I won't announce a rebound affair like this," Flagg continued. "If you and Wylde are to be engaged, it must be quietly until you are more sure of yourself."

Jan sighed. "Very well. I'll tell Wylde when he comes tonight."

Days dragged along—days filled with work for her father, followed by evenings in Wylde's company. Wylde wasn't Peter, but he was entertaining and considerate. He was determined to win her love, and went about it in a manner that tore at her heart strings. She wished she could love him, he was so dear; but forgetting Peter would take a long time.

Ivonne left for Maine, wishing them happiness but looking into Wylde's eyes with an expression in her own that plainly showed her heart was wholly his.

Ivonne's eyes haunted Jan. Her sister loved Wylde, and Wylde had once loved her? Could he love her again? The thought tormented Jan.

Finally, she saw things clearly, was the old Jan who had a pattern in life and would follow that pattern confidently. She confronted Wylde one evening, strong in her determination, and told him she could not love him.

"I've tried and I can't, Wylde. I'll always like you, but I never can love you — and Ivonne does. You loved her onve—I think you still do. It's been just that I'm different from most girls you've known, and that difference makes you think you love me."

Pleadings, protests, could not move her. Her mind was made up. When she sent Wylde from her, he was, at last, thoroughly convinced.

"You're throwing me at Ivonne," he lamented.

"Now that you realize that there's absolutely no possibility of my loving you, you'll see Ivonne with different eyes," she assured him.

That night, she slept restfully. It was the first time her slumbers had been undisturbed since she had agreed to become engaged to Wylde.

The next morning, she was fresh and her eyes bright, when she went into her father's study to take his dictation.

"You're looking fine this morning," he greeted her.

"Stopped playing hop scotch," she told him, with a smile. "Sent Wylde packing after Ivonne," she added, in response to the question that leaped into his eyes.

Flagg sighed with relief, and suddenly, Jan realized how deeply concerned he had been about her.

"And this afternoon, I'll take you on for eighteen holes if you'll give me a three-point handicap," she suggested gaily.

Disappointment immediately crossed her father's face.

Regretfully, he said, "I've a very important appointment at the office this afternoon, Jan. Could you make it tomorrow?"

"You're tied up in knots tomorrow with one appointment after another," she reminded him, but she could not hide her own disappointment.

"Can't we break a couple—just to get in nine holes?"

She shook her head. "Some other time. There are years and years we can play golf together, but business is pressing now."

He had to admit that it was, but he wished, with all his heart, that he could get away. He wanted to do anything that would help to keep that sparkle in Jan's eye, that upward curve to her lips.

In the middle of dictation, the telephone rang. Jan reached for it and murmured "Hello" into the mouthpiece.

Then, suddenly, her face lit up. "Peter! Where are you?"

Her father sat back in his chair, a pleased smile on his face.

"Tonight? Of course! Call for me at seven-thirty....Oh, wait a moment — Father wants something." She had caught Flagg's signal and put her hand over the mouthpiece. "What is it, Daddy? Peter wants me to have dinner with him. Isn't that agreeable to you?"

"I'm bringing an important business associate home for dinner. I wished you to be here. I really need a hostess. Couldn't you have Peter call for you at nine—take you dancing instead?"

Quickly, Jan mastered her disappointment, and explained the situation to Peter. When she put down the phone, her eyes were starry, and a lovely flush suffused her face.

"Thanks, Jan— that was very sweet of you. I'll make it up to you somehow," Flagg said gratefully.

"There's nothing to make up to me, Daddy."

"Where was I?" he asked abruptly, and Jan forced her mind back to work, read her notes to him, and swiftly resumed taking his dictation.

But all the time, her heart was singing. "I'm seeing Peter tonight!"

CHAPTER XXXVI

Jan knew her father and his guest had arrived, were in the study, though it was only six o'clock and dinner was not to be served until seven. She had heard Bates go into the study with cocktails and, while the door was open, her father's hearty laughter had reached her. He only laughed that way when he was enjoying someone's company.

She smiled. It had been a wrench to forego dinner with Peter but she couldn't deny her father any little request he made. They were not dressing for dinner tonight, he had said, but she selected a particularly becoming blue taffeta dinner dress that matched her eyes, and knew she would be a credit to him.

Later, before Peter arrived, she would excuse herself and change into the lovely white evening gown that lay across her bed. Peter would adore it. He preferred her in white, and she had slipped out during the afternoon to buy it. She was going to make herself so lovely this evening, so desirable, that Peter would have to make up his mind—would have to propose to her if ever he was going to.

She knocked on the study door, opened it, then stopped short. Peter!

He and her father were standing in the centre of the room, both wearing broad grins. Ogden Flagg, though looked a little sheepish, as if he had been caught in a prank.

"Jan, may I present a new business associate, Mr. Peter—"

"Jan dearest!"

Peter hurried across the room to take her into his arms. His lips found hers with the kiss she had been longing for—a kiss that declared his love in undeniable ardor. She clung to him, quivering with the thrill of being enfolded again by his love.

Moments later, he released her, smiled down into her questioning eyes. They were alone. Ogden Flagg had quietly left the room.

"You do love me!" she said.

"Of course, dearest. I never stopped loving you. But I wanted you to be very sure, and I wanted you to come home first and have your father's love and companionship. Then I came East and—I wasn't sure, Jan. You seemed to love me still—but I wasn't sure. I knew Wylde was rushing you—oh, I was just a fool, but I had to have you love me with your whole heart and soul."

"I did—I always have!"

"And then, when you became engaged to Wylde, your father telephoned me. He told me everything. He was so worried. And when I admitted I loved you, he told me to come East as soon as I could and save you from yourself. As though you needed saving from yourself! He tells me you broke that engagement to Wylde last night—"

"Yes. I was terribly confused for a while—didn't care about anything when I thought you didn't love me," Jan admitted. "But I found I couldn't be disloyal to my love for you—even if you didn't love me. I was willing to wait and see, the next time you came East."

Words of excited good news came from Peter's lips. He could not hold them back. She must hear about the wonderful thing that had happened to him this afternoon.

"Your father made me a business proposition I couldn't refuse. No son-in-law job, either. And because I knew you would be happier here in the East with him, I accepted. So, Jan, here I am to stay. I want you to marry me as soon as you will—the sooner the better."

Ogden Flagg spoke from the doorway. "You see, Jan, I couldn't have him taking you away to Illinois, not when he could put his talents to better use in my business and I could keep you here with me."

"Always taking care of your Jan," she accused, but her tone was warm with gratitude.

"Looking out for myself in this instance. I need just such a man as Peter, and—hang it all, Jan, he's just the chap I'd like for a son. I wasn't going to lose both a favorite daughter and the son I've wanted all these years."

"That's mighty fine of you, Mr. Flagg. I hope I shall always live up to your expectations," said Peter.

Bates came in with fresh cocktails. "To happiness," Ogden Flagg said, and his smile was a blessing. They sat about the study then, laughing, talking, making plans.

Again, Bates entered, interrupting with a telegram. Jan watched with anxious eyes as her father read it. He reread it aloud:

WYLDE AND I MARRIED THIS AFTERNOON STOP FLYING TO CANADA FOR HONEYMOON STOP DO WE GET A BLESSING STOP
IVONNE

"Oh, I'm so glad!" Jan exclaimed.

"You're glad!" said Ogden Flagg. "That is no word for it." He smiled. "Ivonne married. You to be married soon. You can't imagine how happy all this makes me, children."

Jan went to him, put her arms around his neck, and kissed him warmly. There was no need for words. She turned in her father's arms and smiled at Peter....

Last night ma was at the movies with my sister Gladdis, and pop had reminded me twice to go to bed, an I said, Hay pop?

All present and accounted for, as we used to say in the army, pop said, and I said, An hour isn't such a very long time, is it, pop?

Cosmically speaking, an hour is a miscroscopic speck in a boundless infinity, pop said, and I said, How do you mean, pop, do you mean it's hardly anything?

It's even less, pop said. If you mentioned anything as short as an hour to Professor Einstein he would give such a disdainful snort that the sound of it would reach the sun in 7 million years, breaking even the speed record of the snort snorted by Hitler when asked if he could dictate faster than Mussolini he said, and I said, Well then holey smokes, pop if that's all a hour is can I stay up a exter hour tonight and keep you company while you smoke and read?

ON THE BACK OF AN ENVELOPE

O, now you're alluding to an hour of a diffrent color, pop said. You're referring to a mundane or earthly hour, wich is long enough for a man like Professer Einstein to figure out on the back of an envelope the reason why a falling body on the moon would descend horizontally instead of vertically if the earth and the sun were to suddenly stand still to think things over. In fact a mundane or earthly hour would be long enough for a boy like you to get so tired asking questions that he would be forced to pause for a full mundane or earthly minute, and now good night and sleep well, he said.

Wich I did.

Toronto, June 7—(CP)—Norman Primeau, 28, of Barthe Street, Chatham, Ont., was remanded until June 13 for a medical examination when he appeared today in court on a charge of threatening to kill Premier Hepburn.

The charge reads that Primeau did "unlawfully deliver or cause to be received by Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, knowing the contents thereof, a letter threatening to kill the said Hon. Mitchell Hepburn."

J. W. McFadden appeared for the Crown when Primeau was brought before court in the city hall today. He was taken to the psychiatric hospital following the court hearing.

The complaint was sworn to by Inspector MacKay. The action was taken on advice of Cecil Snyder, K.C., special prosecutor for the Attorney-General's Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Hill, Chicago, are spending a few weeks at their summer cottage, Rossmore.

Mr. W. Donald MacLean of Winnipeg, is spending a few days with the Misses MacLean, Alexander Street.

Mrs. Speer of Toronto, is visiting friends in Belleville, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Exley, 197 Victoria Ave.

Miss Isobel Martin will receive her diploma at the graduation exercises of the Homewood Sanitarium Nursing School on Tuesday.

Climaxing a week of delightful entertainment that will provide cherished memories of their graduation year, the nurses of the 1939 class of Belleville General Hospital were honoured at a dance arranged at the Bay of Quinte Country Club last evening, by the Board of Governors of the Hospital. A more charming summer dance could not be imagined. In the lovely setting of the club reception room, with flowers and colored lights to further enhance the flower-like tones of the evening gowns, the dance floor presented a vivid picture. A very large crowd was in attendance and the guests were welcomed by the patronesses Mrs. Mackenzie Robertson, Mrs. V. Blakslee, Mrs. R. S. Gibson and Miss Ruth Thompson. A splendid dance program was provided and an amusing diversion from the usual list of dances were the speciality numbers made up from the names of the guests of honor, and from various hospital activities. Supper was served at midnight after which dancing continued until about one o'clock.

Under the auspices of Mrs. H. J. Clarke's and Mrs. J. Cook's groups of Bridge Street Church Woman's Association a most successful afternoon tea was held at the home of Mrs. James Semple yesterday. The many guests were received by Mrs. Semple, Mrs. C. Hyde, president of the W.A. and Mrs. Clarke and were invited to the tea room by Mrs. Cook. Summer blossoms of every kind were effectively used in the decoration of the rooms while the tea table was lovely with purple and yellow irises, with tapers in the same tones. Mrs. Clare and Mrs. Foster poured tea during the first hour, and Mrs. Countryman and Mrs. Hall later. Those who assisted were Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. Brown, Miss Knight, Mrs. Calnan, Miss McKeown, Mrs. Lashbrook, and Mrs. Cather. The home-cooking table was in charge of Mrs. Dyson, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Crosby. Miss Ivy Dickens was treasurer for the tea.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Take Your Manners to the Fairs

Between the San Francisco World's Fair and the New York World's Fair, we're all travel-minded this year. Never have so many of us been given such a vast opportunity of revealing whether or not we are mannerly travellers.

"A kind heart and a courteous tongue will carry you far", said Kipling, and it's still the best rule for travelling that I know!

Good manners are good manners whether you stay at home or travel. Whether the magic carpet that takes you to one or both of the Fairs is train, car, bus, boat or airplane, you should take with you a fine ideal of your own self-respect and a scrupulous and never-failing consideration of the rights, comforts and sensibilities of others. When you start your journey, don't leave your manners at home to await your return.

Some people travel as smoothly and easily as a streamlined train. Others puff and snort their way along, pushing their fellow-travellers aside with the grim determination of a snow-plow.

It's pleasant to be called an "ideal traveller". Happily it doesn't necessarily mean that we have travelled a great deal. It does mean that from the minute we start, we take our pleasantest and most courteous qualities with us; that we keep in alert and active use our "seeing eye and hearing ear and understanding heart." Your neighbour on the bus or on the train may "have been everywhere" and you may never have been very far from the little road in front of your doorway, but you, because of your innate courtesy and consideration, may be the "ideal traveller" and he or she may be just a boorish person who happens to have the opportunity of buying railroad or bus tickets.

What are some of the fundamental qualities of ideal travellers? First, they are never conspicuous in what they do, what they say, how they say it, how they dress. To every relationship that presents itself, they bring poise. To every circumstance that they encounter they adjust themselves graciously and pleasantly. They do not fuss and fume about trifles—or even big annoyances. They guard their tongues, do not criticise destructively, do not belittle people or places or customs, do not boast about their travel experiences, or their friends, or their accomplishments.

Good travellers respect other people's property as they do their own. They are meticulously neat in their habits. They ask for information from the proper official, and, if they have a complaint to make, they make it to the proper official . . . . they don't "tell the world" They do not have a misplaced sense of humor or wit. They have the grace of being punctual. If exigencies or discomforts arise, they make themselves and everybody else as comfortable as possible. And as part of their travelling equipment, they carry with them a limitless supply of "Thank you" and "Please". They know that these are "sound currency" to spend when travelling!

Advice to the Lovelorn

Discovering Father

Father as a "regular guy"—lovable and human, and sympathetic, working like a beaver to provide for his family— is a comparatively recent discovery.

Some fathers, of course, managed to break through that cordon of conventions which bound them, until recent years, and they got to know their boys and girls well. But many children, almost to the present time, regarded their fathers only as a provider who must be obeyed.

Within the memory of most of us, a father's responsibility in the family didn't include much more than paying the bills. The day-by-day care of the child was up to the mother. Only if special discipline was required was the boy child turned over to his father. The woodshed engagement of father and son has not yet entirely faded from the joke column.

Someone had the happy idea of digging up that ancient model of the stern disciplinarian and reconstructing it.

The swing away toward father as a companion is said to be the result of smaller incomes. Father now has sometimes to play nurse and companion and he has grown to know how utterly adorable a baby can be. The idea of a man wheeling a baby carriage or holding a baby in public, for even a brief moment, is no longer regarded as the acme of humor.

A boy had to be of fighting age before his father was supposed to take any interest in him. On the other hand, little sister was apt to become father's doll, a pampered plaything, often thoroughly spoiled. This was the typical set-up of the average family, as reflected in tradition and literature a generation or two ago.

Then someone actually had the happy thought of introducing fathers and sons on the same plane. There were father-and-son golfing matches, father-and-son smokers, father-and-son banquets, all with the idea of breaking down the old barriers.

Pacing rooms for prospective fathers in maternity hospitals may not have cleared the joke column entirely as yet. But doctors and nurses do take seriously the strain, the terrific anxiety of a young husband about to be favored by the stork for the first time."

At the Maternity Centre Association in New York, prospective fathers are now taught how to wash the baby. I believe they start with life-size dolls and when they work through all the grades and become senior, they take their turn with a live infant. They're taught how to diaper a baby, too, and how to modify his milk, all of which is good, sound common sense.

Since fathers have been taking an interest in babies, infant mortality has decreased amazingly. Fifty years ago we had our hands full in keeping children alive. Now they're kept well by the joint care of both parents.

Don't stint father on Father's Day. Give him neckties, socks, handkerchiefs, a subscription to a magazine if he's fond of reading, books, candy. Give father a great big hand. He's waited a long time for it.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Acrodynia Usually Occurs During First or Second Year of Child's Life

One of the more recently identified diseases which strike children, known as acrodynia, was first described in Australia about 25 years ago. I suppose most doctors run into it occasionally, although I am sure they are often at a loss to diagnose it with any certainty.

The disease, a generalized, rundown condition of the body, occurs usually in a child during the first or second year of life. Some scientists claim that it is lack of some part of diet, closely related to Vitamin B; others think the disease is due to a series of infections. I am rather inclined to hold with the latter view because I have never see a case of acrodynia where there wasn't a case history of a long series of infections, usually colds.

Usually the disease first makes its presence known by loss of appetite. Then the child becomes irritable and loses weight. He is always miserable, sleeps very poorly, later it will be found that he doesn't like to look at light, preferring to be in a dark room in which he rests better.

Later the child may develop a measle-like rash all over his body and will scratch vigorously every time his hands get free. About this time the parents may notice that the child's feet and hands feel cold to the touch and are a bluish red color.

This is the full-fledged acrodynia as we now know it. At this time the child is almost bound to have an infection somewhere, usually a head cold or bronchitis. A sicker looking child than one with this disease would be very hard to find; his eyes are red and running, his nose is running, he cries almost continuously and scratches the rash whenever he can.

The disease is serious because at this time the child has little or no resistance and the mildest head cold may progress rapidly to pneumonia and death.

The sickness is treated by first getting rid of the infection. If it is a throat infection, then the tonsils are often removed just as soon as possible. Many other treatments have been tried, such as giving vitamins in all forms but these attempts have never been very successful. However the recent discovery of specific drugs for use against bacteria which causes infections of the nose and throat may be of benefit in treatment of this disease.

Although I have stressed nose and throat infections in connection with acrodynia, these aren't the only infections which may cause it. This infection may occur on the skin, in the kidneys or in any part of the body.

If you would protect your child from acrodynia, protect him from colds, particularly colds in the head.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Snowdrops bloom on many a smart hat. A lovely model is a tiny toque on a white net foundation covered all over with misty pale green veiling which forms an enormous bow in back.

All occasion outfits is what the gals want just now. Perfect for luncheon or for the informal dinner is an ensemble of black and white silk, the print of enormous white splashy flowers on an inky black ground. The bodice is made of black silk net all-over shirred with a deep square neck in front. The skirt is built high to meet the curved bolero.

Hearts are trumps in a smart little suit. The dress is printed with a design of tiny hearts, red on a white background. With it is worn a dark red wool jacket with heart-shaped pockets.

We are for the colorful clothes for town wear. One girl wears a trig reefer of cyclamen colored wool with brown, navy blue or black accessories, either hue perfect with the cyclamen shade.

You require at least one frankly dressy hat, no matter how tailored and casual your clothes may be. Such a hat may be coarse black straw, a brimmed model, with the brim turned up at the side with lavender lilacs in bunches above and below the brim to hold it. A lavender veil tie under the chin.

Pretty useful is a belt made of strips of red, white and blue patent leather, a wide belt that crushes narrowly when a corselet effect is not required. Good tunic for prints.

Weddings

SHANNON—GEHAN

Marmora, (Special) — Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, was the scene of a very pretty summer wedding on Monday morning, June 5th, at nine o'clock, when Miss Margaret Dorena Gehan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gehan, became the bride of William Arthur Shannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Shannon. Rev. Father Healey performed the ceremony and said the Nuptial Mass in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a floor-length gown of white chantilly lace, with fitted peplum jacket long white silk tulle veil, held in place by a Queen Elizabeth coronet of pearls, white lace gloves and white brocaded slippers. She carried a bridal shower of lilies of the valley and silver ribbon, an ivory prayer book and pearl and gold rosary. She was wearing a gold and cameo locket. The gift of the groom.

Miss Gladys Gehan was her sister's bridesmaid dressed in a floor length gown of Talisman pink with tiny rows of fine tucks and matching bolero. She wore a large picture hat of leghorn with pink velvet petals and carried a summer nosegay of sweet peas, rosebuds and carnations. She was wearing silver slippers and elbow length white kid gloves.

The groom was ably supported by his brother, James Shannon.

The choir, with Miss Rita Deacon at organ rendered Leonard's Mass in E flat. During the Offertory. Harold Auger sang "Pange's Angelicus" and during the signing of the register Miss Genevieve Shannon rendered "I am My Love's". The altar and sanctuary were beautifully decorated with spirea, tulips, snapdragons and lilac.

The ushers were Tom Shannon, brother of the groom, and Breen O'Connor. Tom Byrnes and John Shannon cousins of the bride and groom served the Nuptial Mass.

Following the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents, with thirty guests being present. Mrs. Gehan received the guests gowned in navy sheer with white accessories wearing a corsage of lily of the valley. She was assisted by Mrs. Shannon, the groom's mother, dressed in navy sheer with pink accessories and wearing a corsage of pink carnations. The breakfast table was decorated with white and pink candles in silver candlesticks, pink tea roses, lily of the valley, spirea and snapdragons in a silver basket and pink roses in a silver bowl. The happy couple left on a motor trip to Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec city, the bride travelling in a navy blue sheer dress with Queen Blue Coat, navy and white hat with veil and matching accessories. On their return they will take up residence in the apartment over the Dominion Bank Marmora.

Out of town guests were Mr. M. J. Sweeney and Miss Helen Stuart, Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Hogan, Trenton, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McGee, Port Hope, Miss M. Robinson and Mrs. Morrisey, Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. T. Walsh, Mrs. O. McEvoy and Mrs. Stewart, Madoc.

McKNIGHT—HOWIE

One of the prettiest of June weddings took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Howie, 48 East Dundas Street, on Monday afternoon when their only daughter, Kitty, became the bride of Mr. Vernon McKnight of Belleville, Rev. Allan Pepper of Tweed, officiating.

The ceremony was performed under a large white bell before a window banked with a profusion of Spring blossoms and ferns. The sun shining through the large west window made an impressive picture of the solemn service. Spiraea, peonies and irises throughout the spacious rooms formed a lovely setting for the event.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was charming in a gown of bridal white chiffon with veil falling to the long graceful train. Her bouquet was of sweetheart roses, baby's breath and forget-me-nots.

Miss Jean Croft was bridesmaid and wore pale pink marquisette with matching hat. She carried a nosegay of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Clifford Howie, a brother of the bride, was groomsman.

The bride's mother had chosen an orchid sheer gown with a corsage of pink roses.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. Later the bridal couple left for eastern points and will visit Lake Placid and the Adirondack Mountains. The bride travelled in a navy blue tailored suit with silver fox scarf and pale green accessories. Mr. and Mrs. McKnight will reside in Belleville.

For Thursday, June 8

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A NOTABLE trend toward stability and progress is seen in this day's sidereal operations. The trend seems based on industry, application, sound systems of operation and on the security of real possessions or investments. It is a propitious time for cashing in on these, although not with sudden impulses. Be prudent and confer with wise heads; also be alert to tricky schemes. There may be a surprising turn in the way of romance, or a thrill in domestic relations.

Those whose birthday it is are to enjoy a year of satisfactory rewards for hard work and steadfastness or the exercise of sound judgment in investments, securities and business projects will become stabilized, with elders assisting. In private affairs look for surprising or romantic denouements.

A child born on this day may be industrious, dependable, making slow but very definite progress in life, and enjoying a private life of surprising adventures and gratifications.

Here the sailor's voice broke and for a while he was unable to continue his story. After a few moments he controlled his emotion and, without mentioning three men who drowned trying to follow the first two men up, continued:—

Unable to Find Words

"I do not know how to put it. I will just say that Shaw (Frank Shaw, builder's representative) and myself decided to make a bid for it. We came up and as you see we made our escape. I am not going to talk about anything that happened during the night. We got out and felt sure the others would follow us at frequent intervals."

"I cannot tell you how I felt when they did not. Everyone was the same down below—civilians, officers and men. Some people can't help crying to vent their feelings in a time like that, but I never saw anyone shed a tear."

Again tears welled in the stoker's eyes.

Arnold said that when he left the Thetis Friday morning some 20 hours after the fatal dive the condition of the air was "indescribable." He added his opinion that "no one will ever know" whether the condition of the air was what prevented the others from using the escape apparatus.

A younger Watson, Lieutenant A. E. Watson of Reserve Militia, was on a stretcher by the side of the veterans. The King and Queen expressed their pleasure when Watson told them he was "feeling fine.. after a recent accident.

Their Majesties started their program in London 10 minutes in advance of the schedue. They left London nine minutes ahead. The royal train pulled out of the city slowly because thousands lined the railroad right-of-way and the King and Queen stood on the back platform waving.

Get First Sight of King

At least 10,000 standing 10 and 15 deep, were congregated before the Canadian National Station and set up a great cheer when Their Majesties emerged from the new station officially opened two years ago by the Lord Mayor of London, England.

For hours pipers had skirled their marching songs and bands had played to entertain the throngs.

The royal train was stopped over night only a few hundred yards from the station. It arrived shortly after midnight and was closely guarded until the run was made up to the station this morning.

The arrival was at 10.50 E.D.T., 10 minutes ahead of schedule. Yesterday the train was an hour or more behind schedule at times, Their Majesties willingly slowing down their speed so that hundreds of thousands along the route would have a good chance to see them.

33 Special Trains

Thirty-three special trains brought farmers and townsfolk, their wives and children to London for the one-hour visit. Like bees swarming to a giant honey comb, they dashed this morning from trains, buses and motor cars to favored spots along the route.

The sight of militia units, bereved war veterans, white-uniformed nurses, Boy Scouts and Girl Guides marching to their positions made scene a colorful one long before the pageantry of royalty began.

Sixty thousand school children were massed along the way. They waved flags and sent up a great cheer when the royal motor car passed slowly.

The weather was extremely warm when the royal party stepped to the platform. A member of the Royal Canadian Regiment, which formed a guard of honor for His Majesty, collapsed just as the band struck the first bar of the National Anthem.

Soldier Striken by Heat

The King and Queen seemed concerned as the soldier was carried from the line of the guard. He was taken to a nearby railway shed. His name was not made available at once.

Their Majesties were greeted by Mayor J. A. Johnston who presented his mother, Mrs. Isabene Johnston.

The King wore a Field Marshal's uniform and the Queen a plain grey ensemble with short, puffed sleeves and a small, flowered hat in pansy shades with a long veil.

Mayor Johnston presented Brigadier D. J. MacDonald, Officer Commanding Military District No. 1. Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Postmaster-General Norman McClarty were in the royal party.

Fifty-one prominent citizens of London and the district were presented, including Aldermen and their wives and local members of parliament and the legislature.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn was presented as the member for Elgin. Two weeks ago he was presented as Ontario's Premier. Mrs. Hepburn accompanied the Premier.

A bouquet of pink roses was presented to the Queen by Mary Jane Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy of London. Seven-year-old Mary Jane is the great-great-grand-daughter of London's first mayor.

Reception at Ingersoll

Ingersoll, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Two 12-pound cheeses were put aboard the royal train today as the King and Queen entered Ontario's rich dairy country to find 12,000 jubilant farmers and townfolk waiting to cheer them.

Every child in Ingersoll waved a flag and every adult whooped up a cheer when the royal train pulled in from London and Their Majesties descended to the station platform.

Dressed in a charming grey ensemble, the Queen carried a grey parasol and held it open during the brief stop. The sun had blazed on Ingersoll since early morning and the temperature was at 82 when Their Majesties emerged from the train.

Severeigns Ahead of Time

The arrival at Ingersoll was eight minutes ahead of schedule and the departure seven minutes ahead. The royal train left for Woodstock at 12.33 p.m., E.D.T.

In great humor after cheering the pilot train and its newspaper correspondents 30 minutes earlier, the Ingersoll crowd greeted Prime Minister Mackenzie King with a roar of welcome when he descended from his car while the royal train was still moving and sprinted back to the steps down which the King and Queen walked a moment later.

Royal Standard Unfurled

A royal standard was unfurled by Col. J. C. Hegler, 88-year-old veteran of the Fenian Raids. After two officials had been presented, Their Majesties stepped down from the platform and walked among war veterans who were assembled nearby.

The 12-pound cheeses were placed aboard the royal dining car by C. N. Seippe of Union, near Ingersoll. The cheesemen of this famous dairying country had heard that the King's favorite dessert was cheese and they determined that he should have some of theirs.

A telegram from E. H. Coleman, Under-Secretary of State, said custom forbade the King accepting gifts but that the cheese would be accepted if it were brought to the dining car. Technically it wasn't a gift to His Majesty, but the cheesemakers are sure he'll be the one to enjoy it.

Influx of visitors was the greatest in Ingersoll's history. The King and Queen were here for only a few minutes but the throngs were ready to celebrate all day. Merrymaking started in early morning and was slated to continue during the afternoon and tonight.

2 DOGS HELD IN CITY POUND

Mr. Thos. Thorne today reported the capture and impounding of two male dogs, one a part terrier on Dundas street, carrying with him a yard of chain and a Boston bull terrier with tag No. 712 of 1938 licence. These animals await their owners.

A happy and smiling couple, obviously pleased with the reception accorded them by their loyal Canadian subjects, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth stroll along the station platform at Guelph, Ont., during their visit to that western Ontario city.

Seventy-five thousand people from the counties of Huron, Perth, Oxford and other western Ontario centres, thronged into Stratford, Ont., yesterday to cheer Their Majesties in their arrival at that city. In this picture, Queen Elizabeth is shown greeting some of the disabled war veterans, for whom Their Majesties prolonged their stay at Stratford an extra five minutes.

—Phonephoto

Arriving at Guelph, Ont., in their swing through western Ontario, the King and Queen showed special interest in the gathering of Great War veterans drawn up to greet them. Here Their Majesties are pictured chatting with the old soldiers.

Mayor George W. Gordon of Kitchener, Ont., is shown presenting his city's address of welcome to the King and Queen as they arrived in the western Ontario city yesterday.

From the back of the observation car of the royal train which has carried them to the Pacific Coast and back, our King and Queen look out upon the rich farmlands and busy towns and cities of western Ontario. Every town and hamlet was jammed with loyal throngs eager to cheer the King and Queen and to add to the glorious triumph of their progress across Canada and back. The Queen, radiant and happy, is carrying a bouquet received at one of the stops made by the royal pair yesterday. The King, attired in a business suit, stands just behind her.

CHIEFS WIN IN 13

Montreal Royals Defeated in Long Game by Syracuse Chiefs

((By The Associated Press)

That famous Dodger influence apparently is extending even down to the International League. It's cropping up at odd times in the doings of Montreal Royals, whose only connection with Brooklyn is a working agreement and Manager Burleigh Grimes, who used to pilot the Dodgers.

The latest evidence is the way the Royals, playing their first night game at home, followed the Brooklyn pattern by dragging it out 13 innings—just as the Dodgers and Chicago Cubs went 14 innings under the lights a short time ago. But there are other signs. They started out like a four-alarm fire, dwindled down to a seventh-place smudge and now they seem to be working their way upward.

They didn't gain anything last night, however, for they departed from the pattern by losing the overtime night contest where Brooklyn had won. After leading 2-1 at the start of the ninth, they slowly folded up and let Syracuse Chiefs pull out a 4-2 decision.

Fine Relief Work

Johnny Kroner and Jack Tising were largely responsible for the victory that sent Syracuse into fourth place, one percentage point ahead of Baltimore Orioles, who dropped a 3-2 decision to Buffalo. Kroner drove home the tying run with a ninth-inning triple and then doubled to start the winning rally. Tising did a fine job of relief flinging to earn his second victory in three days.

Montreal wasn't alone, however, in slipping unexpectedly into the losing column. Rochester's league-leading Red Wings ran their winning streak to nine straight by hammering out an 11-7 victory over the third-place Newark Bears, but Jersey City Giants were the 3-1 victims when Toronto ended an eight-game losing streak. Buffalo's victory over Baltimore was its first in seven games.

Ash's Hurling Helps

Ken Ash's six-hit flinging was largely responsible for the Bison triumph, but it was a costly game, too, as Bill Sodd, Buffalo right fielder, hurt his leg in the seventh inning when he over-ran third base. John Pretzels) Pezzullo of Toronto outpitched Jersey's Roy Joiner, giving up seven blows, and he got the benefit of a two-run homer by Frank Reiber.

Rochester and Newark hit each other with everything but the bat bag, piling up a total of 30 hits against six pitchers. Old Si Johnson finally checked the Bears in the last couple of innings while the Red Wings went right on to get their last five runs. Harry Davis paced Rochester's 18-hit attack with a homer and single that drove in four runs.

BELLEVILLE ONTARIO

SHANNONVILLE TO START ON FRIDAY

Entrant in South Hastings Loop Stronger Than in Previous Years

Shannonville, June 7 (Special)—The Shannonville Hawks baseball team who are an entrant in the South Hastings league will pry off the season's lid on Friday evening of this week and will have as their opponents their arch rivals the Latta nine.

Shannonville has a fairly strong team this season and should they practice a little more than they have been they might capture the coveted cup this season. All the players of last season are in the village and are ready to begin playing. Shannonville will also have a new pitcher this season, a lad by the name of Barberstock who did his hurling for Deseronto last season and according to all reports is a fairly good hurler.

According to all reports Foxboro and Cannifton will be considerably weaker this season due to the fact that three of Foxboro's star players have migrated to new fields namely Bud Johnson, Vince Guay and Ab Seeley whereas many of Cannifton's players have retired from the game and they will also be minus their centre-field star, Jack Empson, who was injured last week. Latta will have practically the same team it had last year and although they missed the play-offs the experience gained by the new players should prove to be of great aid.

Evenly Balanced

The league is so evenly balanced this season that one would be trying the impossible to prophesy who will eventually capture the league honors and for this reason large crowds should patronize the games. When you get a league that is evenly balanced and every game keenly contested that is when the crowds begin to flock to the games. Here's hoping anyhow.

Softball Season Opens

The first game in the Melrose rural softball league was played at the second line on Tuesday night with the third liners drubbing the second liners by the score of 17-7. On Friday these same teams played at Melrose and again the third liners were victorious this time by the score of 20-5. However, the second liners are a group of inexperienced players and with a little more practice and experience might surprise the other teams. On Friday night the fourth line played the third line and defeated them by the score of 18-14 in a hard fought game.

It might be mentioned that there are two third line teams enrolled in the league and the last third line team mentioned is not the same team that played the second line.

Melrose (third line): Carman Milligan, Fred Sullivan, Harold Callaghan, V. Pascoe, G. Shaughnessy, D. Shaughnessy, S. Shaughnessy, T. Howard.

Second Liners: O. Lazier, Walter King, Bill Leitch, Peter Coutts, A. Leitch, Art Gilroy, Wilbert MacFarlane, Arthur Whiteman, James Coutts.

WOODERSON O.K. FOR RACE OF LIFE

Breaks Record for Three-Quarter Mile Run in Special Race

nb4m2bti hex-in

Manchester, England, June 7—(AP)—With a new world three-quarter mile record to his credit, Sydney Wooderson was ready to sail for the United States today, "fit and ready for the race of my life in America."

He cracked the unofficial three-quarters standard here yesterday with a 2.59.5 performance in a special race which climaxed his training for his mile race with Glenn Cunningham and two other United States stars in the Princeton invitation meet June 17. That feat gave him possession of the world's best times in the mile (4.06.4), the half mile (1.49.2) and the three-quarters a distance not recognized for record purposes by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

The best previous mark for the distance was 3.00.3 by Wayne Rideout of Texas at Princeton last year.

"I am quite worried about losing my edge aboard ship," he said. "If I were to run the race against Cunningham and the others tomorrow, I am confident I would be in the best shape of my career. I could have gone on to a respectable mile today, I believe".

First Fatal Accident In History of Softball

Toronto, June 7 (CP)—In what was believed to be the first fatal accident in the history of softball, Bill Forsyth died here last night of injuries received when struck by a hard-hit ball.

The 25-year-old pitcher of a dairy team was hit in the stomach by a line drive before he had time to recover from his pitching stance after delivering the ball. Doctors said shock and internal injuries caused death in an ambulance as he was being taken to hospital.

Following a practice here in recent years regarding sports accidents no inquest will be held, Dr. Smirle Lawson said.

Forsyth had been a prominent figure in Toronto softball for 10 years. Two years ago he pitched Brigdens to a city championship.

Surviving are his widow and son, Ronnie, aged four.

Five Home Runs In Innings Establish New Major Record As Giants Defeat Cincinnati

Three Homers in Succession Equalls Another Major League Mark

REDS STILL ON TOP

Chicago, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn All Tied for Third Place

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

Apparently you can tease a New York Giant just so long and then it becomes—a giant.

Heckled by unhappy fans for wishy-washy hitting until their ears burned, New York Giants rose yesterday and answered their critics with a seven-home-run attack that smashed two records, tied three others and completely quashed Cincinnati Reds, National Baseball League leaders, 17-3.

Never have the Major Leagues seen anything like that fourth inning uprising when Harry Danning, Frank Demaree, Burgess Whitehead, Manuel Salvo and Joe Moore blasted out a home run apiece to the right field stands.

That many home runs in one innings established a new record. And coupled with a pair of homers by Moore and Mel Ott earlier in the game tied the all time mark for the most homers in one game. The 15 extra bases gained in the barrage broke the 45-year-old record in the National League for the most extra bases on long hits and tied the American and Major League mark. The last three homers of the inning, coming in succession, equalled another Major League mark.

The Giants didn't begin their Red-wrecking bombing until two were out. Danning opened with his sixth circuit clout of the year. After Ott walked and Zeke Bonura singled, Demaree slammed one out of the park.

Enough For Davis

That was enough for Peaches Davis, who had relieved Johnny Vander Meer on the mound. In came Wes Livengood who promptly walked Tony Lazzeri and threw a home run ball at Whitehead. Salvo followed, and a few minutes later came Joe Moore who came through with his second of the game. Danning ended the inning by fanning.

Freddie Fitzsimmons hurled the Dodgers to a 5-2 triumph over the Pirates, and in the Philadelphia-Chicago game Art Whitney singled in the ninth to score George Scharein with the winning run over the Cubs in a 9-8 thriller. At Boston a two-ply error paved the way for the Cardinals to nip the Bees, 5-3, in the 10th inning.

All those doings made some changes in the National League standings. The Reds are still on top but there is a likely-looking dog fight for third place developing rapidly. Chicago, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn are all trying to crowd into that spot, each with a .512 percentage. The Dodgers are the newcomers to the first division, having been in fifth place the day before.

Over in the other league the world champion New York Yankees were humiliated for the second successive day by Detroit Tigers who found Buck Newsom's pitching good enough for a 6-2 win. Newsom, like Tommy Bridges the day before, limited the bombers to four hits.

And the American League also had some notable doings in addition to the massacre of the McCarthymen. Cleveland Indians rallied in the last two innings to erase a five-run deficit and defeat the Red Sox 8-7. Bill Dietrich came back for the White Sox, after being belted out Sunday, and pitched and socked the Sox to a 7-4 win over the Athletics. And Washington Senators smothered the Browns with six runs in the last inning to win 10-7.

MOUNTAIN VIEW IN FIRST PLACE

Trim Rednersville 12-5 and Increase Margin in District Loop

Rednersville, June 7 (Special)—Mountain View took a firm hold on first place in the Consecon and District Softball League Tuesday night when they gave the orange and black from Rednersville a shellacking to the tune of 12-5. Mumby on the mound for the Hilltop boys seemed invincible in the early frames striking out seven in the first four innings before issuing four free passes. He yielded only two hits both to G. Thompson before blowing but D. Miniker did noble relief duty striking out five and walking two and allowing one hit off Thompson's bat.

Mountain View took the lead in the first frame when they scored three and increased it to six in the second stanza. The orange and black were unable to tally until the fourth when Thompson reached third on a single and two stolen bases and scored on Barber's error.

Mumby walker in four more runs before Miniker relieved him to retire the side by striking out.

The Mountain View crew scored four in the last of the fourth and two in the fifth to win 12-5 over their rivals. Rednersville scored five on three hits. Mountain View 12 on seven hits. The orange and black however, committed eight errors to Mountain View's three. Wannamaker started on the mound for Rednersville to be relieved in the last two frames by Dempsey.

The lineups:

Mountain View: C. Barber 1b; M. Black 3b; W. Wilson c; D. Jones 2b; E. Moy lf; C. Moy ss; C. Mumby p; D. Miniker cf; M. Simonds rf.

Rednersville: B. Thompson cf; M. Thompson 2b; H. Hurley 1b; H. Wannamaker p; G. Thompson c; S. Dawson lf; E. Snell ss; A. Dempsey 3b; L. Ward rf.

A recent editorial in the St. Louis 'Sporting News' reads as follows:—"Both major leagues and the larger minors might well take a leaf from the semi-pro book of Ray Dumont and substitute a push button for the whisk broom when home plate is to be dusted off. By means of a new device, a tube will be run out to home plate at the Wichita stadium, and when a button is pushed, compressed air will blow the dust off the plate.

One of the silliest practices in baseball—and one that does not lend anything either to the dignity or grace of the arbiter—is the custom of having the umpire whip out a little whisk broom and bend over—an act performed with considerable effort by some om the indicator-handlers — to brush off the plate. The pose is all the more incongruous when an umpire turns his back to the grandstand, although some leagues have a rule that he should perform the duty as if he was bowing to the spectators, instead of assuming a position as if he was invoking a swift kick.

It would seem that through the long years the big leagues might have been the first to discover the vacuum-cleaning method, but the fact that it is being introduced by the semi-pros is no reason why the majors and the minors, as well should not use the system, too. Or do league presidents prefer to see the gentlemen in blue, a number of them rather bulky around the mid-riff, doing their stooping during the course of a game often to their embarrassment and thus causing a loss of dignity supposed to surround field officials?"

However, there is one use of the old whisk broom which we found practical during our 18 campaigns wielding the umpire's indicator. On more than one occasion when irritated players swarm around the umpire in protest of a decision and in an attempt to perhaps try and persuade the official to change his ruling, a splendid way in which to ease the strained situation, by the lads in blue, is to whip out the old whisk broom, lean over and sweep off the home plate with gusto, outwardly showing the protesting players that the umps. is not heeding their pleas. On more than one occasion we have seen batters doff their caps and brush off the plate indicating the player was of the opinion the umpire had called a bad one. The introduction of compressed air to blow the dust off the plate would doubtless eliminate this time-honored practice by the players, who couldn't very well criticize a mechanical device.

We understand Nicky Sero is to join the local baseball nine and take over the shortstop's duties when Belleville plays in Picton this evening. With Carson at first, Collins at second, McQuade at third and Sero in the short field Belleville has as good an infield as will be found in the Quinte loop. Incidentally if the local nine can eke out a win over Picton this evening al lclubs concerned with the exception of the F[illegible]s, will be tied. With the Royal visit into this part of Canada practically ended the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" will soon be hard at baseball practice for their opening game versus Picton one week from yesterday. All clubs in the league are anxious to get a peek at the Airmen, whose playing strength is a deep dark mystery to date, as was their hockey ability back in 1937.

James J. Braddock, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, yesterday accepted terms to meet "Tonypandy Tommy" Farr, the Welsh heavy, in a 15 round fight in Earl's Court stadium, London, on July 5th. Farr had a tough time beating the aged Larry Gains recently and now feels he might be able to win back some of his English ring prestige with a win over the ex-champ., who's been in retirement for a couple of years. Braddock will enjoy the ocean trip, no doubt.

Paying tribute to one whose name will always be remembered at otre Dame University a $900,000.00 Knute Rockne Memorial field house was dedicated at the University of Notre Dame last week. The field house for athletes is one of the finest in the middle west.

Although three different softball categories are represented in the City League mushball series, junior, intermediate "C", by Point Anne and intermediate "A", by Corbys A.C., Shell "Oilers" and Dracups, there is still considerable interest shown in the annual city series battle, where all classes and ages scrap it out on a common level. The cry today is —."stop Bawden and the "Oilers," which seems to be somewhat of a tough proposition. Incidentally the softball moguls are holding a big shindig at the Arena Gardens next Monday.

Providing England is awarded the 1944 Olympic games, Montreal will request that the winter Olympics be held in that city. Canadian Olympic delegates contend that Montreal and environs are fully qualified to take care of such a large sporting issue, as Montreal with its large metropolitan populace and easy accessiveness would prove most popular as an attractive position for the 1944 winter games. However, the entire question lies in the balance, as they will have to await London's bid for the snow and ice games of 1944.

We're Telling You—Buck Newsom proved a worthwhile buy to the Tigers from a spectators' viewpoint yesterday Detroit handed the high and mighty Yankees their second consecutive reverse as Newsom hurled four hit ball and the Tigers beat the powerful McCarthy-led nine 6-2....It really is news when the Yankees lose two in a row.... The Dodgers won again and Rosen, the Canadian boy who wanted to play ball in Belleville once upon a time, got three hits in four tries.... The Giants really turned on the Reds yesterday to the tune of 17 to 3, but the Redlegs must have been due for a reverse sooner or later.....War Admiral, that great son of Man o' War, has run his last race and was retired to the stud this week....He won $273,240 in 26 races.

GULDAHL CALLED TO WIN U.S. OPEN

Philadelphia, June 7 ((AP) — Some 165 of the slickest golfers in the United States went nimbly over the Philadelphia Country Club's Springhill course, today as they got in their final practice shots for the United States open championship which begins tomorrow.

The question uppermost in the mind of every competitor is "can anybody hold off Ralph Guldahl, two time open winner and public golfer No. 1? There is a faint hope that Harry Cooper, who has come so close on a couple of occasions and at present is hot will score the lowest and keep the open from becoming a Guldahl monopoly. Guldahl a big phlegmatic fellow, has them all scared to death.

KING AND QUEEN

averages 200,000 feet a second.

The white man first heard of "the great falls between two big lakes" from Indians in 1535, when Henry VIII ruled in England. Father Hennepin and the great explorer La Salle were probably the first white men to see the wonder.

No reigning British sovereign has viewed the cataract until today. The present King saw the Falls as a midshipman in 1913.

Less private will be the rest of Their Majesties' visit to Niagara Falls, where tens of thousands gathered today for a three-and-a-half-hour greeting before the royal train crosses into the United States at 10.30 p.m. E.D.T.

Floodlights on Falls

But while eating dinner in the General Brock Hotel where covers will be laid for 35, the King and Queen will be able to look out over the Falls as swift floodlights play on the teeming waters. During the meal 10,000 children massed in the Square below, will sing. A concert orchestra will play in the dining room.

Waiters who served the King and Queen at state dinners in Ottawa and Vancouver, have been brought to Niagara Falls for a similar service.

The Coach

By BEN AMES

It was bad enough, Roger Kerrick decided, to lose one's girl and flunk one study without a perfectly fatuous coach coming along to bawl one out in front of the team and make a general nuisance of himself nosing into affairs that were none of his business! Just as if one wasn't likely to flunk an exam. Or stay out late a few nights. Life, he decided, had deteriorated to a pretty mess when a fellow couldn't even see his girl and go to a few shows without getting posted. Most likely that prosy old coach had seen him with Diana and was plain jealous.

Diana was always gay, he reflected; he couldn't recall ever having seen her cross or impatient with him, or with any one for that matter. She made all her classes regularly and kept a fairly decent average, although the times she was called down in class for unpreparedness was noticeable. But did she answer back? Not so you'd notice it. Di wasn't the crabby sort. If any one wished to think harshly of her they were welcome; for all she cared! Of course, Di wasn't anything like Betty. Betty was poor and had no sport car or sporty clothes to go with it, and Betty not only won wonderful marks and honors, but she had made the Phi Mu and was being urged to join the Epsilons as well, besides being a guard on the basketball team and a runnerup for the tennis championship of the school. And the greatest difficulty with Betty was that she expected too much of a fellow. Not the sort of things Di expected; not candy and movies and dances and dinners. Rather, Betty expected him to go out and win his letter the first year by spectacular play; or win such high marks that he got some sort of medal.

And so he smiled warmly upon Di and reluctantly admitted that he had to stay in and bone up on English, adding that the fool coach threatened to remove him from the team if he got another seventy!

"Why, you poor lamb, you!" exclaimed Di in her high, shrill voice. "Come over to my flat and have a bite to eat and let's talk it over".

But Betty. Gee, Betty was different. Betty wouldn't let you have a sandwich and cake and ginger ale plus in the afternoon, not much! She'd dig out a few oranges and some other fruit and advise adherence to diet rules as per the coach.

And Betty wasn't wise to herself the way Di was. Betty was unashamed of the dusting of fine golden freckles across the bridge of her small nose; she called them tennis croix de guerres. And she never used powder or rouge or any other makeup.

Somehow most of Betty was uncomfortable, he decided. For Di did not play tennis; it was messy! She hated golf; one had to practice too much. Riding horseback was too hard. And swimming — ugh! Eels and fish and bugs. So Di did none of them—much too messy. And Roger basked in the comfortable warmth of her smile without regretting too much his break with Betty.

At seven he started home toward the boarding house where the crew lived, his thoughts happy and his mind pleasantly exhilarated by the plus ginger ale, and at Elm and Center streets an orange car whizzed out from the murk of the avenue where Di lived and he felt a sharp pain and then started falling immeasurable distances through space. Di had run over him going at fifty-mile speed—it was too much trouble to watch for every jay-walking pedestrian.

He awoke in the college infirmary and Betty sat beside him holding his hand tightly with one hand and holding a Latin grammar and grinding out passages of Virgil from a book propped on a chair in front of her. He was conscious of a great weight lifted from his heart and mind and vaguely recalled having talked a great deal—wondered if he had been delirious. After a while he thought of Diana and he wondered why he wasn't disappointed not to care any more for her, and then it struck him as ludicrous that he should know that he didn't care for her without arriving at the decision through the usual devious method of thinking. Betty saw that his eyelids were fluttering; he couldn't fake unconsciousness any more, so he opened his eyes and asked what happened.

"A girl ran you down over on Center street—only a slight scalp wound, Rog; you can get right after your English tomorrow. And it may save your life—this week in bed."

"You darned little coach!" he muttered, bringing her hand up to his lips. "All you do is worry about me and my grade," and his eyes told her what he couldn't say until he had won the right to ask her.

"Did you think I'd bother to—coach—you if I didn't care?" she said softly, turning away to blink the unwilling tears from her lovely gray eyes.

And just then the nurse came in with a box of flowers from the coach and a cheery note from the crew. Rog's eyes dimmed as he turned to Betty and it didn't occur to him to wonder why Di did not come; he knew she loathed hospitals.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 7 (CP) — Prices bulged from the opening on Toronto Exchange today. Buyers concerned themselves mainly with medium-price and junior golds and bids were raised 3 to 5 cents or more for Kerr-Addison, Aunor, Preston, Uchi, Chesterville and Central Patricia.

Steels and utilities were leaders in the advance on the industrial section and the senior oils were a bit heavy. International Petroleum backed down to 23.

Western oils displayed general firmness. Home added about 5 cents and minor gains appeared for Okalta, Calmont and Davies. Homestead firmed a fraction.

Nickel, Smelters and Falconsridge
Nickel, Smelters and Falconbridge

WALL STREET

New York, June 7.—(AP)—A slow inflow of buying orders floated the stock market into somewhat higher levels today.

The buying was selective, concentrated mostly in the better-known specialties, but gains of fractions to around two points were general near the fourth hour.

Outstanding on the rise were such old-line favorites as American Telephone, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, American Can, Allied Chemical, International Harvester and Du Pont. Also tending higher were U. S. Steel, Anaconda, Bethlehem, General Motors and General Electric.

International Nickel added a small fraction in the Canadian group but minor losses were posted by Lake Shore and C.P.R. Dominion 4s declined narrowly. Montreal Funds dropped .01 9-16 of a cent to 99.87 1-2.

Corporate Bonds stretched previous gains in a leisurely market. Major commodities stuck to a narrow groove.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, June 7 (CP)—Hull bacon hog quotations, up 25 to 35 cents today, topped liveweight and dressedweight groups. Liveweights were $8.75 and dressedweights $12.

Liveweights—Hull $8.75, Peterborough $8.50.

Dressedweights — Barrie $11.50, Hull $12, Peterborough $11.20.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, June 7 (CP) — Prices held barely steady for all classes of livestock in dull trading on Montreal markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts — Cattle 144, hogs 22, calves 61, sheep 2.

Cattle were at a standstill. Late Tuesday, some cattle were sold in small lots at about steady prices.

Calves sold at $3.50 for common drinkers to $7.50 for good veals.

The few hogs offered brought $9.35 for bacons off trucks. Sows were hard to sell.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Kitchener, Ont., June 7—(CP)—Describing the scene as "marvellous", the King stood on the back platform of the Royal train yesterday and instructed two Dominion Motion Picture pool photographers to record the thousands of cheering people who lined the route between Guelph and Kitchener. The King did not take time to get his own movie camera but stayed on the platform with the Queen and the two photographers, T. R. Wilson and Roy Beesley.

Windsor, Ont., June 7—(CP)—Governor L. D. Dickinson of the State of Michigan sent the following message to the King and Queen when they visited here last night:

"In behalf of the citizens of Michigan I am happy to extend to you our sincere good wishes. From across this section of a long unfortified border the people of this neighbor State of Michigan offer our hopes and prayers for a safe and happy tour of Your Majesties' Dominion and our own United States."

Buffalo, N. Y., June 7—(AP) — Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, left their train at the Buffalo Central terminal at 8:40 a.m. EDT today. They are on their way to meet King George and Queen Elizabeth at Niagara Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Hull left immediately by automobile for Niagara Falls.

Stratford, Ont., June 7—(CP)—The "greatest moment" of his life found Harry Turcotia, crippled war veteran, speechless. One of a group of disabled veterans with whom the Queen chatted here yesterday, Turcotia said afterward: " she said that she was so happy to have a chance to talk with me. It was the greatest moment of my life. I could not answer anything. My heart was in my mouth."

London, Ont., June 7 —(CP)—Vendors reaped a harvest of quarters today on the sale of fruit and vegetable hampers to crowds lining the Royal parade route. The hampers, three feet high, made perfect seats and were snapped up as quickly as provided.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 7—(CP)—The Union Jack flying from the home of Dr. C. K. Whitelock is one of two flags presented to the late Captain George Batten by King George V when he visited Canada in 1901 as the Duke of York and Cornwall. Captain Batten commanded the ship in which the Duke and Duchess travelled to Canada.

Ottawa, June 7 —(CP)— Mrs. Rosanna Holden, Ottawa's oldest resident celebrated her 108th birthday yesterday. When King George was in Ottawa last month he sent her a piece of his birthday cake, addressed "to the little old lady who is 107 years of age."

Windsor, Ont., June 7—(CP)—King George had to brush away a smattering of soot from the white page of Windsor's new golden book tonight before signing his name.

Then His Majesty handed over Mayor David Croll's fountain pen to the Queen, who had removed her glove to sign the book.

O.D.A. ELECTS NEW PRESIDENT

Toronto, June 7 (CP)—Dr. G. V. Morton of Toronto today was named president of the Ontario Dental Association. Dr. Fred Conboy of Toronto will act as secretary-treasurer.

Hamilton, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Russell Tyne, 26, took no chance of missing the Royal show today. He brought blankets, a pillow, lunch and two novels and went to sleep on the curb near the area set aside for the King's inspection of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. Others arrived at 4 a.m. but did not dusturb the sleeper.

Hamilton, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Mrs. Martha Knowles, who last saw the King as the Duke of York in her native Blackburn, Lancashire, made sure her boys, James, 12, and John, nine, would see the King and Queen today. She brought them down town at 4 a.m. and set up chairs surrounded by books and lunch. Mrs. Knowles knitted and the boys waved Union Jacks.

RAYNER TO GUIDE THROUGH TUNNEL

Man Who Drilled in Tunnel Is Guide to Royalty Today

Toronto, June 7.—(CP) — George Rayner left today to conduct the King and Queen through the tunnel under Niagara Falls in which he worked as a driller before he rose to head his own construction company.

When the royal visitors expressed a desire to see the noisy tunnel 140 feet below the Horse Shoe Falls, they asked the Ontario Government to obtain as guide an "eminent civil engineer".

Mr. Rayner and Highways Minister McQuesten studied together at the University of Toronto and they shared the same boarding house room. Mr. Rayner earned money after his graduation 35 years ago, as a driller in the tunnel. Then he prospected in the north and finally began building bridges, and highways.

Mr. McQuesten became Provincial Highways Minister. And when the royal command came for an eminent guide during the tunnel trip, the Highways Minister thought of his close friend, who knew the tunnel inside out because he had helped to build it. That's why George Rayner will be the royal guide during the tunnel trip.

Government."

"They (the British Government) are, in fact, prepared to conclude an agreement on a basis of full reciprocity."

Ready to Co-operate

Great Britain, the Prime Minister continued, is ready, in co-operation with France, to give the Soviet union full military support in the event of any aggression against her by another European power.

This is the first time a pledge of co-operation actually has been voiced during the long and complicated negotiations and was apparently intended to reassure Russia of Britain's determination and good faith.

Mr. Chamberlain explained: "It is not intended that the full military support which the three powers will agree to extend should be confined to actual aggression on their own territory.

"It is possible to imagine various cases in which any one of the three governments might feel its security indirectly menaced by action of another European power.

Reviewed in Detail

"These cases have been reviewed in detail and I hope it may be possible now to suggest a formula acceptable to the three governments which, having regard to the interests of other states, will ensure co-operation between those powers in resistance to aggression."

This reference to indirect aggression was designed to counter the Russian attitude toward German intervention in Latvia, Estonia and Finland similar to the intervention in Czecho-Slovakia last March which led to the Republic's partition.

The Soviet has told Britain that if Germany attempted to undermine the constitutional authority in any of the Baltic countries, Russia would move troops into their defence. Technically that would be aggression on Russia's part, but actually, Russia claims, it would be a move to protect her small neighbor states from being swallowed by the Reich.

"There remain one or two difficulties to be resolved," Mr. Chamberlain said, "in particular the position of certain states which do not want to receive a guarantee on the ground that it would compromise the strict neutrality which they desire to preserve."

Reference to Baltic States

This was interpreted as a reference to the Baltic States which have expressed opposition to the Russian proposal that all countries touching Russia's western frontier must be guaranteed by the proposed triple front. These countries contend such guarantees would prejudice their neutrality.

"It is manifestly impossible to impose guarantees on states which do not desire it," Mr. Chamberlain said.

The Prime Minister gave no immediate indication whom he had in mind as the envoy to Moscow.

The envoy, he said, would be instructed to give the British Ambassador, Sir William Seeds, "full information as to the attitude of the British Government on all outstanding points."

Don't Want Guarantees

The purpose in sending a special representative to Moscow was understood to be to end the long delays which have resulted from the exchange of diplomatic notes.

Replying to a question, Mr. Chamberlain said the British Government had been told by Finland, Latvia and Estonia that they did not wish to receive guarantees from the proposed Anglo - Franco - Russian bloc.

To another question, as to who the envoy to Moscow would be and when he would go, the Prime Minister said:

"I can not say at the present moment which representative of the Foreign Office will go. That is still under consideration. The object of sending a representative to Moscow is to facilitate and accelerate proceedings and not to delay them. I have every hope that may be the result."

30,000 CHILDREN

Darkness had fallen and the Royal train then was more than an hour behind schedule. It was feared a special stop would invite disaster with the thousands of youngsters trying to jam their way up to the train and the possibility some would crawl under the cars.

Long Hours in Stand

The children waited in the stand through a hot, sunny afternoon. They whooped and yelled as the train entered the city and again as it approached the stand on the way out. But as it moved on without stopping—although the King and Queen stood on the platform waving—the youngsters' shrieks of relight turned to cries of disappointment and some wept.

Mayor David Croll, who with other civic officials had planned to ride the Royal train from the station reception to the children's stand, expressed regret over the cancellation. The Mayor announced Monday that the special stop had been arranged.

Windsor's 105,000 population was nearly tripled for the Royal visit, thousands coming from Detroit and other points across the border.

Traced River Course

The blue and silver Royal train traced the course of the Detroit River as it rolled into the Canadian National Railways station. Thousands roared their cheers along five miles of the right-of-way and from boats of all sorts. Throaty sirens and shrill whistles joined the chorus. Beyond the water Detroit's lighted skyscrapers gave the King and Queen their first view of an American city on the Royal trip.

The special train, delayed by welcoming demonstrations clear across Western Ontario, was almost an hour late arriving. And instead of spending a scheduled 15 minutes at the station, Their Majesties spent 34.

As a salute to "her international sister city," Detroit sent Mayor Richard Reading and council members to Windsor's official reception held on an arc-lighted platform near the railway station.

The King and Queen shook hands and chatted briefly with the Detroit Mayor, the second American in an official capacity to meet Their Majesties on the Canadian tour. The United States Minister to Canada, Daniel C. Roper, was presented at Ottawa.

The Royal salute was fired by the 26th field battery of Sarnia to mark Their Majesties' arrival and the King's standard was broken from a flag pole.

Signed Golden Book

The King, wearing a grey, pin-striped suit, helped the Queen alight from the train. Her Majesty wore a rose-tinted beige dress with matching hat and fox fur neckpiece.

Cheers rose from 100,000 persons crowded about the station, and on the river an anchored ferryboat, filled with spectators who paid $5 each, sounded its shrill whistle in welcome.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King presented Mayor and Mrs. Croll. Their 10-year-old daughter Constance curtsied and handed the Queen a bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley. The Royal couple later signed the city's new golden book.

After formal presentations on the brightly lighted platform, the King and Queen walked along a line of war veterans, drawn up as a guard of honor, and stopped to chat with several.

The crowd sang "God Save the King" and "Auld Lang Syne" as the Royal Standard was lowered and the farewell salute boomed from the battery at the riverside.

JAPANESE CHARGE

merly was Inspector of Municipal Police here, fired upon a Japanese officer and threatened his men when they entered a British cotton mill in the Pootung district to stop a fight between strikers and non-strikers.

"This case is not a mere issue involving pointing a gun by a Briton at Japanese," a Japanese Embassy spokesman said. "It involves lawlessness towards a Japanese officer in uniform. That Japanese marines should have disarmed Tinkler and manhandled him is expectable under the circumstances.

"We are surprised he was not shot and killed on the spot."

British sources privately charged the Japanese had misrepresented the facts. British officials made no statement.

Taken to Hospital

Adding to British indignation was the fact Tinkler was taken to the Shanghai General Hospital in Japanese - dominated Hongkew, rather than to a hospital in the international settlement.

Two Japanese naval and two German surgeons operated upon him while Japanese said he was struck on the head by a rifle butt—three stab wounds in the abdomen and a foot injury.

(Another source of Anglo-Japanese friction is the detention by Japanese at Kalgan and of Lieut.-Colonel C. R. Spear, military attache of the British Embassy, and Lieut. John Cooper. Domei, Japanese News Agency, in a Kalgan dispatch declared Spear had collected military information which he planned to relay to his superiors through Chinese Communist army wireless communications.)

A 'Serious View'

London, June 7 (AP)—Official circles said today that Great Britain took a 'serious view' of fatal injuries inflicted by Japanese marines on R. M. Tinkler, British employee of a British-owned cotton mill in Pootung, Shanghai.

Officials here said the stabbing of Tinkler grew out of labor trouble which Japanese had been "instigating" to try to make the situation untenable for British-owned industries in China.

FLASHING BULBS

years. He was the official photographer on the liner Empress of Australia which brought the King and Queen to Canada.

Adds to Strain

"The practice of Canadian and United States photographers of using flashlights in the daytime adds to the strain on public personages," Horton said.

"The reason for using flashlights when there is plenty of sunlight is to secure uniformity of lighting, but I do not think it does justice to the person photographed. It tends to make them look too pale. But it does avoid shadows."

"I hope the use of flashlights in the daytime does not spread to England," he added.

Horton was amused at the reluctance of North American press photographers to don top hats and morning coats.

"The idea of British press photographers," he said, "is to be as inconspicuous as possible. The only time we wear morning coats is when lounge clothes would make us conspicious in an assembly where the men are in formal dress. It happens very seldom."

'A' Company, Collegiate Cadets Wins Trophies for Best Showing

Precedent Set When One Company Wins Mount Royal and Strathcona Cups

CORPS COMPLIMENTED

Belleville Collegiate Institute's campus rang to the tread of marching feet and martial music today as upwards of three hundred khaki-clad cadets paraded before the critical gaze of inspecting officers, members of the Board of Education, local militia and a large gathering of proud students and parents.

With the brilliant colors of the Union Jack and the Cadet Corps flag floating in a brilliant June sunshine the cadets made a thrilling picture as they swung past the saluting base in company, battalion and column of route formation where Capt. P. C. Millette, G.S.O., M.D. No. 3, took the salute. With the inspecting officer were Acting-Chairman of the Board of Education, Lieut. Col. E. A. Geen, members of the Board, Reg. Moncrieff, Fred Douglas and John Deacon, Principal P. C. MacLaurin and Cadet Corps Instructor Major J. Howard. Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble represented the Argyll Light Infantry.

In the background the blue-clad members of the Cadet Band under the baton of Ted Hinchey executed stirring martial rhythms as the companies of the battalion of cadets went through foot and rifle-drills.

Prior to the drills and following the general salute, Capt. Millette, accompanied by Major Howard and members of the board together with Cadet Colonel Harvey Theobald inspected the drawn-up lines of cadets.

Mr. Moncrieff Makes Presentation.

At the conclusion of the manoeuvres the cadets were drawn up in a square where Captain Millette established a precedent in the annals of the corps when he presented the Mount Royal Cup, emblematic of the best marching company, and the Strathcona Cup, given each year to the best turned out company to Major Vere Pitcher, Officer Commanding "A" Company. This is the first time that a single company has won both coveted trophies. Mr. Reg. Moncrieff made the presentation.

Cyril Gardiner Best Marksman.

Subsequent to the presentation of the trophies prize winners in the recent Dominion Cadet Rifle Association were presented with medals by Mr. John Deacon, a member of the Board. Cadet Officer Cyril Gardner won the special award for the best shot in the corps for 1938 while other awards were made to Arthur Gerow, Ronald Herman, Irving Kroch, Don Goodwin, Bill McGeechie, Arthur Moon, Fred Whittard, Bruce Cronk, John Gardner, Claude Roper, Robert Knox, Gordon Aitchison and Roy Robinson.

Noticed Corps' Work in Kingston.

In a brief address to the assembled cadets and spectators, Captain Millette complimented the corps on its smart appearance and drill tactics. "Furthermore, I noticed your work in Kingston during the visit of their Majesties, and anyone who saw you there saw a real Collegiate Cadet Corps. Your marching was exceptionally good and the drill deserves special mention. Your band is excellent and it too must be complimented on the splendid work it did while in Kingston on May 21."

Principal P. C. MacLaurin made mention of the presence of Col. W. N. Ponton who, he said, "has never missed a cadet inspection in years. He has always shown an intense interest in the work of the corps, and although I doubted very much that he would be able to put in an appearance here today he is here. Let your cheers ring loud for Col. Ponton." The speaker paid tribute to the efforts of Major J. S. Howard, corps instructor.

The aged colonel who sat in a nearby automobile acknowledged the tribute with a slight wave of his hand.

Acting Chairman of the Board of Education, Lieut. Col. E. A. Geen, added his congratulations on the fine work of the corps, and voiced the hope that government grants cut off some time ago would again be forthcoming for the use of cadet corps work in collegiate institutes and high schools. He evoked loud cheers from the assembled student body when he announced the rest of the day would be a holiday.

Officers of the Cadet Corps are: Cadet Corps Instructor, Major J. S. Howard; Officer Commanding the Corps, Col. Harvey Theobald; Second in Command, George Cherry; Adjutant, Charles Tripp; Quartermaster, S. MacBride; "A" Company, Major Vere Pitcher, Commanding Officer; Harold Bankier, Second in Command; Officers, Malcolm Jack, D. Cook, W. Chapburn, W. Pigden, Cyril Gardner; "B" Company, Major Max Vechter, Officer Commanding; Second in Command, D. McBride; Officers, Harry Tilley, D. Sword, E. Gray, Ron Herman, Ron Morne, J. Pritchard.

LANDMARK NEAR IVANHOE BURNS

Log Farmhouse, Property of John Douglas, Destroyed Tuesday Evening

One of Hastings County's old landmarks passed into oblivion last night when a log farmhouse on the property of John Douglas, one mile west of the village of Ivanhoe was totally destroyed by fire. The house was only recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fleming. A few household effects were saved from the burning building by neighbors.

Origin of the fire is a mystery. The Fleming family had been working in the fields all day and had not lighted a fire in the house. They were milking in the stable when the flames suddenly broke out, racing through the single storey structure at a high rate of speed. This morning the heavy logs were still smouldering although the house and its contents are a complete loss.

The old homestead was built in the year 1846 by a man by the name of George Rollins. The Fleming family had rented the farm from Mr. Douglas and had been living in their new home only a short time.

It was not ascertained whether insurance covered the loss.

REMARKS CAUSE YOUTH'S ARREST

Paul Carlesimo, 18, of Utica N.Y., Refused Entrance to Canada

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 7—(AP)—A youth who identified himself as Paul Carlesimo, 18, Utica, N. Y., was held on vagrancy charge today after Police Superintendent Thomas Holohan said he made "threatening remarks" about King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Holohan quoted the youth as saying he was unable to recall the alleged "threatening and derogatory" remarks concerning the King and Queen, who will enter the United States here tonight.

The purported remarks were overheard in a restaurant to which the youth repaired after being turned back by Canadian immigration officials when he attempted to enter the Dominion over the whirlpool rapids bridge late yesterday, Holohan said. He was later arrested at the request of United States immigration officers.

The Police Superintendent expressed the opinion the youth was a "mental case", but said he would be held until the Royal train leaves this city for Washington tonight.

'WANT PEACE BUT NOT AT ALL COST'

Rumanians Are so Told by King Carol as New Parliament Opens

Bucharest, June 7— (AP)— King Carol told the opening session of Rumania's new corporative parliament today that "we want peace but not at all cost."

Amid applause of his white-uniformed deputies and senators, King Carol declared the nation's budget was balanced, and that the army was being strengthened with credits from trade treaties with Great Britain, France and Germany.

He asked for the support of parliament, but added that under the 1938 constitution which set up his experiment in Fascism the government is responsible only to the King.

KING NOT HURT

London, Ont., June 7 (CP)—King George did not suffer an elbow injury as the Royal train pulled to a stop at Stratford yesterday, The Canadian Press was told authoritatively today. It was reported yesterday his Majesty lurched against the back of the observation platform as the train stopped.

A member of the Royal party denied the King's left arm was bruised and said that he quite likely was "merely dusting his sleeve" when he was believed to be rubbing the injured elbow.

PICTON

PICTON STREETS NOT TO BE OILED

Council Will Revert to Old System of Sprinkling Streets to Reduce Expense

Picton, June 7—In an effort to provide more employment in Picton, the town may not have the streets oiled as in past years, but revert to the old system of having them sprinkled daily with water. At the meeting of the town council on Tuesday evening, Councillor C. Gerow asked the members for their opinions on the matter. He pointed out that $3,000 was spent for oil each summer and of this less than ten per cent went for labor. If the sprinkling system is returned, this money would be available for local works which would give employment. Councillors unanimously approved the suggestion.

Council dealt with the matter of unpaid taxes. It was pointed out that the arrears of ten thousand dollars, are the greatest in the history of the town and legal steps will be taken to collect them.

A letter was read from the Department of Public Welfare, which stated that they had not yet received definite word from the Federal government as to making money available for permanent municipal works, as was reported in the press. They could not co-operate with Picton without Federal aid. The council was investigating the possibility of building a sewage system here, with government aid.

A grant of $200 was made to the local band, the summer concerts to be given at the Memorial Park and at the Tourist camp at the easterly end of the town. A grant of $500 was also made toward the salary of the Deaconess, who it was stated is doing wonderful work.

The council passed a motion asking the Department of Highways to have a 24-hour ferry service at the Glenora-Adolphustown crossing. This had become necessary due to the fact, that traffic had increased greatly since highway No. 33 had been paved from Picton to Kingston.

If the Post Office consents, council will have seats placed on the post office lawn. There is no central park in Picton and it was felt such a resting place would be appreciated.

The home of Donald Bongard, on Macaulay's Mountain at the rear of the town, along with a frame barn and a smaller building were burned yesterday. The fire began in the roof of the house and spread to the barn. Part of the contents of the house were saved. Livestock was removed from the burning barn.

Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Manly Scott celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Monday. They were guests at a family gathering held at the home of their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Scott. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Keith Scott, Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Reburn Scott, Brockville. They received many lovely gifts and messages of congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott were married at Percy Township, Northumberland County, where Mrs. Scott was born. They resided until ten years ago at Cherry Valley, when they retired from the farm and came to Picton to reside. Mr. Scott served on the municipal councils of Athol and Picton, being mayor of the town two years ago. Both have been active for many years in church work.

45,000 PERSONS

Their Majesties were still seven minutes ahead when the silver-and-blue train left fo Brantford at 1.03.

17,000 Scholars Welcome.

When the train carrying the King and Queen came into sight, 17,000 county school children loosed a deafening welcome. They had been waiting hours in sweltering temperature to greet their Majesties and when the burnished train reached Woodstock the mercury was at 78 above.

Eighteen persons were presented to their Majesties. Mayor J. E. Lewis and Mrs. Lewis were the first to be presented. Alderman L. Utting was the next. He and Mayor Lewis were the only members of the council who met the Sovereigns. The others gave up the privilege so more representative citizens would have the opportunity.

MAYBE THE PROMOTER CAN TALK HIMSELF OUT OF THIS

New York, June 7 (AP)—When a report got around the New York world's fair grounds that a 24-foot python was on the loose, workmen and boy scouts started hunting for the big snake.

New York city police—a skeptical lot—started hunting instead for the promoter of the giant monsters show, Cliff Wilson, and when they found him served him with a summons.

The accusation: Circulating false reports that a python named Jumbo had escaped.

EARLY SCREEN ACTOR DIES

Nantucket, Mass., June 7 (AP)—George D. Fawcett, 77, famed stage and screen actor, died last night. Fawcett, whose stage career began in 1886, later appeared in moving pictures, usually in character parts, with Greta Garbo, John Barrymore and other stars.

70.000 WORKERS RETURN TO JOBS

16 Detroit Factories Opened Under New Contract Till June, 1940

Detroit, June 8 (AP) — Seventy thousand automobile workers returned to their jobs in sixteen Detroit factories today with the ending of the Briggs Manufacturing Co. and Graham-Paige Motors Corp., strikes.

Eight Chrysler Corporation plants were reopened in addition to seven Briggs plants and the Graham-Paige factory. Two Chrysler plants in Indiana also were affected.

Briggs workers ratified Wednesday a new contract between the management and the United Auto Workers Union (Congress of Industrial Organizations) which called the strike. The contract then was signed and given immediate effect. It extends to June 7, 1940.

HALF MILLION JOIN IN ACCLAIM TO KING. QUEEN

Junction Point of Nations Roars Welcome to Royal Couple

BORDER IS CROSSED

By J. W. TIBBS

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 8 (CP)—The scenic junction point of two good-neighbor nations fittingly put on the greatest combined demonstration of loyalty and welcome to King George and Queen Elizabeth in 22 days of a Royal tour that has become one bedlam of acclaim after another.

It was Canada's proud goodbye and a typical American hello.

In daylight and darkness, with Niagara's competing thunder only second best, nearly 500,000 persons yesterday roared their enthusiasm as the Royal couple broke their Canadian tour for a visit to the United States.

From the rear platform of their Royal train the King and Queen waved farewell until they reached the American side of the international bridge lined with soldiers of the two countries.

Wednesday Busiest Day.

Behind them their Majesties left the activities of the busiest day of their Canadian journey, a day in which they visited seven Ontario cities and were cheered almost continually between stops.

CROWDS THRONG WIDE AVENUES TO SEE ROYALTY

Most Elaborate Pageantry in History Seen Along Royal Route

500,000 SPECTATORS

No Free Nook or Cranny to be Found on Famous Parade Route

By SAM ROBERTSON

Washington, June 8 (CP)—Along this capital's wide avenues and broad squares vast throngs today thundered an American welcome to King George and Queen Elizabeth with ceremony and pageant more elaborate than at a Presidential inauguration.

The unprecedented spectacle of a British King and Queen being welcomed in the United States attracted excited thousands, eager to share in the reception.

Under Scorching Sun.

They gathered long before a scorching sun rose to give the King and Queen a taste of characteristic Washingtonian early summer hot weather.

President Roosevelt, Vice-President John Garner and all other high government officials constituted the formal welcoming committee for their Majesties arriving from Canada in their blue-and-silver train at 12 noon E.D.T.

But long before, the forerunners of a vast unofficial reception committee of plain Americans of all colors, races, creeds, took places behind tautly-drawn steel cables extending from Union Station to the White House.

Long before arrival time more than 500,000 men, women and children were jammed along the sidewalks in the sweltering heat.

Peterborough Youth Killed By Train

Lindsay, Ont., June 8 (CP) — Charles Edward Outwater, 16, Peterborough, died in hospital here today of head injuries received when he fell beneath the wheels of a freight train.

Police said Outwater, with two companions, Gordon Macklin, 25, and Allister Hutchinson, 18, had boarded the train in Peterborough. There were no witnesses to the accident as Macklin and Hutchinson had jumped from the train before it reached Lindsay. They knew nothing of the accident until stopped by a railway officer.

An inquest will be held.

Royal Tour of Canada One of Great Triumph

By R. K. CARNEGIE

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 8 (CP)—After the most exhilarating experience of their lives, King George and Queen Elizabeth are in Washington today as guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

When they left Canada last night—to return again after four days on American soil—they had a deep satisfaction no British Monarchs in history had been able to feel. After twenty-two days among Canadians, they knew the fullness of Canada's affection for them.

The first Royal tour of Canada, a tremendous success since their Majesties stepped ashore at Quebec, has undoubtedly broken every concept of such an event, either in Canada or the United Kingdom.

Almost at once, the King and Queen realized they were among a people unaccustomed to the rigid practices of Royal ceremonial. Canada's greeting was warm, informal and frankly joyful.

Their Majesties Friendly.

In return, their Majesties have been just as friendly and informal. Their thoughtfulness about accommodating arrangements has been amazing at times. They have missed meals to keep engagements with the crowds, sat in rain without protection so that everybody could see them.

They seem to enjoy shaking hands with well-wishing laborers from the Royal train platform quite as much as meeting the great of the land in formal presentations.

War veterans from Quebec to Victoria are their firm friends. Hundreds of thousands of school children will never forget them.

The unconscious informality of the tour has made it a particularly memorable event. Their Majesties, during the visits to Quebec, Ontario and the Western Provinces, shook the hands of scores of veterans and chatted with many.

They found the greatest crowds in Montreal and Toronto; particularly demonstrative throngs in Montreal, Brandon, Man., Melville, Sask., and Niagara Falls. The high point of the tour was on the Great Divide, more than a mile above sea level in the Rockies, and the low point at the 2,800- foot level of the Frood Nickel Mine at Sudbury.

Weather Generally Kind.

Two days they spent aboard the liner Empress of Australia in fog and ice on the Atlantic crossing. Since then they have struck cool weather and hot—yesterday it was 80 in the shade in Western Ontario. But the weather has generally been kind to the King and Queen and the millions who turned out to cheer them.

In 22 days and nights the Queen has worn more than 40 costumes—only four times has she worn an ensemble twice. Her clothes, the majority of them in soft blue colors, have been admired by style-conscious

This picture, historic in its significance, was taken just as the King and Queen met Secretary of State Cordell Hull of the United States, who received Their Majesties on the American side of the international bridge at Niagara Falls, N.Y., in the name of the American people. The Queen is at the right; Mr. Hull has his back to the camera. Between them can be seen King George and Mrs. Hull is at His Majesty's right. Sir Ronald Lindsay British Ambassador to the United States is at the extreme right.

Good-Will Tour to Bancroft By Chamber of Commerce Is Delightful Experience

Forty-Three Local Members Make North Trip to Cement Friendship

SPLENDID PROGRAM

Bancroft, Ont. (Staff)—Hastings County's lake-studded, stream-slashed northland capitulated to a peaceful invading army here last night.

The vacation centre of the finest county in Ontario, in a wide sweeping gesture of welcome, as wholehearted, as sincere as that given British Royalty throughout the width and breadth of the Dominion in the past few weeks, forged another strong link in the silver chain of friendship that already binds the far-flung sectors of this ninety-mile oblong of Ontario, that is Hastings.

Hardy scions of noble sires; sturdy offspring of the men who hewed their homes out of the living forest, in whose hearty handclasp and deep voice of greeting lurks the very spirit of their pioneer forebears, and through whose efforts mainly the primeval forests of the north have been transformed into places of verdant useful beauty, lay down their "arms" and extended their hands in a mighty grip to their "blood-brothers" of the south.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Washington, June 8 (CP)—When the strains of "God Save the King" are played in the United States for the Royal visit the music is familiar to all Americans. It is the same as "My Country 'Tis of Thee".

New York, June 8 (CP)—Lines formed early today outside the city hall as eager men and women waited patiently for one of 60,000 tickets being distributed for places on the west side express highway to see the King and Queen during their New York visit Saturday.

Washington, June 8 (CP)—William Russell, tentmaker, was the most distressed man in the United States capital today. Because the British Ambassador liked the tents Russell made to protect guests at the Royal garden party in the event of rain, Russell received one of the coveted cards of admittance to the party. But he lost it. Frantically, he urged police to watch out for Card No. 68.

Washington, June 8 (CP)—At least one Congressman did not hunt for a gray topper to wear to the Royal garden party today. Representative Wilburn Cartwright (Dem.. Oklahoma) said he intended to wear a cowboy hat.

New York, June 8 (CP)—One million school children will see the King and Queen Saturday in Central Park. The city's independent subway line will provide free transportation for those children who can reach the park by its facilities.

Western Ontario Shout A Paean of Welcome Until Their Majesties Entered U.S.

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Western Ontario's farmlands soaked in a provident rainfall today and the men and women who gain livelihood from the soil, much as they needed rain, were thankful it had held off until the King and Queen had passed into the United States for new acclaim.

For two days beneath bright, blue skies Western Ontario shouted a paean of welcome until Their Majesties were out of sight last night aboard the royal train crossing the Niagara River. Then from the west gentle rains blew in as if they had waited for royalty's departure.

It rained on London's big royal band concert, but the royal train was hours gone. It sprinkled at Niagara Falls, but the King and Queen had seen the great cataract's wonder and were well on the way to Washington.

All day, as the mercury soared above 80 again, the smiling King and Queen acknowledged the tumultuous cheering that met them along the sunlit way. This will be Ontario's fondest memory—of the royal couple smiling, nodding and waving in answer to the countryside's welcome as the royal palace travelled through.

Seven Official Stops

Seven official stops were made, at London, Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls. Their Majesties came to each as radiant and gracious as they had been Tuesday when their streamlined train stopped officially at four places and unofficially at half a dozen more in passing between long lines of Ontario folk.

Only once did the strain seem to tell. That was when King George cancelled a scheduled trip through the wind tunnel at Niagara Falls when the long day was nearly over.

A little later Their Majesties stepped to the balcony of the General Brock Hotel in an entirely unscheduled appearance to beam upon thousands of school children who shouted: "We want our King." As an open maroon motor car bore them to the station for Ontario's send-off, they seemed refreshed and eager to greet all whose voices rang through the summer night.

Canada's Adieu

This was Canada's adieu to Their Majesties until they slip into Quebec Province June 12th from New York State to proceed to the Maritime Provinces. They will spend three days in the Maritimes before sailing June 15th for England.

Yesterday the King was determined there should be no such delays for the crowds as on Tuesday, when the train was so far behind schedule at Windsor that officials were afraid to stop it at a special children's stand—fearing some child might get beneath the wheels in the darkness. To that end, Their Majesties went without luncheon yesterday.

They breakfasted at London and set out 10 minutes before schedule, the King in the undress uniform of a field marshal and the Queen in a grey ensemble, carrying a grey parasol to protect her from the broiling sun. The schedule caught up with them quickly, because they made an unscheduled visit with Great War veterans at Westminster Hospital.

500,000 Greet British Sovereigns as They Ride Down Pennsylvania Avenue to White House Amid Scenes of Pageantry

By A. E. FULFORD

Washington, June 8 (CP)—King George and President Roosevelt, heads of the two greatest democracies in the world, rode in triumph to the White House through the streets of this historic capital today.

It was a free-and-easy, enthusiastic welcome, in characteristic American fashion, marking the arrival for the first time in history of the King and Queen of Great Britain in a city which bears the name of the General who led a revolt against England a century and a half ago.

"How are you, I'm glad to see you." were President Roosevelt's first words to the King as he shook

INVENTION TO AID THE DEAF

Johannesburg, June 8 (CP)—Through the invention of a South African, deaf persons may be able to see their voices and thus achieve correct pronunciation.

Mrs. Tikvar Alper, who spent several years in research work in America, calls her device a "thyration inflection developer." It reproduces voice inflections on a beam of light. It is hoped the invention will reduce considerably the difficulty experienced in teaching mute children to regain use of their vocal cords.

NARROWLY MISS DEATH

Toronto, June 8 (CP)—When the automobile she was driving last night skidded on wet street railway tracks and crashed over a foot-high safety curb, Mrs. W. K. Shier missed dropping 60 feet into Wells Hill ravine. The car turned on its side leaning against the guard rail while Mrs. Shier and Herb Goldie were assisted out.

Man is Seen to Run Away from Yard and Board Truck

Staines, England, June 8—(CP)—An explosion early today preceded a fire at the Marley Tile Company close to the villages of Bedfont and Ashford, Middlesex. The villages were badly shaken by the blast.

Five minutes before the explosion, workmen on bicycles said they saw a man run from the yard and board a truck which drove off toward Staines. The explosion was believed to have occurred in the storehouse where cylinders of oxygen and 500 gallons of oil were ignited. The fire was brought under control after nearly two hours.

Baby Owl's Cries Sound Like Canary

"Romeo and Juliet", two baby great-horned owls recently captured by Gordon Moon in Hannah Park, Trenton, are becoming somewhat of a public attraction, and the youthful naturalist and his charges may win country-wide renown before the owls are turned loose in their native haunts.

While petting Juliet on the head yesterday, Moon discovered that she sang like a canary, only more softly. He is now exhibiting his singing owl to his friends.

The birds were found huddled on a limb of a hollow tree above their dead mother who had fallen mortally wounded before the gun of a hunter. The father owl can be seen almost any time at night sitting on the roof of a house overlooking the coop where his offsprings are kept.

REV. S. C. PARKER NEW MODERATOR

Toronto Minister Given Acclamation, the First Since 1931

Midland, Ont., June 8—(CP)—In the first acclamation since 1931 Rev. Stuart C. Parker of St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, was elected moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church here last night.

Two others had been nominated, Rev. Dr. S. Banks Nelson of Hamilton and Rev. James McKay of London, but both withdrew in favor of Dr. Parker.

Circumstances today kept him from looking on the moderatorship as purely an honor, the new moderator told the assembly. "It is rather a job and an honor, but primarily a job, and its magnitude is only revealed when the moderator has ceased technically to exist—that is, when the assembly has risen.

"A great deal has to be done, and I thank you for believing that I am willing to do it."

Rev. A. R. Skinner of Toronto, who nominated Dr. Parker, paid tribute to his scholarship, culture, and work within his own congregation and the city at large. A graduate in Arts of Glasgow University, Dr. Parker won the Black Theological Fellowship in his final year and for two years lectured in Divinity at the University.

Dr. Parker joined the Tank Corps during the Great War.

The assembly voted thanks to Rev. Dr. H. Munroe of New Glasgow N. S., who had acted as moderator since the death of Dr. Donald MacOldrum, who was elected at the last assembly and died a short time after his appointment.

Body Of A. Goodwin Recovered From Lake Ontario Yesterday

Picton, Ont., June 8 (Special)—Lake Ontario's "graveyard", that stretch of dangerous water off the southern shores of Prince Edward County near Waupoos, gave up its dead after defying human efforts for a period of weeks.

Yesterday a body, later identified as that of Andrew Goodwin fifty-one year old Picton resident drowned with James Miller, 24, also of Picton when their eighteen-foot skiff capsized off Green Island approximately one mile from Waupoos, was found floating in the water a short distance from where the double tragedy is thought to have occurred.

Buffeted by wind and water, the body was unrecognizable but was identified by a motor-drivers licence found in a pocket, by Chief of Police Bert Biddie and Constable James Lovelace. The body was found by Gerald McKenzie and Melvin McConnell local residents while searching for a boat that had drifted from its moorings.

The finding of Goodwin's body intensified the search for that of Miller, that had been abandoned a few days ago. Nine boatloads of fishermen and private citizens immediately combed the surrounding waters in the hope that Miller's body would be found. No success had been reported at a late hour.

Dr. D. S. Lighthall, Chief Coroner for Prince Edward County announced there would be no inquest.

Born in Waupoos, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Goodwin, the late Andrew Goodwin had resided all his life on his farm in his native village, and in Picton. His widow was formerly Miss Jessie Ryan. Left to mourn his passing besides his widow are one daughter, Margaret, supervisor of Prince Edward County Hospital, two sons, Teddy and Jack at home; two brothers, Daniel and Claude of Maynooth, Ont., and one sister Mrs. Gertrude Lambert, of Picton.

MANY VISITORS AT LABORATORY

Open House Proves Revelation of Man's Combat Against Injurious Insects

The scientific developments of man's combat against the ravages of injurious insects and the method of eradication of these insects as employed by the Department of Agriculture through the Belleville branch of the Entomological Department proved most interesting and highly educational to a large number of visitors at the Parasitical Laboratory during the annual open house held yesterday.

All through the day and early evening the interested public was escorted through the various buildings composing this industry on tours of inspection. The Dominion Entomology Branch at Belleville was opened just ten years ago, and the progress of the efforts and advancement of the employees of this scientific research department has been astounding, their research saving the farmers and fruit growers of this province millions of dollars which otherwise would have been a total loss through the destruction of ravenous insects.

Extensive additions were in evidence to house the thousands of tiny insects, which are being used for experimental purposes, Mr. A. B. Baird, entomologist in charge, revealed. Parasite insects are daily being used in efforts to lower the number and possibly eliminate other injurious insects in man's fight against these tiny creatures, which are our worst enemies and most destructive creatures. The actual operations of elimination of the Larch Sawfly, Satin Moth or Lecaulum Sele were actually seen by the visitors who were shown the method of employment as put into practice by the department towards the saving of Canada's resources of land and forest.

New experiments to possibly eliminate or bring to the minimum the Greenhouse Whitefly, Mealy Bugs and Aphids, all destructive insects, were shown to the large and interested galleries during the tour of inspection yesterday. The Department employees were most courteous and enlightening in their explanations.

KIWANIS DEBATES CITYMANAGERSHIP

P. C. MacLaurin and Fred S. Deacon Give Interesting Details on Plan

With Mayor Bone and Members of the City Council present, the Kiwanis Club conducted a debate, resolved "That City Managership is the best form of Municipal Government," P. C. MacLaurin conducting the affirmative and Fred S. Deacon the negative. There was no decision given but Mayor Bone in speaking at the conclusion stated the meeting was most instructive and valuable ideas had been gleaned for the guidance of the council when this question is again considered. "Dick" Flynn was in the chair with Jack McIntosh as song leader and Leo B. Riggs at the piano. George Shepherd in a most pleasing voice gave two solos. Joe Imlah, Inter City Club Chairman, secured the names of about twenty members who will pay an inter-club visit to Peterboro on Friday night. The cars will leave from the Queens Hotel at four o'clock.

Mr. MacLaurin in opening the debate, explained the two forms of municipal government, one under a manager and one under mayor and council, stating that the mayor in either case was the titular head and that the manager only carried out the expressed wishes of the mayor and his council. He stated City Managership was not a new form of government as it had been in operation for 25 years and there were 437 cities and towns in the United States at the present time under this form of government and thirteen or fourteen in Canada. "The argument that a city manager centralized the whole system of municipal government was entirely a false idea," said the speaker. "All a city manager would do is to carry out a charted plan of the council and there would be continuity in the control of civic expenditures." He explained it would do away with politics in government which is not so prevalent in Canada as in the United States. I submit there would be better service under a reduced taxation.

Fred S. Deacon argued that under our present municipal government the council becomes a taxing and collecting agency due to the numerous government regulations and that a city manager if appointed would not have must to do and could only be obtained at a high salary. The speaker showed the number of fixed costs, especially in the City of Belleville and that a city manager would only have the administrative and Public Works Department to manage and this expenditure would only be about $73,000 a year, which is only about four percent of the total expenditure of the city in a year. The administrative and Public Works Department are the only two bodies which come under the direct supervision of the council. Mr. Deacon advocated relief from the high cost of taxation in all cities. Cliff Baragar expressed Kiwanian appreciation for the splendid addresses.

PETERBORO C.G.E. DEFEATS DELORO

Soccer Season Opened by Alderman R. Cotton of Peterboro

Marmora, June 8 (Special)—First football game of the season was played at Deloro on Wednesday evening, the visitors being the C.G.E. team from Peterborough. Alderman R. Catton of Peterborough opened the season and wished Deloro the best of luck.

Deloro kicked off and the C.G.E. pressed hard at the beginning of the game. In a rush down the field Brooks shot over the bar. McMaster of Peterborough missed with an open goal. There was clever midfield play by both sides during the game. McMaster forced a corner. It was well placed but went behind. Curtis had a good shot but failed to score. Elliott had a fine shot but cornered two to the C.G.E. net. Goodhere playing at R.H. had a fine shot but missed. McMaster put the ball just over the top of the goal.

Second Half

Deloro pressed at the start. Gazley at left wing missed the ball. McMaster missed twice, but with good tries. Brooks of Deloro and McKenzie of C.G.E. were put out for remainder of the game by the referee for quarrelling. Elliott made a good try from the right ring but missed. Downie and McMaster had good shots for C.G.E. Sproul in clearing hit J. Hart in the face, the ball going to Downie in an offside position and he scored. Deloro pressed hard for about five minutes but could not score. McMaster got the ball from a clearance of his back and running from the half was line scored with an unassailable shot. The game ended with the score 2-0 for the visitors.

Outstanding C.G.E. players were Mitchell, McMaster and Downer. Outstanding for Deloro were W. Hart, Brown and P. Gray.

COLLEGE HONOR CLASS OF '39

Graduation Dinner of Albert College Held in Ackerman Hall

The Graduating Class of 1939, Albert College, was entertained at the annual graduation dinner held last evening in Ackerman Hall, a gala and happy event for the students who have reached an important stage in their careers. The stately Hall was bright with flowers and the long tables were beautifully decorated for the occasion. The guests of honor, the boys in flannels and their smart college blazers and the girls in their lovely graduation gowns, were seated at a central table.

Following the banquet a brief program was enjoyed, with Fred Beatty, Fergus, Ont., president of the class of '39 acting as toastmaster. After the usual toast to the King, the toast to the graduating class was proposed by Milton Lake, Sault Ste. Marie, president of the Student Council, and responded to by Jack Findlay, Toronto. An interesting feature of the evening was the reading of the final edition of "The Torture" the newsheet containing amusing comments of recent events at the college. This was presented by Ralph Musgrave, Ottawa, over his public address system. The toast to the co-eds was proposed by Tom Woolley, London, Miss Helen Wilson, Vancouver, responding. The toast to the college was proposed by Harry Atkinson, Belleville, and responded to by the Principal, Dr. Bert Howard.

Later in the evening the closing social function of the year took place, the occasion being the party in honor of the graduating class. The guests were received by Mrs. Howard and Miss Jessie B. Tuite, dean of women. The affair was a splendid success. Olie Wager and his band, Oshawa, provided an excellent dance program. The thrill of their graduation eve and of happy friendships which will endure through the years, made their last party at Albert College an event which the graduates will always cherish.

Good Advertising

Rrepresentatives of Combermere at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce "Cavalcade of Goodwill" Meeting held in Bancroft last night do not believe in "word-of-mouth" advertising.

They told lucid stories of a sixteen pound pike and a nine pound pickerel that had been caught in the waters of a lake near their home and backed up the story with the fish in "person."

RELATIONS NEAR

Newspapers charged that, as Asahi put it, Britain "is seemingly endeavoring to intimidate Japan," that she is adopting a stronger attitude in the belief the United States will back her and because she fears the resistance by General Chiang Kai-Shek is weakening.

The latest of the incidents creating the present situation was reported last night by Domei, the Japanese News Agency, which declared a foreign warship, "apparently a British cruiser," fired upon a Japanese air transport east of Hong Kong.

Other incidents include:

The death of a British cotton mill employee at Shanghai of wounds suffered in a fight with Japanese marines who entered the mill to stop a clash between working employees and strikers.

Army Officers Arrested

Arrest by Japanese army men at Kalgan of two British officers, Lieut.-Colonel C. R. Spear, military attache, and Lieut. John Cooper. Spear is charged with seeking information on Japanese military operations in a restricted area'

The refusal by the British Consulate at Tientsin to surrender from the international settlement four Chinese wanted by the Japanese as suspects in the slaying of a Tientsin official.

The Admiralty spokesman said the death of the Shanghai mill employee, R. M. Tinkler, was in itself a small incident, but it created a "very unpleasant impression."

Japanese in Shanghai charged Tinkler pointed a gun at a Japanese officer. British authorities, meanwhile, reported the mysterious death ast night of a second mill employee and announced an autopsy would be conducted to determine if he were poisoned.

Issue Ultimatum

Shanghai, June 8 (AP)—British sources said today the Japanese had issued an ultimatum to authorities of the British concession at Tientsin demanding the surrender of four Chinese given refuge there.

If the four—suspected by the Japanese of slaying S. G. Cheng, official of Japanese-dominated Customs at Tientsin—were not handed over, the Japanesee threatened to "isolate completely" the concession by barricade. Concession officials referred the matter to the Foreign Office in London.

'Teachers Should Not Compete'

Toronto, June 8—(CP)—Dr. C. C. Goldring, Superintendent of Schools objects to school teachers working at jobs other than teaching during their summer vacations.

"I don't think teachers should compete on the open market when they already have good jobs," he told the advisory vocational committee of the Toronto Board of Education yesterday.

BRITISH SOVEREIGNS IN THE UNITED STATES

Canadians having enjoyed the visit of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth for three weeks, now have seen them cross the border of the friendly Republic, the United States, whose President with Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain the royal guests for four days. Then Canada will again have the joy of entertaining the Royal Couple as they make their way through the eastern part of Canada, Quebec and the Maritimes.

At the present time Their Majesties have already been tasting the full measure of United States hospitality, which is known all over the world. Entering United States territory last night, they have today been spending the first of their four days with the American people. News columns tell of the enthusiasm shown by the people of the United States as represented today in Washington and of the Sovereigns' pleasure on the first American visit ever paid by a reigning Monarch and his Queen.

These four days make history as the leaders of British democracy meet the leaders and the people of American democracy in a festive pageant of goodwill.

DESTINY OF THE AMERICAS

Canadians have shown Their Majesties something of the vast territory which they have built up into a Dominion under British guidance and with British institutions and yet with a freedom which is unique even in modern democracy. The King and the Queen have crossed the Dominion traversed a new route on the way back, but many months of touring would not give a complete view of this wide-spread nation.

Had Columbus not discovered America, but some other man, in say the days of the ancient Roman empire, who can tell what Canada and the United States would have been like today? No one knows. It would have depended in large measure upon the founders of new states in America. But it is clear that in all likelihood there would have been many nations in Canada and in the United States, which in course of time might have resulted in some such network of nations as populate Europe with all the inborn difficulties over racial boundaries and material resources.

Fortunately for America, it fell to the lot of England, France, Spain and Portugal to be the founders of the new world. And now in the course of time, North America is divided into two great countries and Mexico, with sufficient of resources, with only two boundaries and bordering on three oceans.

Canada stands by destiny one Dominion with half a continent. so bound together that there is no risk of strife within. So Canada can go forward to her greater destiny as a nation among the nations, just as the United States is as a unit fulfilling her destiny. Both these countries lack the ancient history of the Old World nations and miss many difficulties of Europeans.

It is these two great countries that King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth are visiting, both being bound to Britain by ties of race and largely of constitution. The situation of the North American nations is unique in the world today as they look out upon a warlike trend across the ocean.

Today Americans are welcoming Their Majesties and must take pride in the large expanse of the English-speaking democracies and in the association of their ideals with those of Britain. There is goodwill among these peoples. The royal visit will tend to increase those bonds of friendship.

In the United States the King and Queen are receiving a welcome typical in its enthusiasm of the great people of the Republic. Destiny as in all international events has been kindly to the nations of North America.

THE SEASON

Canada has entered in the most glorious period of the spring season just at the time when her King and Queen have crossed the continent from coast to coast and seen her cities, her towns and villages and her countryside. In all this grandeur of setting of nature, Canadians know their guests have taken keen delight. It was an apt choice to have the Royal visit timed for the months of May and June, even if Canada can boast other seasons, especially her autumn of which she is very proud, and which she would like the King and Queen to enjoy on some future occasion.

We are members of one great body, planted by nature in a mutual love, and fitted for a social life.—We must consider that we were born for the good of the whole.—Seneca.

SEA BALLAD

I heard near an ancient ale-house
A chaunt that will ever abide:
Close by lay a ship with furled yards,
Neath a wharf, on a fallen tide;
A snatch of an awesome sea-song,
That some dreadful day will sure hear,
And the end of the earth draws near:—

"Now, as ocean-depths are no more,
Must the sea-dead all arise,
Shaking draggled locks with salt hoar,
From their slime-filled frightened eyes:
Ha! for robes they clutch at thin waves,
Less nakedness should condemn;
Paid off from their sunken sea-graves,
Their ships that went down with them.
Hail, Ho-Ho, the Jolly Rogers;
And the ear-ringed buccaneers;
Slave-dhows with their fettered lodgers,
A-sweat, and in groans and tears;
Press-gangs with musket and cutlass;
The sheep-lad reared on the down,
Who fled the shame of his wronged lass,
For to ship from Plymouth Town . . . .

What followed was lost. Red thunder
Voluminous rolled afar.
Its lightnings, away down-under,
Must have blanched the steersman's star.
Yet sunshine shone still about me;
In the Inn sang sailors gay;
Outside the Port lay the blue sea;
And, beyond, that distant Day.

FRENCH IN CANADA

IN A RECENT EDITORIAL THE Ottawa Journal pays a tribute to the purity of the French Language as spoken in Canada.

x

The Journal's comments are interesting as a linguistic study and convincing as an argument. To sustain the argumentative phase of them, testimony is marshaled by the Buffalo Times. Here are two especially striking instances, the one relating to an international event, the other to an important literary occasion. The former is concerned with the speeches at Geneva of the Hon. Raoul Dandurand, of whom the Geneva correspondent of the widely-read Paris newspaper, Le Petit Parisien, says:

x

"It was not without emotion that I heard a Canadian speaking French. It is the purest French, the most authentic and clearest, of all French spoken. He (M. Dandurand) speaks a French that has not changed. It is our own language in France that has been evaporated little by little and has become more or less sophisticated by the invasion of foreign words and argot. In Canada the French language remains unchangeable and without promiscuity."

x

The literary instance is this: "A celebrated French poet visited Canada to deliver a series of lectures in the province of Quebec. After he had recited some of his own pieces along with samples of French folk-lore he was invited by a French-Canadian gentleman of literary taste to visit several of the older countries, go among the 'habitants' and listen to their 'chansons.' He did so and was amazed, remarking to his cicerone, after one rendering: 'That is how my grandmother sang'."

x

In a word, the French of Quebec is the French of Montaigne and Villon, and by a later but classical tradition the French of Moliere, the purest and most idiomatic of all French, the bone and sinew of the language. It was this realization which caused a French-Canadian to say, after listening to an exceptionally brilliant speech by the late M. Viviani: "Superb, but we speak purer French in Quebec."

x

The Ottawa Journal's survey will go far to remove a somewhat prevalent and much mistaken impression that the French of Quebec is a kind of dialect. The language in all its pristine clearness and vigor is preserved in that province.

x x x

GROVER WHELAN, POOBAH OF THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR, has reluctantly admitted that the attendance of the World's Fair this year may not go over 50,000,000. This is much below the estimate originally advanced which will mean that the deficit this year will amount to millions which it is hoped will be made up next year.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

There is Such a Thing as Biliousness

It is hard to understand why physicians, particularly those who have graduated lately, refuse to admit that there is such a condition as billiousness. Everybody knows and has seen the condition and the majority of people have had at least one attack.

Sir Arthur Hurst, M.D., in the British Medical Journal says:

"When the patient wakens the next morning with a dull headache, dirty tongue, no appetite, and the conviction that life is not worth living, he will tell his wife that his bad temper is due to his liver". And he will usually be right. "I believe that the patient who says he is billious or "liverish" is often correct and that functional disorders of the liver are far more common than organic diseases. Poisons reach the liver from the stomach, intestines, gall bladder, and spleen—too much food, food poisoning, and general infections."

A test of the ability of the liver to filter out poisons at this time will show that it is only about 50 per cent efficient.

Fortunately, the liver is not only the largest and most important organ in the body, but it is the most adjustable, able to recover its normal condition in a short time.

Dr. Hurst states that "a light diet, and avoidance of alcohol will relieve sallow complexions, lack of appetite, tenderness and aching in region of liver, mental slowness, and irritability in most cases."

Dr. Hurst is a great believer in the old-fashioned Epsom salts (magnesium sulphate) in these cases. He suggests that a small dose—enough not to cause the stool to be too loose—should be taken before breakfast every morning and also a tablespoon of olive oil three times a day, one-half hour after meals.

The first thought, of course, would be the prevention of billiousness by avoiding large meals and particularly salt, canned, preserved and spiced meats and fish; stews; goose; duck; oysters and shellfish, alcoholics, fats, oils, and gravies. More fresh meat and fresh fish and green vegetables should be eaten.

Ft. Erie Engineer Completes Last Run

Jas. Marshall Completes 49 Years Service of Railroading

NATIVE OF BELLEVILLE

Fort Erie, June 8 (Special)—The figure thirteen will always stand out as an important one to Engineer James Marshall, veteran Canadian National engineer, who started his long career in Belleville, Ontario, terminal forty-nine years ago. In the first place, his railway experience consists of three spans of thirteen years with the same road, the Canadian National, and in the second instance he will never forget engine 913, the total of which added is also thirteen. That engine met with three accidents in the first four months of his career as a fireman, turning over twice, the last time on a trip to Montreal, on the old Grand Trunk, and two engineers and a conductor lost their jobs as a result.

Sirens shrilled in the local rail yards Saturday night as Engineer Marshall brought in his engine from Port Colborne, to retire at the age of sixty-five. Four years ago Mr. Marshall won $5,000 in the Irish sweepstakes, and has kept that nest egg for his reclining days. He plans to travel, south in the winter, and to either Nova Scotia or Northern Ontario in the summer.

Mr. Marshall resides on Jarvis Street, Port Erie West. He came to Port Erie from Belleville twenty-eight years ago.

Started at Sixteen

He commenced railroading at the age of sixteen, as a call boy at Belleville, his birthplace, but after working there two years, went to St. Paul, Minn., where he obtained a job in the shops of the Chicago and Great Western. From there he went to West Superior, Wis., with the Great Northern, where he also worked as a shopman. Then he got a job firing with the same line, and recalls one time as he stoked an engine on what was known as The Overland Route, the late James L. Hill, famous western railway pioneer and president of the line, rode in his own private coach on the rear end. During his earlier career he fired for William Best, who latterly was organizer of the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen. The Overland Route was between Duluth and St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. Marshall returned to Belleville from the West and went firing for the old Grand Trunk, with which road he spent thirty-nine years, twenty-eight of which passed at this terminal. He was in seven wrecks all told during his railway service, one on his first trip as a fireman. A brother, Thomas Marshall, was for several years engineer of the famous International Limited running out of Montreal, and now lives retired in Belleville.

Mr. Marshall likes to hunt, and plans to do some this year. He also is very fond of travel and expects to do a lot of that while his health permits. He is in fine physical shape, and feels, according to his own words, "as good as he ever did."

A son, Thomas, is employed on the Canadian Customs staff here, and a brother-in-law, Robert Palos of Buffalo, was for a number of years pitcher on the famous old Bridgeburg baseball clubs which a quarter of a century ago feared no other club on either side of the border. That was in the days when Bill Tait, Bert Bennett, Henry Lewis, Dolly Robinson, Dicky Graham and Dee Stephenson were prominent in baseball activities.

Engineer Marshall has a large circle of friends here who will join in wishing him happiness in his reclining days.—The Times-Review Ft. Erie.

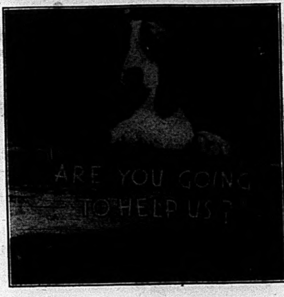
"A Puppy Speaks"



"I am a little mongrel dog.

I was born in a stable two years ago. Four of my brothers and sisters were placed in a bag and drowned in a nearby creek. My master, a stern-visaged cruel-looking man, kicked my mother until she cried out in pain. I do not know what breed my father was, but some of my brothers resembled the bull-dog family. My mother was a fox-terrier.

The day after I was born, through some stroke of good luck, I crawled away in the straw and hid. Some time later I heard the voice of my master, swearing at his inability to find me. Then I heard the whimperings of my brothers and sisters as they were unceremoniously hustled into a large bag and dumped in a corner.

I heard my mother whimpering for her family. Then she yelped in pain as a heavy boot struck her, once, twice, three times. The hair rose on my back. My puppy temper flamed. But what could I do. Then the stable door opened and closed with a loud bang.

I crawled out of the straw and ran to where my mother lay, softly crying with pain. Her large eyes opened wide in amazement when she saw me. She tried to get up, but sank back as broken ribs stabbed sharply into her side. I nozzled my wet little nose close to hers. She told me to leave at once or I would suffer the same fate as my brothers and sisters. I did not want to go but she insisted. She told me there were kind humans in the world who loved dogs, and if I were lucky I would be able to find one who would give me a good home."

"That night I crawled out of the barn, and was alone in the world."

"That was two years ago. Today, I am still a mongrel puppy, but I have the finest home a dog could wish for.

"For over a year, I wandered along the highways and byways of the land. Many times I was driven away when I approached a house in search of food. Many times I was advised by other dogs to give certain places a wide berth because folks did not like stray dogs. But many times. I was gathered into the arms of some small boy and tenderly cared for until his parents sternly refused to let him keep me."

"But one day I wandered into a large city. Gingerly I went my way about the streets, as I had heard of the famous dog-catchers. Hungry, friendless, my tongue lolling out of my jaws from thirst. I walked furtively along the hot sun-drenched streets. I went into a butcher shop in search of a bone. I was unceremoniously kicked out. I tried another. And a kind-hearted man in a white apron gave me meat.

"With some food in my stomach I felt better. I saw some small boys near a store and gingerly approached them, my tail wagging a friendly greeting. One little fellow grabbed me, "Gee, pup, you're not bad", he grinned. My tail wagged in joy. It was the first friendly gesture I had received in some time. And if you humans knew how much we dogs appreciate such things, a kind word instead of a rough kick, a piece of meat instead of a stick, a pan of water in summer's heat instead of a curse, you would not hesitate the next time you see a homeless puppy."

"My new master took me home. His father looked askance at me when he first saw me. 'Too bad, son, but we can't keep him, he said. Tears filled the boy's eyes, 'Please, Pop,' he pleaded I thought perhaps I could help. With a feeling akin to fright I walked slowly to where the boy's father sat in his chair. I rubbed my head against his leg. My tail wagged steadily. I looked up at him, and he must have read the plea in my eyes. His large hand came slowly downwards—and my heart crept up in my throat. Then the hand slowly stroked my head. Once. Twice. Three times. 'O.K. son, came the gruff voice, 'I guess you win.' I was scooped up in the joyful arms of my young master. 'Yippee,' he cried, 'at last I have a pup.' From that day we have been firm friends. The family have grown to love me—and the time I woke up in the night and heard some men at the door, I barked so loud that they went away, why the folks thought it was swell of me. Then, when little Bessie fell in the creek and I jumped in and tugged her to shore, why they made a tremendous fuss over me. But they did not know that it was just a small way we dogs have of showing our appreciation of kindness."

"However, in closing, I must add that human beings are allright. They mean well, even when they seem to get mad at us dogs. But some of them are terribly forgetful. For instance, in these hot summer days, if they would only place a vessel containing water where a thirsty dog could drink, they would be doing a tremendous lot toward making the lot of the average dog happier. If they threw us a bone or some food once in a while, it would teach us to treat them with greater respect. We appreciate all these things. And when we trot up to them with a friendly wag of the tail, a pat on the head would work wonders."

"Of course some dogs are born in wealthy homes, or homes at least where they are well cared for. They don't know the hard trials of a dog's life. But we do."

"And our best friends are those splendid men and women who have organized themselves into what is called the Humane Societies. These kind-hearted folks have our interests at heart and are going out of their different ways to see that we are well treated. Not only we dogs, but other animals who have not the power of speech or other methods of conveying to humans what we require, or want to do".

"These people are doing a grand job, and it is the earnest appeal of every dog, mongrel or thoroughbred, and other dumb animals, that on Saturday when the Belleville Branch of the Humane Society holds its annual Tag Day, that you humans will help them to help us towards a better, more comfortable mode of living—to relieve our sufferings, and make the world as nice a place for animals to live in as well as the more fortunate human beings.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Better Live Alone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

B. and I have known each other since childhood. We were in high school and college together. B. has all the sterling virtues, but she's a killjoy. We both have fairly good jobs, and since graduation, have shared an apartment. But if I want a couple of friends (boys) in for cards, she groans.

I'd like to have Sunday light suppers, and have friends in for parties—we have a dandy kitchen. But I'm so sick of B's complaints. She is positively anti-social, soured on life and people, though why, I don't know. She's very pretty, clever and could be a success. She is surely putting a cramp in my style.

Dissatisfied

Lose no time in breaking up your partnership with B. who may very seriously cramp your style not only now but later. Youth, especially bread-winning youth — girls and boys who have jobs— are entitled to "good, clean fun".

And to waive one's birthright to good time, on account of a morbid friend, embittered and anti-social for no reason at all, is a grave mistake. Go in for some other arrangement.

Parents' Hands Off

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I used to go with a group of which my parents highly approved. They were young people connected with our church. There I met a man somewhat older, who seemed to take a special interest in me, and one night asked me for a date.

Due to his belonging to a different church and being older, my parents did not smile on our friendship. I went off on secret dates with him, and I soon found myself in love. He asked me to marry him and I accepted.

We planned several ways to tell my family, but they always evaded meeting him. Finally we eloped. We are as much in love as ever, but my parents are doing their best to keep us separated. I love them, of course; they've been so good to me. But I can't see why they don't let my husband and me live alone.

So many married people are unhappy, but we are devoted. Their chief objection to my husband is the difference in religion and the fact that he is fourteen years older than I am.

Happy Wife

Considering the road to Reno and the thousands of unhappy pilgrims with which it is congested, it seems to me your parents are looking for trouble when they try to break up a conspicuously happy marriage.

Suppose your parents' and your husband's ways of worshipping are different. Why not be tolerant and let each live according to the dictates of his conscience? The difference in age is not insurmountable. Stand pat; don't let your parents interfere.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Atmosphere of Wedding Reception Definitely on Social Side

While the atmosphere of the marriage ceremony is impressively dignified and on the side of formality, the atmosphere of the reception is social, keyed to a gay and lively pace.

First the bride and her family must decide what kind of reception they wish to have—can afford to have. It may be an informal gathering of only relatives, or relatives and a few close friends, at the bride's home, with the serving of the simplest of refreshments. Or it may be a "catered" wedding breakfast or reception held at the bride's home, or in the ballroom of a hotel, assembly room or club. Since the reception follows immediately after the marriage service, the hour of the reception is determined by the hour of the ceremony. A morning or High Noon ceremony is followed by a wedding breakfast. An afternoon or evening ceremony is followed by a reception.

At the reception, whether formal or informal, the bride and bridegroom and the bride's attendants are part of the receiving line. The best man and ushers never have places in this line. As to the other members of the receiving line, there are no fixed rules. Customarily, however—and appropriately too—the bride's mother, who is the hostess of the occasion, stands first in the receiving line, to greet the guests. Often the father of the bride stands next to the bride's mother. He may, if he prefers, greet the guests after they have passed down the line or he may mingle with the guests. Next, usually, is the bridegroom's father; then the bridegroom's mother; then the bridegroom; at his right, the bride; at her right; the maid (or matron) of honor; and at her right, the bridesmaids.

As the guests arrive, they are greeted first by the bride's mother, and then they pass down the line shaking hands with each member of the receiving line, saying a few words of greeting, and making some gracious, appreciative and appropriate comment. They congratulate the bridegroom and wish the bride happiness. (They do not "congratulate" the bride, remember.)

When all the guests have been received and bridegroom and their parents take their places at table.

Usually there is a bride's table, at which are seated the bride, bridegroom, and the members of the wedding party. The bride sits at the right of the bridegroom; the best man at the right of the bride; the maid (or matron) of honor at the left of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids and ushers are seated alternately.

There are certain definite traditions to be observed also in the seating arrangements of the parents' table. The bride's mothers, as hostess, sits at the head of the the table, and the bridegroom's father, who is the male guest of honor, sits at her right. Opposite the bride's mother, as at a formal dinner, is the host, the bride's father. At his right is the bridegroom's mother, the woman guest of honor. At the left of the bride's mother is the officiating clergyman and his wife, if present, sits at the left of the bride's father.

At this table too will be seated close relatives of both families and sometimes intimate friends of the brides parents, and distinguished guests. They are seated with careful regard to their relationship to the families, their age, and all other important distinctions that are appropriately demanded.

At a small wedding, where only members of the immediate families and perhaps a few close friends are present, the plan often is to have only one table. In this case, the bride and bridegroom and their attendants sit at one end of the table. But in the seating arrangements for one table, it is important that the same conventions as outlined above be observed.

GIVE SLEEPY STOMACHS THIS 3-WAY HELP

In these modern days, we live at a fast tempo. We don't have time to "work up an appetite" before we sit down to breakfast. In the rush from bed to breakfast to work, we need a "waking-up" meal specially designed to get us quickly into our stride. Every morning, we should have a breakfast which does these three things:

① Gently WAKES sleepy stomachs: The mouth-watering deliciousness of Kellogg's Corn Flakes immediately stimulates the flow of gastric juices, rouses the appetite. Their special appetite-teasing, malty flavour is a closely-guarded Kellogg secret.

② STARTS you quick: Golden, crisp Kellogg's Corn Flakes are rich in energizing "carbohydrates." When you tackle a bowlful of these appetizing flakes with sugar and cream, your system is supplied with instant "fuel."

Hundreds of thousands of Canadian families save time and trouble by serving Kellogg's Corn Flakes—the "30-second breakfast." Order a package today. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Nervousness in Children Not Uncommon, Says Dafoe

In the past few days I have seen several infants suffering from what we term "hypertonicity". This rather fearsome word when analyzed just indicates a condition wherein the nervous system has become upset.

You see, in each of us, right from the moment we are born, there are two sets of nerves. One—the sympathetic nervous system—has complete charge of us in moments of stress. For instance, if we hear a blood-curdling scream in the middle of the night, we get strange sensations: our hair seems to rise, our skins feel prickly and we perspire freely. Under such circumstances, our sympathetic nerves cause complete cessation of all digestive processes and prepare the system for whatever sudden and unexpected move it may have to make.

The other type of nervous system is that parasympathetic. The action of this system is opposite to that described above. These nerves carry on the ordinary processes of digestion and excretion of food. Thus, when the parasympathetic nerves are in full control, the food we eat is handled without difficulty by our stomachs. It passes from the stomach readily when digestion is complete because the muscles leading to the intestine are relaxed.

But when the parasympathetic nerves lose control to the sympathetic, then these muscles cease to function properly, and the muscle at the end of the stomach contracts so nothing can pass into the intestine.

In adults, these two sets of nerves are beautifully balanced. Each set plays its part, with the parasympathetic nerves in control most of the time. Occasionally, however, after we have been passing through a particularly trying time, we often find that we don't feel well; we are restless, we don't sleep well as we should, and the food we take lies heavy in the stomach. What has happened is that for a number of days, due to stress, the sympathetic nerves have been in control, and refuse to relinquish this control to the parasympathetic nerves. In other words, we just can't relax.

Now when this happens to adults, just think how much more likely it is to occur in the case of an infant whose nervous systems haven't had a chance to become well balanced. He has just started using his very complicated nervous systems. For many months it is not by any means perfectly controlled and during this time many babies suffer from imbalance between these two systems of nerves.

The Quintuplets all have good nervous system, and they have never given us any trouble because of hypertonicity. But, then, we have always been very, very careful of them. You see, nervous babies are usually born into nervous homes. So if the physician finds a case of hypertonicity, he will usually find a nervous mother or father.

Cash Prizes Offered For Best All-Round Canadian Menu

(By Jessie Read, Home Economist)

Every Canadian eye is focussed toward the one major event in Canadian history for this year. There is barely an idea in connection with commemorating the event that has not been worked out in some manner. Interviews with those who are to play a major part in their entertainment and pictures of the places where happenings are to take place have filled the pages of the press for some months. Even the food they are to eat is being discussed and one of the leading milling companies has sponsored a contest with many cash prizes for the best all-round Canadian menu that might be served to the Royal Visitors.

That should be rather an interesting subject, by the way, when you think that all the provinces have dishes that are distinctly native to that province and yet, there are certain dishes that are universal across Canada. For instance although we speak of British Columbia as a great apple province, good apples are pretty universal across the Dominion so that Apple Pie has become a standard Canadian dish. Serve this with Canadian Cheddar cheese to make it a dish that will almost sing "O Canada."

Canadian bacon is a familiar way to describe back bacon outside of the borders of our own country. There are many ways that smart Canadian cooks have learned to present this very attractive Canadian food and it is surely one thing that might be included in some way in an all Canadian Menu.

Of course the French woman in Quebec will naturally think of her delicious pea soup, so much a part of the habitant menu; and other women will think of corn dishes heretofore almost unheard of in the Old Country.

Salads—and in particular fruit salads—would be innovations to visitors from overseas—who as a matter of fact think that some of our very best arrangements are nothing but dyspeptic concoctions bent on thoroughly destroying the human race.

Certainly this visit of the King and Queen to Canada is making everyone thoroughly Canadian-conscious in a way that they never have been made before.

The milling company's ingenious idea of a "typical Canadian menu for Royalty" should appeal to women. It will make them put on their "thinking caps" to figure out just what foods are most genuinely Canadian. It should bring out a lot of interesting information which no one thought of seeking before.

WHILE there are testimonies of activity and notable progress, judging by the lunar transits for this day, there are also hints of perplexity, doubts and pitfalls. The mind may be singularly brilliant, inspired and keen. At the same time it will be susceptible to fraud intrigue or some other confused or suspicious status. Vigilance (or a flash of intuition) may avert a betrayal.

Those whose birthday it is have planetary support for a progressive and expansive year with many ambitions in line for fruition. This mind will be unusually keen, creative, original and intuitive, but there is prospect of being lead into intrigue, schemes or queer situations by duplicity or subtlety. Be wary of suspicious propositions and doubtful friends.

A child born on this day may have a brilliant, original, creative and progressive mentality, and while being successful and popular it may be subject to impositions or peculiar involvements.

Where the King and Queen had a Home of Their Own

When Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, spent a brief rest period at Jasper Park Lodge on their journey eastward through the Rockies, they had a little home all their own. Except for two personal servants, they lived alone in Outlook Cottage, a beautifully appointed log cabin on the shore of Lac Beauvert and they expressed great pleasure at the opportunity to enjoy complete rest, free from formality. The photograph shows them on the lawn in front of their cabin. Looking across the lake, they could see the white peak of Mount Edith Cavell. They afterwards visited it by motor car and climbed on the ice of its glacier.

A message of appreciation was sent to S. J. Hungerford, Chairman and President of the Canadian National Railways by Their Majesties from the Royal Train after their departure from Jasper. The message, signed by Alan F. Lascelles, acting Private Secretary, read: "The King and Queen left Jasper this morning with great regret and much appreciate all that was done for their comfort and amusement during their enjoyable stay there."

AT THE McCARTHY

"TOM SAWYER DETECTIVE"

Dozens of Mark Twain's most famous (Mississippi) native characters, headed by the inimitable "Tom Sawyer" and his pal "Huckleberry Finn" are now on the McCarthy Theatre screen in a grand new adventure—never before told.... "Tom Sawyer Detective", a story guaranteed to charm every adult and thrill the heart of every boy and girl..... it is swift and true-to-life.

It deals with the adventures met with by the two boys when "Aunt Polly" sends them down the Mississippi to Arkansas for a visit with "Aunt Sally Phelps" and her gentle but hapless preacher-husband, "Uncle Silas."

"Tom" and "Huck" arrive to find the normal peace of the community shattered by the murder of "Jupiter Dunlap", a pumpkin-headed fellow who has been helping "Uncle Silas" with all the farm-work. "Jupiter's" brother, "Brace", the town dandy, sets out to pin the guilt on "Uncle Silas", who will not let him court his daughter. He is aided in this design by the old man himself, who actually believes that he struck "Jupiter" fatally.

The boys solve the mystery in a typically Mark Twain series of events. Into the plot enter a pair of Mississippi River sharpers, whom the youngsters have met on the steamboat, a mysterious twin brother of the murdered "Jupiter" a cache of stolen diamonds, and capping everything, a midnight hunt for clues in a "haunted" graveyard.

A great deal of credit must go to a large cast of supporting players who bring to life dozens of unusual native characters created by Twain.

Companion Feature

"The Thundering West" with that popular western star, Charles Starrett, lovely Eris Meredith and the Sons of the Pioneers, the screen's ace cowboy singers and musicians is being presented as a gala second feature presentation in addition to "Tom Sawyer Detective", and for action, thrills, romance and old-time western adventures no finer screen production could have been selected to make this show more pleasing or entertaining to every member of every family in Belleville or district. In addition to the two outstanding feature hits, the programme also includes a clever novelty "The Big Birdcast" a color rhapsody in full technicolor and also another episode of the thrilling "Flying G-Men" chapter play.

AT THE BELLE

"LOVE AFFAIR"

A romance moratorium of six months, designed to prove that two people are worthy of each other's love, is the basis for much of the drama in "Love Affair," co-starring Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer at the Belle Theatre.

The story traces the lives of a sophisticated young lady and a Continental heart-breaker who fall in love on board a liner bound for New York, where a fiance and a fiancee are waiting.

Reluctant to forsake their chance at happiness with this one great love, the two break off the prior betrothals and embark on a six-months trial during which they give up their lives of ease for worthy careers, agreeing to meet on a given day to learn if their love has weathered the mutual sacrifice.

A minute before the eventful meeting, however, destiny intervenes making the young lady the victim of an auto accident. Believing she is permanently injured, she disappoints her lover, feeling her disabled condition may be an insuperable obstacle to their happiness. The evolution of this intriguing situation mounts to a touching, heart-tugging finish.

Directed for RKO Radio by Leo McCarey, "Love Affair" features Maria Ouspenskaya, Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn and Maurice Moscovich in Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer's support.

"Twelve Crowded Hours"

How a newspaper reporter, conducting a one-man crusade against a crime ring, is caught, together with his sweetheart, in a dangerous net of underworld intrigue with almost disastrous results, provides a unique background for the romantic by-play in "Twelve Crowded Hours," which stars Richard Dix is announced as the companion feature.

Dealing with the numbers racket prevalent in many large cities, the picture also tells a vivid story of how an innocent man is inadvertently sentenced to prison through newspaper articles meant to destroy the racket, and the means the writer of the articles goes to in aiding the unfortunate victim to establish his innocence and to bring to justice the racket leader.

Dix portrays the newspaper reporter, and Lucille Ball his sweetheart. Allan Lane is the innocent man who is sent to prison, and Cy Kendall is cast as the leader of the numbers racket.

With its unique double-plot heightening the suspense, and the hectic romance between Dix and Miss Ball in the shadow of danger, the intensely exciting story rises to a tense climax that is aided by a sensational smash-up between a car and an armored truck.

Lew Landers directed the RKO Radio production, and Allan Lane and Donald MacBride head the supporting cast, which includes Cyrus Kendall, Granville Bates, Bradley Page, Dorothy Lee and John Arledge in prominent roles.

A film of unusual interest to be presented on the same program is titled "Television," revealing for the first time on any screen this timely form of entertainment that is destined to play an important part in the lives of all humanity.

Belleville Intermediates Just Present Picton with Game After Leading Up to the Ninth

Joe Dimaggio Hits Triple in First Appearance Since His Injury

SENATORS WIN TWO

Tony Lazzeri Released by Giants as Former Yank Made Two Boners

When it comes to presenting the opposition with runs and baseball games on the proverbial silver platter, the Belleville intermediates are top-ranking, a No. 1 and consistent to say the least. After Sammy Ellis, Belleville's new-found portside flinger, had literally pitched his heart out and limited Picton with four singles in eight innings, his teammates repeated their performance of a week ago and actually booted yesterday's Bay of Quinte League ball game away to Picton as the Wilkinsites literally presented the Prince Edward County ballsters with four runs in the last two frames by virtue of errors of commission and omission alike to have Picton win 7 to 6 in a ninth inning rally, that sent some 500 Prince Edward ball fans home quite satisfied with the pastime despite the fact it was as cheap as the good earth.

Belleville scored in the second and led the parade until one was out in the ninth and looked much the better with Ellis pitching superb ball in the clutches, as he limited Picton with four singles during his sojourn on the mound. With one out and the bases filled in the ninth, Keith Weeks was rushed to the mound in an effort to stem the Picton attack and struck Lockyer out for a second out and only one to go. Abbott tapped to Simpson, at short, and the latter stood holding the ball as the tying run crossed the plate without an effort to make the easy out at first, which would have won the ball game easily.

The Belleville nine touched Abbott, Picton's moundsman for a total of 11 safeties, while Ellis limited Picton to four hits and Weeks gave up two, one being registered as Simpson stood holding the ball in mid-field. Ellis was slightly wild, however, as he walked nine, but he was effective in the pinches with five timely strikeouts. Abbott whiffed nine local batters and passed up three via the four ball route. Russ Collins led both squads with three hits in four attempts and handled six fielding chances for one error. Carson and Ellis each counted two hits each as only Abbott was credited with more than a single bingle off the combined pitching efforts of Ellis and Weeks, but costly errors were attributed to the mounting Picton score as runs were scored by the homesters in the sixth, eighth and ninth following glaring Belleville errors of both commission and omission in the infield. Belleville's big inning was the eighth when Ellis, Riggs and McDonald hit and Churchill walked to have five Belleville batsmen reach first without an out being registered and three runs scored. Two walks, a hit by Church and an error gave Picton two in the sixth, while cheap hits by Hudgins and Shannon, coupled with a walk and error gave the homesters two more in the eighth. Simpson erred on Dainard's grounder to open the ninth and coupled with his second muff, two walks and hits by Abbott and Evans the ball game was over and a bitter pill it was to Skipper Wilkins and the two local pitchers, who hurled winning ball, only to have their teammates toss it away. The loss drops Belleville into the league cellar position the reverse being their second in as many starts.

EDDIE SCHRIEDER STOPS 'MILKMEN' IN 10-2 VICTORY

Corbys A. C. Move Up in League Race as Result of Win

TEAM HITS HARD

Juniors Gaining Much Needed Experience Playing in Senior Loop

Scattering twelve hits evenly, Eddie Schrieder pitched the Corbys A.C. to a rather one-sided 10 to 2 win over the Citizen's "milkmen" in a city softball game at the Flats last evening. Steve Hook labored on the mound for the losers and gave up an even dozen hits, but many were extra bases and the Barnett-led nine hit in a most prolific manner in the clutches.

The issue was rather evenly matched until the sixth when Corbys unleashed a terrific barrage of hits to score five runs on four hits, interspersed with a brace of errors. Red Townsend's kids scored their first tally in the second as Yarrow, Mallory and Clare hit in succession, while the former two hit successfully in the sixth to score again, Mallory led the juniors on the attack with three safeties.

Art Cole with a home run, double and single led the hitters of the night with a perfect batting average while Jimmie Barriage collected three safeties, as did Ed Schrieder to help his own cause. Hook whiffed five as Schrieder struck out four. The juniors failed to touch Schrieder for a single extra base hit as each team collected an even dozen safeties.

The lineups:

Citizen's Dairy: Samain ss; Ehler 3b; Hook p; Yarrow lf; Mallory 1b; Clare cf; Doherty c; Cooke 2b; Graham rf and Carson.

Corbys A. C.: J. Barriage lf; Cy Barriage ss; Kiser rf; Reid 3b; Cole 1b; Murray 2b; McMartin cf; Knott c and Schrieder p.

NEWARK BEARS FADING SLOWLY FROM CONTENTION

Even With Beggs and Gallagher Back From Yankees the Team is Off-Form

LEAFS WIN ANOTHER

Score 8-2 Victory Over Jersey City for Third Straight Win

Since Rochester Red Wings took the play and first place away from Newark Bears and Jersey City Giants, the Bears have been fading slowly despite the combined efforts of Manager Johnny Neun and New York Yankees.

The Yanks sent back Pitcher Joe Begg and Outfielder Joe Gallagher and although both are performing admirably the team has not reacted properly. In spite of yesterday's victory over Rochester by a 7-1 score the Bears have slipped steadily until they are back in fourth place.

The victory over Rochester wound up a Red Wing winning streak that had reached nine games. George Washburn gave the Wings six hits to win his third game of the season.

While Newark was trouncing the league leaders, Jersey City lost to Toronto Maple Leafs, 8-2. The Leafs got to Frank Pearce, Jersey City starter, for nine hits and four runs in the first seven innings, and then plugged his successor, Johnny Hubbell, for the other four runs.

Syracuse Chiefs and Baltimore Orioles downed Montreal and Buffalo, respectively. The Chiefs clouted Kemp Wicker, who was charged with the defeat, and Xavier Rescigno for 14 hits and a 5-2 victory. John Bottarini and Ed Longacre were the big guns in the Syracuse attack, each getting three hits while Jake Mooty held the Royals to seven hits for his seventh win of the season.

The Orioles scored a 6-5 decision under the lights, pushing across two runs in the eighth and smothering a ninth inning Buffalo rally with a fast double play after Savino had homered for the herd.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Claude Passeau, Cubs: Muffled Giants on five hits, fanned seven and got two safeties himself.

Bill Swift, Pirates: Shut out Bees and drove in one of Pittsburgh's two runs.

Bob Johnson, Athletics: His double and two singles paced 14-hit attack which brought 5-4 victory over Detroit.

Lefty Gomez, Yankees: Pitched seven-hit ball until heat caused retirement in eighth and batted in one run on squeeze play in beating White Sox.

Bob Estaello and Cecil Travis, Senators: Former hit two homers to lead way to 10-4 victory in first half of doubleheader while latter tripled with bases loaded in ninth of second game for 13-9 triumph.

"Shakeup" Sets Yankees Back On Baseball's Winning Trail With 5-2 Win Over White Sox

Errors in Ninth Fatal after Sammy Ellis Had Held Opposition Till Then

ALLOWED FOUR HITS

Belleville Squad Touched Abbott for Eleven Blows in Pastime

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer)

The world champion New York Yankees at last know what it is like to have a shake-up. Alarmed at the team equalling its worst slump of the season—two losses in a row—Manager Joe McCarthy not only benched one man, but he switched the sixth and seventh men in his batting order!

The effect was instantaneous. Joe DiMaggio, making his first appearance in centrefield in more than a month, hit a triple to bring in a run in his first time at bat and the Yankees were away to a 5-2 victory over Chicago White Sox.

At the time he injured his right leg in a game April 29 DiMaggio had hit safely in seven consecutive contests and had an average of .435. Although he got no other hits yesterday, his reputation still was good enough to get him an intentional pass in the fifth inning, filling the bases and figuring in the three run rally which was New York's margin of victory. Lefty Gomez earned his fourth triumph of the season.

Indians Beaten Twice

Washington Senators handed a double drubbing to Cleveland Indians 10-4 and 13-9, coming from behind in the second game with a seven-run outburst in the ninth inning.

Philadelphia Athletics barely kept half a game ahead of the Senators in the sixth place with a 5-4 decision over Detroit. The A's never were behind, but Lynn Nelsen scarred a seven-hit pitching performance with home run balls to Dixie Walker and Rudy York in the last two innings.

Boston Red Sox' game at St. Louis was rained out and rescheduled in a doubleheader today.

Reds Recover

Cincinnati Reds recovered from their thumping by New York Giants sufficiently to squeeze past the Phillies, 5-4, even though outhit by 13-8.

The Giants who had collected 20 hits and seven homers the day before, were held to five safeties by Claude Passeau as the Cubs opened their series with a 7-1 victory. Four errors helped Chicago along and so ruffled Manager Bill Terry of the Giants that he released Tony Lazzeri, who made two of the boners.

Bill Swift's first start of the season resulted in a 2-0 shutout in favor of Pittsburgh Pirates at Boston. He batted in one of the runs.

St. Louis Cardinals drove Van Mungo out of the box in the sixth inning and beat Brooklyn Dodgers, 7-3 in a night game.

PIONEER MISSIONARY DIES

Winnipeg, June 8—(CP)—Pioneer missionary of the Canadian North, Rev. Samuel A. Martin, 67, died at his home in Portland, Ore., Tuesday, according to word received here last night. He retired from the ministry last June. Mr. Martin followed the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway to the northern port of Churchill and was known as "the man who put the church in Churchill".

PITCHERS HOLD THE SPOTLIGHT

Ottawa, Utica and Gloversville Hurlers Collectively Allowed 11 Hits

Good pitching or good batting, in themselves, often are enough to win baseball games but when a team gets both in the same game the opposition invariably crumbles.

Three Canadian-American League teams got the desired combination yesterday and the result was three one-sided scores. In the fourth game neither team's pitching was up to scratch and the score was close.

Ottawa, Utica and Gloversville pitchers held the spotlight, giving their opponents collectively eleven hits. Hank Hutchison of the Glovers turned in the finest effort with a two-hit performance against Cornwall.

Glovers won the game 6-1, tallying all their runs in the first two innings. Cornwall got both hits in the first inning when they scored their only run. From then on Hutchison had the Bisons eating out of his hand.

Amsterdam Swamped.

At Ottawa, Walter Zwatty tossed four-hit ball as the Senators swamped Amsterdam 9-1. Senators, scoring their third straight victory, pounded out 11 hits and clinched the game on a five-run rally in the sixth inning.

Johnny Orpheus of Utica gave Oswego five hits but scored the only shutout as the Braves trounced the league-leading Nets 10-0 on a 15-hit attack. Jim Hill, with two triples and a double, was the leading batter.

In a heavy-hitting game at Ogdensburg, the Colts outlasted Rome Colonels for a 7-5 victory. Ahead 6-0 at the end of the third, Colts had their lead cut to a single run in the first half of the seventh but Pitcher Laurer tightened in the pinches and the home team stayed in front.

KI-Y LEAGUE

The East End Club and Friggsters bettered their softball status in the local KI-Y softball group of the Juvenile series yesterday while the Teef Benders won the Midget game.

At Queen Alexandra School grounds the Friggsters out-slugged the Gossoons 20 to 13 in a free hitting contest with Bill Bateman looking after the umpiring.

At Queen Victoria School grounds Bill Dennis' East End mushballers pounded out an 11 to 3 win over the Orioles with Frank Follwell looking after the arbiter's duties.

At Queen Mary School grounds the only midget game scheduled proved a tidy tussle as the Teef Benders eked out a 9 to 7 win over the West End nine with Ernie Blake umpiring.

STIRLING TEAM DEFEATS TWEED

Stirling, June 8 (Special)—Stirling softball team impressed a good crowd of enthusiastic fans when on Tuesday night playing their first league game they trounced Tweed 17-9. New York, June 8 (AP)—Old Bill Klem (who never missed one in his life) will be calling 'em loud and clear in the baseball centennial game at Cooperstown Monday. . . . The coast hears J. Sez you.

Joey Archibald, the featherweight champ, sails for Venezuela tomorrow. . . . Tommy Armour and Gene Sarazen say the Philadelphia Country Club course is the finest United States open tournament site in their experience. . . . The rumor foundry has it that Don Padgett, who is getting darn tired of that second string catching stuff with the Cards, may be traded to the Cubs. . . . A sports writer today bet $100 against $1,200 Galento stops Louis in the first round. He's the same fellow who had $300 riding against $3,000 that Dempsey would kayo Willard in the first—and just missed collecting.

Mike Jacobs hopes to announce a Bob Pastor-Lou Nova bout one of these days—which will be the tip-off that Nova doesn't choose to fight Louis or Galento in September. . . . One of the last requests of Tom Donohue, who fathered legalized boxing in Connecticut, was that Al Weill and Prof. Billy M'Carney, the fight managers, act as pall bearers at his funeral today.

CITY BARBERS SHAVE KINSMEN

'Lather Artists' Still Undefeated in the Service Club Loop

The City Barbers continued undefeated in the local "No Knock" softball loop when they gave the Kinsmen Club nine a close shave and a trim to the tune of 29-12 yesterday. The win marked the second in as many starts for the barbers.

Bill Warren's benchmen pounded the offerings of three service club moundsmen hard and often to score runs in every inning except the fifth. A 12-run splurge in the first two frames gave the barbers an early lead. Al Skinner proved a hard batter to get out as he scored four runs in five times at the plate.

"Shinny" Harris hurled for the "lather shavers" while Jim Lafferty was rushed to the hilltop to replace Dusty Flagler after the barbers had taken a substantial advantage of the deliveries of Jerry Hurley, who started as the Kinsmen pitcher. The Kinmen were scoring runs consistently but not with the degree of plenty as supplied from the bats of the winners. The Y's Men and Luckin's "butchers" play tonight.

Kinsmen—Colling, Lafferty, Flagler, Hurley, Twiddy, Garbutt, Boyle, Jones, Duff and Ashline.

City Barbers—Root, Rushlow, Barriage, Symons, Stark, Warren, Harris, Callaghan, Skinner and Covert.

Score by innings:

Barbers	572 401 73—29
Kinsmen	231 203 10—12

Umpires—Lionel Blaker and Mike Naphan.

When it comes to presenting the opposition with runs and baseball games, the Belleville ball club is not only tops, but most consistent. Last week they booted the ball around in one inning sufficiently to present Napanee with four runs which subsequently meant victory for the Gerowites, but yesterday they went one better, the local ballsters literally handed Picton the game on the well known silver platter and how it did hurt. Belleville out-hit Picton eleven to six, but they also out-errored them six to two, as the Belleville bobbles really hurt, especially when runs scored following four of their six errors. However, the Wilkins-led nine really surprised us with their attack and give them a shortstop and one hard-hitting outfielder and they'll still be the team to beat in the Bay of Quinte loop, desipte their two present losses.

Sammy Ellis went to the mound for the locals and we saw as tidy a pitched ball game as we have witnessed in years. Ellis was somewhat wild, walking nine, but he managed to pitch himself out of the difficulties he worked himself into in his wildness, but the added miscues of his teammates is what actually hurt. Ellis hurled eight and one-third innings and left the heralded slugging Picton nine down with exactly four singles, two of which were of the scratchy nature, which is no mean pitching chore in any man's league. Ellis really "fogged 'em by" Skipper Roly Rorke's charges and only errors caused the defeat. Looking over the score book we find that only two balls were hit to the outfield aside from the four singles, two of which were infield hits of the most questionable nature. When Ellis tired and was relieved by Keith Weeks, the latter pitcher whiffed the next batter, but then a prize boner at short ruined the day.

As was stated Ellis let the homesters down with four hits, Picton getting two more cheap ones off Weeks after the balloon had ascended and the damage had been done. On the other side of the ledger, however, Kitty Abbott, who was nicked for 11 safeties, struck out nine Belleville batters and got two of Picton's six safeties. Strangely there wasn't a single extra base hit registered by either team. The game was one of the best intermediate ball games we've seen in some time and only the costly Belleville errors marred the pastime from being an outstanding baseball tilt. The loss drops the Belleville nine into the cellar position in the Bay of Quinte League, but we are firmly convinced that with a little moral support, a shortstop and a hard hitting fielder, Belleville can still romp home to a league title. Thanks to Fred Sprung and "Dolly" Gray the boys had transportation to Picton yesterday.

Incidentally Belleville got a rather cheap run in the second as Jarrell raced all of the way from second home while the entire Picton nine was trying to run Ellis down between first and second. They failed and the run scored, but that run in no way counterbalanced the four unearned runs given Picton subsequently through the medium of Belleville errors of omission as well as commission. Belleville fans will appreciate Sammy Ellis, that is providing a little more support is given the locals on the part of the citizens in general before they have to close up shop owing to the lack of interest, or should we say due to indifference on the part of the Belleville public.

Chuck Barnett's burning of the midnight oil recently apparently proved fruitful as the Corbys A.C. snapped into things and rolled over Red Townsend's juniors 10 to 2 last night. However, eye witnesses tell us that erorrs on the part of the teen-aged mushballers materially assisted the Corbys as the hits were even at 12 all. After getting a homer and two other hits, Art Cole was given a wide berth last night. The loss dropped the kids into a mired cellar, but the experience they are gaining in these defeats at the hands of intermediate teams will prove valuable later when the Townsendites move into the junior O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Harry Semark's Alaska again showed its stern to Maurice Callaghan's 'After You 3rd' yesterday to win top points in the Belleville Yacht Club weekly sailing races. The Alaska crew out-manoeuvred Skipper Callaghan halfway through the race to win by six full minutes. The Semark craft won the opening day's race in the "A" class as well. A fair off-shore breeze kept the sailors on an even keel for the greater amount of elapsed time, occasionally a strong puff of wind would spring up, much to the advantage of the Alaska.

Sport Spice—Tony Lazzeri was given his release by the Giants yesterday and it might be said that "Push 'em up Tony" has really had a varied diamond career, having been with the Yankees, Cubs, Dodgers and Giants in that order .... Chuck Klein was signed by the Pirates yesterday while Heinie Manush was given his release to make way for the former Philadelphia outfielder....Frankie Eddolls, Verdun, Que., defenceman, has located in Oshawa, which reminds us there may be some hockey developments in Belleville right smartly....Peterboro is actually worse off than Belleville, we get in the odd intermediate ball game, but out in Peterboro the opposition from Toronto fails to put in appearances, which is making Jim Dorris and company most unhappy.

Enroute from Western Canada back to Western Ontario, the King and Queen were cheered by thousands as they passed through Northern Ontario. School children, farmers and hard-bitten trappers mingled together to line the path of the royal train with cheering throngs. Despite the early hours at which the train passed some of the towns and villages, Their Majesties appeared on the rear platform of the train and waved to the eager crowds.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, June 8—(AP)—Early hesitancy in today's stock market subsequently turned into a slipshod decline and leaders conceded fractions to more than a point.

Recovery proponents, however, derived some cheer from the fact selling pressure was negligible throughout, with the ticker tape drowsing frequently. Near the fourth hour slight improvement was to be seen here and there.

Principal share losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Ownes-Illinois and J. I. Case.

American Telephone, Du Pont and Allied Chemical managed to register modest gains.

International Nickel dropped a point in the Canadian section and smaller losses were posted by Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 8 (CP)—The Toronto market was moderately heavy from the opening today, in tune with weakness in New York and only slight improvement was in evidence by early afternoon. Gold and base metal stocks registered index losses of about 75 at noon and the industrials and western oils were off slightly.

Lake Shore was offered down to 38 for a loss of 3-4 and prices were off narrowly for Aunor, Kerr-Addison, Macassa, East Malartic, Preston, Macleod-Cickshutt and others. Leading base metals, Noranda, Nickel and Smelters were off slightly.

Utilities, steels and senior oils weakened moderately and mild weakness in the western oil group affected Home Oil, Calgary-Edmonton and Okalta

HARRY OAKES

Victorian Order and Commander of the Royal Victorian Order.

Harry Oakes created a baronet in the king's birthday honors, trekked across the world in search of gold—the Yukon, Alaska, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and the United States— but it was in Canada's north country the American-born prospector staked the claims that made him a multi-millionaire.

Oakes arrived in northern Ontario in 1911 and a year later discovered what is now the Lake Shore gold mine, one of the world's richest treasure chests. Today at 68, the mining magnate, with his wife and five children, lives in one of the Bahamas' palatial homes and as politician and landowner is an influential personality in the public life of the British West Indies.

It is a coincidence that the King's birthday honors were announced almost at the hour when His Majesty and Queen Elizabeth were admiring the $800,000 Oakes Garden Theatre at Niagara Falls, Ont., just before entering the United States for their four-day visit.

The outdoor theatre and park facing the giant cataract was named after Harry Oakes who donated the site, valued at $500,000. The Oakes family had made their home at Niagara Falls from 1916 until 1934, when a bronchial ailment sent the erstwhile prospector south in search of health.

Buying an estate near Nassau, Oakes transformed the semi-tropical property and erected a large house on a ridge overlooking the sea. Since making the Bahamas his home his benefactions to the islands have been generous and frequent.

Not long after his arrival he noted that the unemployment situation was acute, and give $5,000 to Governor Sir Bede Clifford to alleviate the situation. Noting that transport facilities were poor he had buses specially built in England to provide service at cost.

He maintains a fleet of airplanes at Nassau for emergency sick cases and other purposes. Unable to undertake the reclamation of a swamp area because of lack of funds, the Government found Oakes a willing helper. He started work on it with his own money, giving employment to hundreds. About 85 per cent of the population of the district is colored.

The millionaire mining executive became one of the 29 members of the Bahamas House of Assembly 11 months ago when he defeated Milo Butler, a young grocer, by 538 votes to 70 in a by-election for the western district seat. The election became necessary by the elevation of Hon. A. F. Adderley to the upper house of the Bahamas Parliament and although he conducted no campaign, Oakes's election was certain from the start.

Mr. Oakes is a frequent visitor to London and two years ago he startled a St. George's Hospital official by handing him a cheque for $100,000 telling him an additional $300,000 would follow for the institution's rebuilding fund. The story has been related by the Marquis of Willingdon, chairman of the hospital's rebuilding council and former Governor-General of Canada.

Harry Oakes married Eunice M. McIntyre of Sydney, Australia, in 1923. Sydney is the heir to the baronetcy and there are four other children, Nancy, Shirley, Billie and Harry, Jr.

Born in Sangerville, Maine, the mine-owner began his prospecting career in the Klondyke in 1898 and it was as a seasoned traveller that he arrived at Swastika, Ont., in 1911. He staked the Tough Oakes mine in 1912 and the same year discovered the Lake Shore at Kirkland Lake. He is now president and managing director of the mine.

He is reputed to be the only prospector in the annals of Canadian mining to stake a property, finance it and bring it through to the dividend stage.

London, June 8.—(CP Cable) — Harry Oakes, the Canadian Mining millionaire who was created a baronet in the King's birthday honors list today, left England yesterday for Nassau, the Bahamas, where he now resides. He sailed aboard the

Sidelights on Royal Visit

New York, June 8 (CP) — The visit of the King and Queen to New York has occasioned the biggest police mobilization in the history of the city for Saturday. Their Majesties will be guarded by a concentration of 13,482 policemen.

Washington, June 8 (CP) — The 125,000 government workers in the capital had a four-hour holiday to view the procession in honor of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Schools were dismissed for the day in Washington as well as in some nearby towns.

Washington, June 8 (CP)—About 7,000 Boy Scouts donned their uniforms to be reviewed by the King and Queen on their way to the garden party. Flowers were selected for presentation to the Queen by representatives of the 3,000 Girl Scouts gathered with the boys.

Washington, June 8 (CP) — The mystery of the wines to be served at tonight's White House banquet may never be solved. Questions about the kinds selected remained unanswered for weeks, and now President Roosevelt has told reporters the list will not be disclosed. The White House does not intend to advertise any brands, valleys or places, he indicated.

Washington, June 8 (CP) — A West Indian negro, now in his 52 year as chancery messenger at the British Embassy, had his opportunity today to see the King and Queen. He's Charley Brown. Some years ago he received the Order of the British Empire.

Washington, June 8 (CP)—Mrs. May Hunt of Corning, N.Y., who had fractured her pelvis bone and one knee in an automobile accident and then developed pneumonia, left her hospital bed here today to see King George and Queen Elizabeth. She watched the Royal procession from an ambulance.

Washington, June 8 (CP)—Police at Union Station today plastered the pavement with strips of adhesive tape to show the King and Queen where to stand for photographs and where to enter their automobiles.

Uniformed policemen swooped down on every stray match and cigarette stub dropped outside the state suite at the station. They said they acted under instructions.

CROWDS THRONG

Pageantry Most Elaborate.

Above their heads waved hundreds of Union Jacks and American flags, tied to the lamp posts of historic Pennsylvania Avenue.

Observers said that never in the many Presidential inaugurations this capital has seen had there been more elaborate pageantry or more widespread hubbub.

Enough troops to fight a small battle — 6,000 soldiers, sailors and marines — were on Washington's streets to salute the King and Queen. Units of tanks and field artillery rumbled along the avenues. Seven military bands in brilliant uniforms were on parade.

Bombing Planes Overhead.

Huge bombing planes and squadrons of smaller aircraft mingled their steady droning with the cheers of the multitude.

An air of suppressed excitement prevailed about the White House where their Majesties will be guests until tomorrow night. More policemen than usual patrolled the grounds, and the gates were closed to all but official callers.

Hotels reported a jam-up of visitors from all parts of the United States, anxious to see the first British reigning Sovereign in the capital of a land in which British colonists proclaimed independence more than a century and a half ago.

An elaborate furnished Presidential suite at the Union station awaited the King and Queen, who crossed the Niagara River last night, passing over the undefended frontier between Canada and the United States to be received on American soil by the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull.

Behind the Royal visitors lay 22 days of intense travel that took them from Quebec to Vancouver and back east. Ahead were four days crowded with American ceremonial before their return to the Dominion and their final progress through Canada's Maritime Provinces to the Atlantic coast.

As official representative of his government, Mr. Hull had the duty of introducing the King and Queen to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Gold-bordered Blue Carpet.

A gold-bordered blue carpet was laid from the station platform to the reception room and thence to the broad plaza opposite the capitol. The plaza was designated as scene of first military honors—ruffles and flourishes by a fife and drum corps and playing of the two National Anthems by the Marine Band while a salute of 21 guns were fired.

The rest of the plaza was given over to cavalry, infantry and, on the outer rim, first units of 1,468 police.

As the heat grew in intensity American Red Cross emergency units took positions at strategic points to deal with cases of prostration. The key stations were manned by three doctors, ten nurses and there were two ambulances, three 18-men stretcher details and 50 additional stretcher bearers.

Each of three tent stations had a doctor, two nurses, six stretcher bearers two motor corps drivers and two Boy Scouts. The stations were equipped to handle all emergency cases.

Curb Sitters

Curb sitters, beneath fluttering American flags and Union Jacks, brought reading matter and a bite to eat for the long wait. Many were comfortaby equipped with camp stools, folding chairs and umbrellas raised against the sun.

There wasn't a free nook or cranny on broad Pennsylvania Avenue, famous parade route of Presidents and military heroes.

From the station the waiting throngs could see the glittering white dome of the historic capital.

Among the very first of the expected 500,000 visitors to get in place along the parade line were ten High School girls from Maryville, Tenn. They sat on a curb at 3 a.m. E.D.T. and said they didn't mind the long wait.

Street Gets Final Polishing

Soon ice cream vendors appeared and remained on the job until police, wearing full dress uniforms which included coats and gloves, cleared the Avenue.

Four hours before the parade, street ceaners in new white suits gave the two-mile route from the Union Station to the White House a final polishing. The pavement already glistened from a thorough washing.

Business was at a standstill as many stores closed for the day. Merchants on Pennsylvania Avenue fearing the press of the crowds, boarded up windows they had decorated carefully with bunting and pictures of Their Majesties.

Gala Appearance

Even with these decorations under cover the streets presented a gala appearance. Bright-colored shields bearing the royal coat of arms and the arms of the United States stood out on lamp posts beneath stars and stripes and the Union Jacks. Many in the crowds had small flags to wave when the royal couple passed.

An hour before the royal train was due a battalion of marines led by the Drum and Bugle Corps with its red-banded drums, red and blue uniforms and white gloves and caps took their places in the double ranks through which the King and Queen walked from the train to the President's room.

Lieut. William F. Santleman led the crack Marine Band. Close behind came a low green car with diplomatic licence No. 1, bearing Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador.

Lady Lindsay rode alone in the back of the car and smilingly acknowledged the applause of those who recognized her at various points of the route.

I AM GLAD

hands with him warmly, in his bluff, forthright manner at Union Station.

This handshake symbolized the friendship prevailing between the two great English-speaking peoples who broke from each other in 1776.

King George's tanned face broke into a broad smile as he returned the greeting.

Queen and Mrs. Roosevelt Meet

A moment later Britain's Queen and America's First Lady were exchanging similar cordial greetings.

These informal formalities over at the Union Station the Royal procession moved off, with a glittering military display, through Washington's broad avenues and spacious squares. A hot sun beat down, causing the Queen to open her parasol.

From the crowds that had assembled before dawn the King and Queen heard American voices raised in roars of welcome almost rivalling the cheers that greeted their Majesties during their Royal progress across a continent and back.

The scenes in Washington today were not unlike those that have already been enacted from Quebec to Vancouver and back. What was striking was that American enthusiasm for the visiting Sovereign was almost as great as if these United States were still under a British flag.

But everywhere the democratic American note chimed in to remind observers that this English-speaking country has been developing along its own lines ever since it came to the parting of the ways with Great Britain following the Revolutionary War.

Round of Ceremonial.

Arrival of their Majesties marked the beginning of a round of ceremonial that will pack the next four days with new sights and impressions after an impression-packed 22 days for the King and Queen.

Immediately after the procession through Washington, on their arrival at the White House, they met waiting diplomats in the east wing of the Presidential residence.

There followed an intimate luncheon with the Roosevelt Family, after which their Majesties were taken for a drive about the capital.

Garden Party At Embassy.

A gala garden party at the British Embassy was set for 6 p.m. E.D.T. to be followed three hours later by a state dinner at the White House and a subsequent reception and musicale.

King and Queen Appear

The King, wearing an Admiral's uniform, with a blue sash, his breast covered with medals, was one of the last to leave the train. A moment later, the Queen, in a gown of steel gray, appeared.

As they walked down the platform to where President and Mrs. Roosevelt, their family and high government officials were waiting, his Majesty saluted three times to the cheering crowd. The Queen smiled and waved.

An estimated 500,000 persons were jammed outside the station and along historic Pennsylvania Avenue to receive with their cheers the first reigning British Sovereign and his Queen ever to visit the United States.

Behind Their Majesties as they stepped from the train to greet President and Mrs. Roosevelt was Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Marines as Guard

The Royal party included Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, who had met Their Majesties at Niagara Falls, and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, as well as the entourage which had travelled with the King and Queen on their long trip through Canada.

Chatting with the Secretary of State, the King and Queen made their way leisurely between the double line of Marines which led to the President's reception room.

Introduced to President

In the reception room, Mr. Hull introduced the King and Queen to the President.

His Majesty and Mr. Roosevelt shook hands and their faces crinkled into cordial smiles as they greeted one another.

After the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, United States Government officials were introduced to the King and Queen.

From the Presidential suite, the King with President Roosevelt on his left walked out on the blue-carpet leading to waiting automobiles.

Directly behind His Majesty walked Mrs. Roosevelt and to her left behind the President was the Queen.

National Anthems Played

As they reache da spot midway down the carpet, the Marine Band played "God Save the King." The King raised his right hand and stood in salute.

There was a brief pause and then the martial music of the Star Spangled Banner. Again the King raised his right hand in solemn salute.

As the music stopped, the cannon across the plaza began a 21-gun salute.

The King Smiles and Chats

Here the King began smiling and laughing with the President about some exchange between them. On the 14th gun, His Majesty and the President started for their car—a long black touring machine with the top down.

Mr. Roosevelt entered first, almost sat upon his top hat, then saw it and whipped it out and put it on his head. The King grinned and climbed in beside Mr. Roosevelt. The Queen and Mrs. Roosevelt then got into their car, Mrs. Roosevelt on the left behind the driver and the Queen on her right.

Queen Opens Parasol

Her Majesty took one look at the glaring Washington sun and opened a grey silk parasol.

She was dressed in a long tailored mauve sheer suit with a bolero jacket, the sleeves of which were banded with matching fox fur. Her hat was a small off-the-face mauve felt with a large fluffy pompom of ostrich.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore blue wool and a dark-blue hat.

The Queen wore her favorite necklace, three strands of pearls, and carried a bouquet of 10 white and lavender orchids.

Overhead huge army bombers and swift pursuit planes flew in aerial salute. Thousands shouted and waved flags as the procession formed and headed toward the White House through unbroken ranks of soldiers, sailors and marines standing at salute.

Ahead of the procession moved a police guard and army light tanks.

The King Salutes Crowd

As the Royal party eased through the capitol grounds, the King saluted the cheering crowd. From time to time his Majesty and Mr. Roosevelt engaged in animated talk. Mr. Roosevelt frequently laughed heartily and rode bareheaded while pointing out landmarks to his Royal guest.

A bugle sounded as the Royal party approached the capitol, preceded by a white police car, a motor cycle escort and a detachthment of cavalry.

Crowds Broke Into Cheers

The crowds broke into wild cheering.

Queen Elizabeth's parasol helped shade herself and Mrs. Roosevelt from the burning sun.

The President and the King and Mrs. Roosevelt and the Queen drove around the capitol plaza. The remainder of the procession waited a block away for the drive up Pennesylvania Avenue.

The King saluted repeatedly in response to cheers as he did to thousands on his tour across Canada. Mrs. Roosevelt waved, while the Queen, holding the silk parasol acknowledged applause with smiles and bows.

Mr. Roosevelt often leaned close to the King to make his words heard above cheers and shouts of the crowd. Mrs. Roosevelt and the Queen also apparently found much to discuss as the cars rolled around the capitol plaza.

A Moment of Excitement

At one point where the procession passed between lines of cavalrymen, there was a flurry of excitement when an officer's horse suddenly reared and plunged only 10 feet from the car bearing the President and King. A fellow officer quickly spurred his own mount between the plunging horse and the car.

Although spectators scrambled for safety, the President and the King apparently did not notice the incident.

As the procession neared the White House, several score ambassadors and Ministers began arriving in bright uniforms and formal attire at the east entrance to the executive mansion. Accompanied by their wives ,they filed into the historic East Room for a diplomatic circle to greet Their Majesties.

Arrival at White House

The party reached the south entrance to the White House 14 minutes ahead of schedule. General Watson got out of the President's car first and assisted the King.

The car containing Mrs. Roosevelt and the Queen halted behind and the President's naval aide, Captain Callaghan, assisted Queen Elizabeth from the car and then Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Queen and Mrs. Roosevelt walked a few feet along the gravel drive, joined the President and the King and entered the White House.

Immediately behind them came two of the Queen's ladies-in-waiting and in the car after them Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

"How are you, I'm glad to see you," Mr. Roosevelt said.

Symbolism of Friendship

Their faces broke into smiles as their hands met as if symbolizing a tie of friendship between two English-speaking peoples who broke from each other in 1776.

Practically the only formal moment in this informal, and almost breezy American reception were Secretary of State Cordell Hull's words:

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present Their Britannic Majesties."

The Secretary of State met the King and Queen at the frontier last night on behalf of the American Government and escorted them to Washington.

Flower-Bedecked Suite

The ruler of the vast British Empire and the President of the North American Republic met in an elaborate setting, in Washington's Union Station—the flower-bedecked Presidential suite.

The King and Queen, after greeting Mrs. Roosevelt, shook hands with Brig.-General E. M. Watson, the President's military aide.

The Royal couple and the first family of the United States chatted briefly out of earshot of those standing by, and then formalities got under way.

One by one members of the Royal suite were introduced to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Few Formalities

Then high-ranking officials of the American Government, beginning with Vice President and Mrs. John Garner were in turn introduced to Their Majesties.

The King and Queen came into the blue and gold reception room at 12.03 p.m. EDT and walked up to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt who were waiting beside a lustrous mahogany table.

The walls of the room were banked with ferns and red, white and blue flowers, red gladioli, white foxglove and blue iris.

Formalities were over in a few minutes and the King and Queen took their place in the Royal procession to hear the acclaim of 500,000 persons who had lined the streets of the capital since dawn.

THETIS MAY BE LEFT AT BOTTOM OF SEA

London, June 8 (AP)—The naval correspondent of the Press Association said today the possibility was being considered of allowing the submarine Thetis to remain at the bottom of Liverpool Bay with the bodies of the 99 men who were trapped in her.

The news agency said difficulties in salvage operations and pressure being exerted by relatives of the victims might result in a decision to abandon the submarine.

The Mersey Docks and Harbor Board announced abandonment, for the time being, of efforts to raise the Thetis.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Yea Sons of Canada

Verse 1.

Hark, yea sons of Canada,
Oh listen to the call
We hear the sound of the Bugles' Blast
Oh heed the Bugles' call
Then buckle on your armor
And hasten thee away
To defend your Home and Country
Until a better day.

Chorus

Then rally round the flag, my boys,
Then rally round the flag.
For we must go
To meet the foe
And drive them back again.
Then rally round the flag my boys,
Then rally round the flag,
Then buckle on your armour
And hasten thee away
To defend your Home and Country
Until a better day.

Verse 2.

Hark, yea sons of Canada.
Oh listen to the call
Oh hear the roar of cannons thunder
Across the deep blue sea.
Oh hear the sound of marching feet,
As they come pressing on,
To trample down
The young and old and weak
And drive them to the world beyond.

Verse 3.

Hark yea sons of Canada
Oh listen to their noise,
As they tell us of their "isms"
And what they'll do to our Brave Boys.
But God will lead us in the right
For He will guide us o'er the way,
And we shall conquer in His might,
Until there is a happier day.

—By Mr. John Clazie.

Pleased at Information

William McIntosh, who used to look after the stock on the farm of the Queen's father, the Earl of Strathmore, came from Blenheim to London for special audience with Her Majesty and declared: "She seemed so pleased when I told her I was doing very well."

From Ingersoll the royal train carried away 24 pounds of cheese, the gift of district dairymen and a favorite delicacy of the King.

Mayor J. E. Lewis of Woodstock expressed a hope Their Majesties might return to Canada and the Queen said:

"We may find ourselves able to come back some day."

At each stop tens of thousands gathered, waving flags and cheering. Youngsters stole the show at many places, but at Brantford—where 55,000 gathered—it was an 88-year-old woman, Mrs. M. Macdonald, who drew Their Majesties' attention. In a wheel-chair close to the presentation stand, she chatted for a few moments when they walked over to her.

Little Nancy Waterous, three-year-old daughter of Mayor R. J. Waterous, bowed to the crowd instead of the Queen when she presented a bouquet. The Queen thought her lovelier for it and kissed Nancy.

Gymnastic Display

Twelve hundred boys and girls put on a gymnastic display in Hamilton's huge civic stadium and the King was so tickled with it he gave them all, and every boy and girl in Hamilton, a holiday from school today The 37,000 youngsters in the stadium whooped for all they were worth then.

At Hamilton Premier Mitchell Hepburn said goodbye to Their Majesties with the words:

"God be with you and have a safe return."

Mr. Hepburn had ridden from London to Hamilton on the royal train and seen 200,000 acclaim the King and Queen at Hamilton alone.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Cook and Mrs. Sarah Jamieson, who knew the Queen when she was the young lady of Glamis Castle, and Mrs. David Beatty, born in the shadow of the castle, greeted Her Majesty at St. Catharines. They recalled old times together.

Between Hamilton and St. Catharines Their Majesties had changed clothing to be ready for the drive by open car to Niagara Falls over a scenic 31-mile route. Her Majesty wore an Alice blue lace dress with a short, net-hemmed jacket and her hat was a high, off-the-face model in sky blue. The King wore a dark, double-breasted suit.

Stopped at Monument

The royal car stopped a half-minute at the monument to General Sir Isaac Brock and a few minutes at the surging whirlpool below the Falls. Then it proceeded through the great wooded park to the Falls and Table Rock.

For 15 minutes the King and Queen looked on the world-famed sight, while Prime Minister Mackenzie King pointed out interesting particulars. They were to have gone down into the wind tunnel to see the Falls from behind and below, but the King spoke with his driver and the royal car turned to go to the hotel.

The multitudes from two countries who gathered for the coming of the first reigning British monarchs to the Falls saw them clearly when civic officials were presented. They saw them again when the King and Queen answered the children's shout to leave their dinner and appear on the hotel balcony.

And when Their Majesties rode down the lighted streets to the station, the dense throngs set up a roar that made Niagara's violence only a murmur. All Ontario's voices seemed to be with the crowd that cheered the King and Queen on their way.

HALF MILLION

In this strenuous program there was only one cancellation, a trip behind the wall of water at the foot of the falls. After their tiring day the King called this off. Instead, their Majesties stood for 15 minutes on Table Rock near the Canadian Horseshoe Falls while Prime Minister Mackenzie King pointed out Niagara's interesting spots.

Twice the King and Queen appeared on the balcony of the General Brock Hotel, once while 12,000 school children sang the National Anthem. Again they made an appearance — this time while lights played on the falls in the darkness —when the cheering crowds yelled their insistence.

31-Mile Motor Trip to Falls.

After visiting in succession London, Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton and St. Catharines, the Royal couple left their train and motored over a 31-mile scenic route to Niagara Falls by way of historic Brock's monument and the whirlpool rapids.

En route, the maroon Royal motor car broke a beam of light and the operation unveiled a stone dedicating a new four-lane highway as Queen Elizabeth Way. When completed it will link Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls.

At the Falls a second beam was out and a cornerstone for a new international bridge was unveiled.

Niagara Falls' Welcome.

The formal welcome to their Majesties at Niagara Falls was extended by Mayor Carl Hanniwell at the Parks Commission Administration Building, where 55 leading citizens were presented.

Little Eleanor Donald, daughter of Alderman Grant Donald, presented to Queen Elizabeth a bouquet of orchids. David Hanniwell, the mayor's son, carried the bouquet to the presentation stand.

Their Majesties had tea at Table Rock House and a private dinner at the General Brock Hotel. One course of the menu was tenderloin of Northern Ontario beef. With the King and Queen at dinner were only the members of the Royal entourage and Canadian government officials.

Welcome to United States.

At the American end of the international railroad bridge, where the King and Queen arrived at 10.37 E.D.T., the welcome of the United States was extended by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. Throngs gathered about the little suspension bridge station were kept back by United States troops and police.

American army regulars with fixed bayonets made a thorough job of guarding the station platform. One over-zealous soldier halted Michael Adeane, aide-de-camp to the King, with a curt "Hey, get back there, you; I can use this thing." Lord Eldon and Lord Airlie, members of the entourage, were also stopped. All were rescued by American officials.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to Washington, presented the Secretary and Mrs. Hull to their Majesties.

New Page In History.

The simple ceremonies wrote a new and friendly page in Anglo-American history and a State Department spokesman said later Mr. Hull greeted the Royal visitors with these words:

"Your Majesties:

"In behalf of the government and the people of the United States I have the honor and pleasure of extending to you our warmest welcome. All are delighted with your visit. The people of my country in the most genuine spirit of cordiality, hospitality and friendliness have every desire to make your stay a thoroughly enjoyable one."

To Queen Elizabeth Mrs. Hull said:

"Your Majesty:

"It is a great honor for me to meet and greet you."

It took but a few moments for the ceremony. After chatting for approximately five minutes, the entire party climbed aboard the train for the trip to Washington.

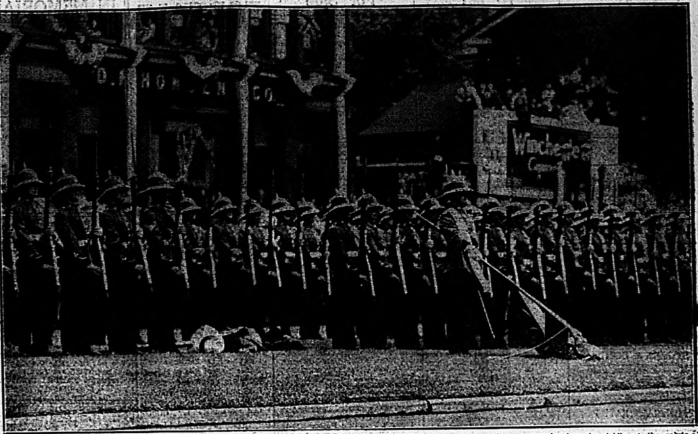
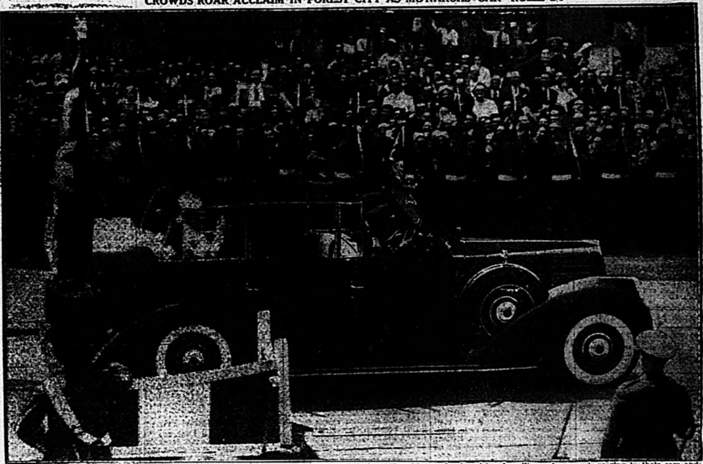
ONE SOLDIER FAINTS AS LONDON REGIMENT SALUTES THE KING



London, Ont. was suffering from a virtual heat wave when the King and Queen reached the Forest City and one member of the guard of honor collapsed just as the National Anthem began and the colors were dipped in salute. Not a soldier moved a muscle until the anthem was concluded; then ambulance men carried the unconscious guardsman away. The soldier is shown in a heap while his comrades remain rigidly at the salute. His helmet is by his side.

CROWDS ROAR ACCLAIM IN FOREST CITY AS MONARCHS' CAR ROLLS BY



The population of London, Ont. was nearly tripled by the time the King and Queen reached the Forest City in their tour of western and south-western Ontario. The big maroon car carrying the royal couple is pictured rolling along London's broad streets with the frenzied cheers of the packed crowds roaring in their ears and a busbied guard standing at salute in the foreground.

In beautiful Niagara Falls, Ont., Their Majesties spent the last few hours before crossing into the United States and took the opportunity to view the scenic grandeur of cataract. Here they are standing at attention as the National Anthem swells from the crowd who cheered their arrival. —SNS Photo

As Their Majesties Were Welcomed to Windsor

Crossing from Detroit hundreds of enthusiastic Americans joined their Canadian neighbors in tendering a rousing welcome to the King and Queen upon their arrival in Windsor. As Their Majesties appeared on the rear platform of the royal train, ABOVE, a roar of cheers arose from the dense throngs surrounding the station.

One Thousand Dollars

By SMITH AIKENS

The mail-order catalogues were really to blame for the whole business, thought Leila, bitterly. For had the disgusting catalogues not tempted her so alluringly with the border and the Canadian wilds, able—nay, needable things—Leila would never have even thought of making up the list of things she might buy.

The dingy old kitchen where Leila spent a goodly portion of each day was to receive its rehabilitation with a portion of that magic sum. The broken, much-mended, warped, old kitchen range was to be replaced with a shining blue-enameled affair, exactly duplicated in the alluring sketch in the catalogue.

The kitchen plans done, Leila always held her breath with a tiny gasp as she turned to the ladies' outfitting department. Such an array of finery! Luxurious silk underthings for best; dainty hand done Porto Rican lingerie for every day; smart-looking ginghams for every day, and a complete afternoon, evening and street "costume" as listed by the Fifth avenue shops and copied accurately for the discriminating customers of Searles Gordon company!

To dream of possessions was one thing, to make the dream come true still another problem. So Leila schemed and dreamed and kept on keeping the home of her beloved father cheery and immaculate.

A country minister's salary is far from opulent, and Leila had all she could do to keep the cellar filled with canned goods, the garden free of weeds, the chickens well fed and laying and the one cow they afforded producing daily.

The Rev. Lyle Dinsmore, however, was utterly unlike his energetic daughter. He believed that God would provide—and he was too much of a dreamer to aid Him in the stupendous task.

Leila was deep in a fit of moody rebellion as she walked from the market to the postoffice for the morning mail. As she turned away with still another brilliantly advertised catalogue from Searles and Gordon she saw posted in a prominent place a poster advertising $1,000 reward for the capture of the man pictured. He was alleged to be a daring train robber and had been awaiting trial when he escaped and was reputed to be heading for the border nad the Canadian wilds.

Leila shuddered. A bandit — a robber! And heading for Sleekport! She hurried home and worked feverishly all day, the picture of the youthful bandit haunting her and the $1,000 reward tantalizing her equally. By nighttime she was in a nervous state close to hysteria.

There was no moon and a slight wind sighed about the house. Leila, still worired over the bandit, was in the cupboard putting away a few last things when she saw the kitchen door slide noiselessly open. A heavily bearded face peered at her and a shaking hand warned her to silence. It was the hunted man. Leila never knew where the courage came from that caused her to bid him enter, but she knew she must have done it by the flash of deep gratitude in his face as he sat wearily down. And as she prepared a lunch for him and watched him eat in the thought of the $1,000 reward was almost stifling her. Her dreams come true!

Silently the man ate wolfishly, as though he were famished. Leila's heart constricted. He was so young—and, somehow, he didn't look vicious or weak. Just poor.

Now he was speaking, and his voice rang with truth and conviction. "You won't believe me, ma'am, any more than the officials down there will—but those yeggs hired me and my car. I wasn't one of 'em. I was just earning a good night's pay and I didn't know anything about the robbery at all till I read the papers next day. Then I knew they'd hired me to drive 'em away just as a blind. And nobody will ever believe that I wasn't a member of that gang. It'll mean twenty years! And I was going to get married next year. I'd saved enough to buy my car and I'd built up a good trade—" The boy's head dropped to the table. He wasn't crying; he wasn't the whining sort. He was just sunk in the misery of life's cruelest mistake, circumstantial evidence.

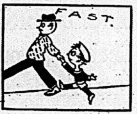
And suddenly Leila saw it all, saw how little poverty was after all compared to dishonor, bad luck and the thousand and one other trials of the world, and she moved impulsively.

"There's a long-distance moving truck that goes through Sleekport every Saturday night. It unloads part of the provisions at Keller's. I'll hide you till they come and you can go to St. Albans with them playing hooky. You'll catch a bumper out of there and make the border safely, if you're careful. I'm going to give you things to shave with, but leave a mustache and it'll work a wonderful disguise. The Canadian harvest of wheat is on and they need men!"

And after she came down from the attic after making up a spare bed and safely hiding her unwelcome visitor she walked with high determination to the dining-room and, taking down the last Searles and Gordon catalogue, stuffed it into the glowing kitchen range and, smilingly tenderly, watched it burn.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop were starting to take a walk for pop's health and ma said, Now Willyum this is no time to be starting out Nora is just about to put the steak on and it's beautiful steak.



Then it's a golden time to be starting out, there's nothing like a little exercise for a good steak, pop said, and ma said, Well then 20 minutes at the outside maximum so if you come back to a cold overdone steak nobody will suffer but yourself, or at least I'm sure nobody will do as much complaining.

There's a fine point for argument there, but dont worry your housewifely little head, I'll be back at full speed and empty stummick, pop said.

And we walked and pop looked at his watch every once in a while, and the last time he said, Yee gods this watch has stoppec, no wonder we seemed to have plenty of time, every time I looked at this watch it said 20 after 6.

Well holey smokes, pop, how is it you didn't know it was stopped the 2nd time you looked? I said, and pop said, Man is not really a reasoning animal. I know of no other reason.

And we hurry up started to walk home, pop taking such long steps I had to run to walk that fast, pop saying, Yee gods this is going to be awful, there is no combination so infuriating to a woman as an early meal and a late man.

And he started to wipe his neck with his hankerchiff on account of getting hot walking so fast, and ma was at the front door waiting pop saying, My watch stopped. I have 2 witnesses, Benny and the watch.

Every thing will be on the table in 10 minutes, ma said. I know you from of old, so I had Nora delay the activities, she said, and pop said Yee gods 10 minutes, now I have to take a bath, and ma said, Willyum Potts, if you do I'll never forgive you.

The result being he just washed his face and neck.

Along the Route Taken By King

London

Thousands of Londoners, their ranks swelled by 150,000 visitors, went on the march at the crack of dawn today, lining the four-mile royal procession route. The last of 33 special trains rushed visitors into the city this morning. A few London citizens took up positions at midnight and held them through the night.

Ingersoll

Ingersoll couldn't wait for the King and Queen to arrive today and staged a long practice celebration last night. Militia men, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and several bands paraded the streets. Today the town was jammed with visitors.

Woodstock

The King and Queen saw approximately 5,300 children from 97 schools in Woodstock today. Those from out of town came from Norwich, Tavistock, Embro, St. Mary's, Drumbo, Plattsville, Princeton, Burgessville and Oxford County Townships.

Brantford

A great canvas sign reading "Welcome to Brantford, the birthplace of the telephone," greeted the King and Queen here today. It was here that Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone. A few hardy persons camped out all night near the railroad station to make sure of having good positions to see today's royal visit.

Hamilton

Flag-decked streets were invaded by thousands of visitors early today who were quite prepared to wait several hours under a blazing sun for a view of Their Majesties. The route of the royal procession was lined with bleacher stands and streets were profusely decorated with flags and bunting.

St. Catharines

From Ontario's Niagara Peninsula fruit belt came thousands to St. Catharines today for a brief sight of the King and Queen in late afternoon. Their Majesties were to be greeted on arrival by civic officials and then motor to Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls

Ontario's farewell to the King and Queen will issue tonight from tens of thousands of throats. The greatest crowd in the history of this showplace beside the Falls started gathering yesterday. About 5,000 soldiers, police and war veterans were to act as a protective force for Their Majesties.

Detroit's Mayor Introduced At Sovereigns' Request

Windsor, Ont., June 7— (CP) — Mayor Richard Reading of Detroit, and Mrs. Reading were not scheduled to meet the King and Queen during Their Majesties' brief visit to Windsor last night but were introduced at special request of the royal couple. Mayor Reading was the second dignitary of the United States to meet the King and Queen since their arrival in Canada. Daniel C. Roper, American Minister to Ottawa, was introduced at the Dominion capital.

"He had a nice, firm, hearty handshake," Mayor Reading said. "The King and Queen expressed regret at not being able to visit Detroit but explained that their schedule would not permit it."

GOOD-WILL TOUR

From All Sectors

From the beautiful lakes of Combermere; from neighborly Maynooth; from Barry's Bay, 26 miles to the westward; from Whitney and far-off Algonquin Park they came, hard-sinewed bronzed men, to mingle with their cousins of the far-flung municipalities of the county; from Dungannon and Limerick, from Mayo and Bangor, lumbermen, farmers, brown, healthy skins contrasting against the visible discomfort of their "Sunday clothes" with eyes gleaming with a sincerity of friendship and amity that brought a glow of appreciation to those of the southland.

There was pride in their eyes; in their handclasps and in their deep, husky voiced tanged with the burr of the northern accent. They hailed their cousins from the south in a manner that bespoke the utter honesty of purpose for which the residents of the north are noted.

For these warriors of the southlands came, not armed for war, but bearing weapons of peace and amity, good will and fellowship to weave yet another colorful pattern in the banner of the brotherhood of man, that still waves gaily over this county of Hastings.

Forty-Three Make Trip

And this cavalcade of good will, represented by forty-three members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, speeding swiftly through the road-slashed green carpet of the northland, halted to receive a welcome, that was not only indicative of the generous true-hearted hospitality of the north, but one that must have warmed the very bottoms of their respective hearts.

The very spontaneity of their hosts; the natural home-like quality of their reception but rekindled the glow left in their hearts that flamed in inaugural fires a week or so ago when the cavalcade instituted its first good-will tour with a visit to the village of Madoc.

There was no congealing of feelings. The hand of the south outstretched on a gesture of friendship was firmly clasped in the firm brown hand of the north. It was a cross section of Hastings County life. Doctors, lawyers, merchants business men, farmers, lumbermen, members of parliament, municipal and civic officials, county councillors met and merged in an atmosphere of amity that augurs well for the future of Hastings. A lot, in fact the most of these men, had never met before. But that invisible something that holds men of purpose together, and binds them in that bond of friendship born of good fellowship, cemented acquaintances made last night that will blossom into something tangibly beneficial to all concerned.

A Grand Party

It was a grand party. From the time President of the Chamber of Commerce, MacLean Haig formally opened sumptuous banquet served by the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary of Bancroft United Church in Bancroft's modern Community Hall, there was not a dull moment. One hundred and seventeen guests entered into the spirit of an affair that would be the envy of the most fraternal service club, that ever responded to a gavel.

There were toasts, and speeches, long and short. There was musical entertainment, that was par excellence. There was that dearest thing to a man, that has yet been devised—good food. There was fellowship and camaraderie, jollity and mirth, yet beneath the whole was that sincerity of purpose, that of further cementing the bonds of blood-brothership that unites Hastings north to its south.

In voicing his appreciation and that of members of the Goodwill Cavalcade for the splendid hospitality President Haig explained the reason of the tour. "We in Belleville feel it is a good thing to know friends but to know our neighbours is better", he said. "We are interested in the fact that you people come to Belleville, but we want to extend the circle of acquaintanceship and friendship. This can only be done by mutual visitation. We heartily extend to you all an invitation to come and see us in Belleville. It is only by these visits that we can become better acquainted". In jocular mood President Haig termed this cavalcade the "B.B.B. Tour" or Belleville to Bancroft and Back".

Toast to Bancroft

Bancroft's problem is the development of the tourist trade. It is a tourist mecca unequalled in the Dominion, Alderman Laurie Lewis stated in proposing the toast to the Village of Bancroft. What is needed is a great highway to Whitney and the Algonquin Park, not a broken one, he said. "And the purpose of this cavalcade is to assist you to get it through, but it cannot be done unless the problem is given the whole-hearted co-operation of every man of the district".

"The trouble is, you and I do not take upon our shoulders the problems of our neighbours. The lumberman, the farmer, the miner, should take up the cudgels for the white-collar man, the merchants and others and vice-versa, but none of us are getting together. The big fellows are having full sway while we are bumping our heads together", he said.

"We must take up the other fellow's problems. It is a Biblical teaching". Alderman Lewis continued, "we are too much concerned about ourselves What is needed is followers of great leaders, or we must go down. We went to see Bancroft's great industries thrive, and which will put you on the top. May we contribute to the health and prosperity of Bancroft".

(Cheers.)

Tribute to Pioneers

Splendid tribute to those doughty pioneers who blazed the name of Bancroft down through the years, people such as the Cleeks, and the Flints, and others was paid by Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb in response to the toast. "These people realized the possibilities of Bancroft and district and built it up around its great power source, the York River. Sawmills, woollen mills and other industries sprang up. Up until 1899 the river was the only means of export. Following the advent of the railway in 1899, hardwood and pulp, now one of our main industries, came into being."

"The tourist industry is new," Dr. Lumb declared. "It is a big industry and if we are to develop it, we need co-operation—and we need roads. We have fair roads here now but if they were finished we would get the traffic from the New England States via Belleville and Whitney and the National Park. That is our big need."

Dr. Lumb eulogised the vacation and hunting possibilities of his district. "We have the finest skiing hills in Ontario. Interest in winter sports here is increasing. The roads are open all season and are being used, but should be used more. We have game—deer, fish, partridge, rabbits We have minerals here, everything from radium to iron. Years ago mining towns prospered here—now only the minerals remain. What we need is the money. The south has that and we have the minerals and brawn. Let us get together," he concluded, adding a hearty welcome to the visitors.

Toast to Belleville

"There was never a more generous, more energetic man," Mr. W. A. Davy, of Bancroft, said of the late Senator Billa Flint, in proposing the toast to the city of Belleville. "He was a great lumberman, and travelled roads of those days winter and summer when he became interested in the little hamlet of York. He was a man of vision who saw possibilities. He worked hard to develop this country. Generous, big-hearted, he built a town hall and donated the land for many buildings out of his own pocket."

"If we had more men who put their vision, foresight and money into circulation there would not be so much unemployment," Mr. Davy said. He also paid tribute to the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, "a fine man who loved politics and loved to lick h—— out of the Grits of the North," Mr. Davy concluded amid laughter and cheers.

Co-operation Needed

In a dynamic speech, Col. R.J.E. Graham deplored the lack of men who had the courage of their convictions, in his response to this toast. "We are all politicians, but rotten ones," he said, "because we are not doing what we think should be done."

Pride in Belleville's City Council was voiced by Col. Graham. "They are tackling the problems of the day and are doing a good job. Our mayor, Jamieson Bone, is a one-man revolution who is trying to solve the problem of the property-owner."

"Another great asset Belleville has," he said, "is its Chamber of Commerce, that is working for every community in the county as well as Belleville. Their interests are our interests. We like you and we hope you like us. We are not here for a good time alone, but to ask your co-operation and support. Belleville is your county town and we are trying our best to make it good for you but we cannot do it without your support. We are as much a part of the county life as you are. We have a grand town, schools, streets, buildings but without your aid it is not worth a cent."

"It is the buying communities that make for Belleville's prosperity," the speaker said. "If you have not got prosperity then we fail. One hundred percent co-operation on the part of all communities, is needed to make Hastings what it should be, the premier county of Ontario."

Irish Humor

The inimitable Irish wit and humor of Mr. Charles Dolan furnished a humorous respite from the sincerity of the former addresses. He evoked roars of merriment from his listeners as he unfolded story after story, in his proposing of the toast to the County of Hastings. Waxing serious, however, Mr. Dolan told the assemblage that the County of Hastings stands A1 in credit and finance among the counties of Ontario. He had spent the happiest moments of his life in the northern part of the county, and although he had worked in several parts of Canada he came back by choice to make his home in this splendid county.

Need Good Roads

Appreciation of the spirit of the Chamber of Commerce of Belleville in launching their goodwill cavalcade was expressed by Mr. Judson Gunter in responding to the toast to the county. "And we of the north appreciate their agitation to secure good roads for us. Conditions here were deplorable before the roads were made", he said.

"In times when lumbering and other northern industries were good the government made millions. Now that these industries are down we feel that we have a bank with the government, and that it should help us to construct these roads that are so badly needed."

"We can't get too many roads here", he said. "We have 120 millions of people to the south of us who love our woods, our lakes, our fishing and other holiday attractions but who say build us good roads and we'll come to you".

He complimented the present government in its carrying out to a large extent the building of roads, but he deplored the fact, that big construction companies were taking the money out of the country "while our own boys are standing idle". "Don't let them tell you that the roads are being built cheaper and faster by machinery, because they are not". He answered good naturedly the points raised in a lengthy address given by Mr. Tom Murray, M.P.P., South Renfrew, who spoke a few minutes previously, and who urged that party politics be laid aside in favor of whole-hearted co-operation, if the north is to prosper.

"It is getting late and my speech is going to be very brief" Mr. George Brown, Bancroft, said prior to proposing the toast to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce". The goodwill between Belleville and Bancroft is now on a better basis of understanding than ever before", he said. He urged the visitors to visit the Algonquin National Park. "No artist can possibly portray the natural beauty of this park near our county border", he said. "The largest Boys' Camp in the world, the Taylor Statten Camp is situated on Canoe Lake and is a real sight to see. Hastings County scenery is the finest in the world as is her tourist possibilities. We hope by co-operation to develop it and put this grand old county in her rightful place among the vacation spots of the Dominion."

Equally as brief was W. G. Deacon who "pinch-hitted for Mr. Harry Ackerman. "The Chamber of Commerce is out to do good for this county", he said, "and every member is putting forth real efforts to this end." He cordially thanked the Bancroft audience for their splendid attendance and for the splendid repast served by the ladies.

Warden George Thompson, and members of the Roads and Bridges Committee of the County of Hastings were introduced at this point. In a brief address the Warden, stated that Hastings has all the facilities for an excellent tourist trade, that are needed. "People are missing a grand opportunity, when they fail to visit the playgrounds of the north." He expressed appreciation of the efforts being put forth by the Chamber of Commerce, and of the fine relations that exist between that body and the County Council. "I hope the Chamber continues its good work next year", he concluded amid generous applause.

Splendid Musical Program

Despite the fact, that the Belleville Municipal Band was unable to attend the cavalcade, a splendid musical program was furnished by members of the visiting body. Headlining a body of artists whose efforts drew the spontaneous applause of the gathering was Jack Deacon, whose splendid tenor voice was never heard to better advantage in two solos. James Bankier delighted his listeners with two solos while the artistry of Jack Green, cornet virtuoso, heard in two solos nearly "brought down the house". Mr. Green and Bandmaster Fred Jobson, who also led the community singing, were heard in a lovely cornet duet. The Belleville Male Quartette consisting of Messrs. Harry Moorman, Fred Jobson, Harold Howard and James Bankier earned well-merited applause with two negro spirituals. In the last number they were assisted by Jack Deacon. The mastery of Belleville's ace pianist Leo Riggs was again brought out in his accompaniments to the contributing artists. Last but not least the skirl of Piper "Jamie" Clarke's pipes, with Jamie in full Highland uniform caught the popular fancy and the diminutive piper received spontaneous bursts of applause for his fine playing.

The Good-Will Cavalcade will visit Marmora on Wednesday, June 14th and Tweed on June 21st.

WESTERN LANDS WELL DRENCHED

Heavy Rains Add Rosy Hue to Bright Crop Picture

Winnipeg, June 7 (CP)—Farmlands in many Western Canada districts were rain-drenched yesterday. For some the precipitation was the heaviest in years, adding a rosy hue to an already bright 1939 crop picture.

Saskatchewan was the rain centre, the one-time, drought-lands getting the greatest drenching, but there were valued showers in Alberta during the day.

A wind storm caused some damage in Winnipeg last night, a 60-mile wind uprooting trees, scattering sign boards and Royal week decorations on downtown buildings. Six giant flags, valued at $3,600, displayed by the Winnipeg Free Press were torn from the building.

DAZZLING HEAT FELT IN ENGLAND

Crop Talk Takes Precedence Over Diplomacy on the Continent

London, June 7 (CP)—Dazzling heat, and drought and dust in some areas, troubled perspiring Europeans today. Crop talk took precedence over talk of diplomacy. Temperatures were quoted more frequently than air fleet totals. Drought worried the farmers of Great Britain.

The London courts judges disregarded their wigs. A few members of parliament appeared without vests.

In France men walked the streets in their shirt sleeves. Italians rejoiced that the wheat crop would be saved.

Prime Minister Chamberlain left his umbrella in its hall stand and wore a gray top hat. Noel Coward drank chilled lemon juice at a garden party.

In London, the thermometer showed 84 degrees, the warmest June figure in three years. A third day of heat in Paris brought 89. In Italy, temperatures generally were above 80.

men and women across the country.

For Royal processions the King has appeared most frequently in his uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet. Other uniforms worn at times are the dress and undress uniform of a Field Marshal and that of Commander of the Royal Air Force.

Favorite Dessert Is Cheese.

Canada has learned that the King's favorite dessert is cheese, that he seldom eats soup and that the Queen likes most foods. Roast chicken is a favorite with her Majesty but that delicacy has appeared seldom at luncheons and dinners attended by the King and Queen.

When they return from the United States on Monday, the Royal couple will visit several points in lower Quebec and then spend three days in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia.

Adventure still beckons for they will board one of the Canadian destroyers, Skeena or Saguenay, at Cape Tormentine, N.B., and cross Northumberland Strait to Charlottetown before reaching Halifax for the departure. The trip to Prince Edward Island is scheduled for June 14.

Their Majesties appeared in excellent health when they departed last night for Washington and there is every expectation that the acclaiming thousands in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces will see the King and Queen are keen and eager as the day they reached Canada.

Religious Program Centre of Riot in Detroit

100 Officers Disperse Crowd by Means of Tear Gas Bombs and Teacher and Five Youths Taken to Police Station

BROADCAST LECTURE

Lights on Bandstand Turned Out by Unknown and Barrage of Stones and Over-Ripe Fruit Followed

Detroit, June 9 (CP)—Sound cars broadcasting a religious program at Clark Park were the centre of a riot last night in which assorted missiles were hurled by a mob estimated at 6,000. Several persons, including two policemen were injured before 100 officers dispersed the crowd by means of tear gas bombs. A teacher at Holy Redeemer High School and five youths were taken to the police station for questioning. They were released later.

The trouble started when the sound trucks drew up beside the park bandstand. The group identified themselves as Jehovah's Witnesses and said their program included a recording of a lecture by Judge Joseph Rutherford previously the cars had broadcast announcement of the meeting in front of Holy Redeemer school and an adjacent Roman Catholic Church and many youths attended.

Shortly after the service started somebody turned off the bandstand lights and a barrage of stones, eggs and over ripe fruit began. Several persons, including three women on the platform, were struck with missiles. The officers were hurt while discharging tear bombs.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The lightning flash! Seeing is believing, but one can not always see things exactly as they are, because of the great speed of the action. For instance, the lightning flash to the eye seems to be merely a vivid stream of light. A rotating camera, however, reveals that the flash is composed of from one to a dozen strokes. The flash may last an appreciable part of a second, but the time of an individual stroke is much smaller. Each stroke is composed of a down-moving streamer from cloud to ground, and is immediately followed by a much brighter return stroke upward, from ground to cloud along the same path.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Washington, June 9 (CP)—Senator Smith (Dem.-South Carolina) was telling his Senate colleagues proudly today that when he was presented to King George at the Royal Garden Party as "Senator Smith of South Carolina," His Majesty asked promptly: 'Cotton Ed Smith?"

"I'll tell you," Smith said later, "that nickname has gone around the world."

Washington, June 9 (CP)—White House servants were cautioned that the King and Queen like tea with bread and butter as a preliminary to breakfast. Mrs. Roosevelt also told the staff that while Their Majesties like cold water they do not follow the American custom of putting ice in it.

Washington, June 9 (CP)—Diplomats smiled today over a strange pairing of envoys resulting from rules of precedence at the diplomatic reception in honor of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih stood beside Japanese Ambassador Horinouchi, despite the difficulties of their two countries.

Washington, June 9 (CP)—The timepiece by which the King and Queen are keeping up with their busy Washington schedule is a $1.25 watch owned by Colonel Edmund Starling, Chief of the White House Secret Service.

Sultry Weather At Washington

Washington, June 9 (CP) — The weather, about the only thing in Washington unconcerned by the visit of the King and Queen, continued sultry today.

At 11 a.m. E.D.T. the official temperature was 82 and rising. Downtown, in gaps between the trees on Pennsylvania Avenue, it was 90.

Thundershowers were in prospect for the night.

Gentle south and southwest winds gave a bit of relief from the humidity.

Stirling, Scotland, June 9 (CP)—Terence McSherry, an Irishman, was convicted today of stealing explosives to make bombs and was sentenced to prison for ten years.

McSherry, one of four men convicted on theft charges, had sought to place upon the British government the blame for recent bombings in England and Scotland because of its refusal to accede to an "ultimatum" by the illegal Irish Republican army.

The others — Francis McNeece, Samuel Kennedy and Matthew Somerville—were sentenced to terms of from 18 months to seven years.

SOUND BUSINESS

Toronto, June 9 (CP)—Admitting he is no "expert in life insurance matters," Attorney-General Gordon Conant has set down requirements of "sound business methods and solvency" for life underwriters in his capacity as head of the Ontario Department of Insurance.

Mr. Conant told the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association last night of policies he had laid down for the department, which comes under his authority as Attorney-General. First he made the "humble confession" that he is not expert at insurance, but said he realized "that it is a business of colossal proportions and of enormous importance to our people."

The King and the President At State Dinner Cement Ties Of British-American Amity

By A. E. FULFORD.

Washington, June 9 (CP)—Words of peace—voicing the hope of eternal friendship between the British Empire and the United States—reechoed throughout the world today as King George and Queen Elizabeth started their second day in this city that outdid itself to welcome them.

The day's program included a visit to the Capitol to meet the Senators and Representatives, luncheon on board the U.S.S. Potomac, a short stay at beautiful Mount Vernon where George Washington's hilltop home is perpetuated as a national shrine, and laying of wreaths on monuments honoring Canadian and American war dead.

To Banquet President.

Then will come a banquet at the British Embassy in honor of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, followed after midnight by departure for the hustle and bustle of New York City. The Royal pair spend Sunday in the quiet of President Roosevelt's Hyde Park, N.Y., estate.

The King and the President last night cemented firmer Anglo-American relations when they spoke of British-American amity at a state dinner in the White House, set afire more than a century ago by British soldiery.

Germany Ready to Abolish Last Vestige of Czech Liberty

Prague, June 9 (AP)—Germany is ready to abolish the last semblance of Czech-self-government, informed Nazi quarters said today, in retaliation for the slaying of a German police sergeant at the industrial town of Kladno, fifteen miles from the capital.

Baron Konstantin von Neurath, the Reich protector, after consulting Chancellor Hitler removed the Kladno mayor, appointed a new official, disarmed the Czech state police, closed public places and several of the schools, forbade outdoor assemblies, and ordered windows and doors locked at 10 p.m., with the warning guards would shoot into open windows.

Czech residents of the town have until 8 p.m. today (3 p.m. E.D.T.) to find the policeman's slayer or undergo further drastic restrictions, von Neurath's order read.

Czech sources reported some sixty persons were arrested. Germans said the measures were intended as a sample of what would result if the Czechs forego the generally passive attitude which has existed since Germany took possession of the country March 14-16.

"We shall know what to do, and we can do it easily," said one well-placed German, "if the Czechs demonstrate that they cannot govern themselves."

It seemed to some observers that perhaps a test of strength was developing.

President's Toast, King's Reply

Washington, June 9.—Following are texts of the toast offered by President Roosevelt at the state dinner at the British Embassy last night, and the response by King George VI:

President Roosevelt's Toast

Your Majesties:

In the life of a nation, as in that of an individual, there are occasions that stand out in high relief. Such an occasion is the present one, when the entire United States is welcoming to its soil the King and Queen of Great Britain, of our neighbor Canada, and of all the far-flung British Commonwealth of Nations. It is an occasion for festivities, but it is also fitting that we give thanks for the bonds of friendship that link our two peoples.

I am persuaded that the greatest single contribution our two countries have been enabled to make to civilization, and to the welfare of peoples throughout the world, is the example we have jointly set by our manner of conducting relations between our two nations.

It is because each nation is lacking in fear of the other that we have unfortified borders between us. It is because neither of us fears aggression on the part of the other that we have entered no race of armaments, the one against the other.

The King and I are aware of a recent episode. Two small uninhabited islands in the centre of the Pacific became of sudden interest to the British Empire and to the United States as stepping stones for commercial airplanes between America and Australasia. Both nations claimed sovereignty. Both nations had good cases. To have entered into a long drawn out argument could have meant ill-will between us and delay in the use of the islands by either nation. It was suggested that the problem be solved by the joint use of both islands by both nations, and, by a gentleman's agreement, to defer the question of ultimate sovereignty until the year 1989. The passage of 50 years will solve many problems.

If this illustration of the use of the methods of peace, divorced from aggression, could only be universally followed, relations between all countries would rest upon a sure foundation, and men and women everywhere could once more look upon a happy, a prosperous and peaceful world.

May this kind of understanding between our countries grow ever closer, and may our friendship prosper. Ladies and gentlemen, we drink to the health of His Majesty, King George VI.

Response By King George VI

The visit which the Queen and I are paying you today is something which has been in our minds for many weeks, and if we have had our moments of anxiety they have served to make us realize how intensely we have been looking forward to the present occasion. I wish therefore in the first place to thank you for your kind invitation and to your still kinder welcome. We have been deeply touched by the manner in which Washington has already received us; and we expect to enjoy every minute of our remaining time in the United States.

From Canada which we have just left and whither we shall soon return, I bring you today the warm greetings of a neighbor and a trusted friend. From my other Dominions, from the United Kingdom, and from all my Empire I carry to you expressions of the utmost cordiality and good-will. As I drink a toast to you, Mr. President, I wish you every possible health and happiness. I trust and believe that in years to come the history of the United States will continue to be marked by that ordered progress and by that prosperity which have been theirs in the past. And I pray that our great nations may ever in the future walk together along the path of friendship in a world of peace.

SAYS CIANO WOULD END ANGLO - ITALIAN PACT

London, June 9 (CP)—The Daily Herald (Labor) reported today that Italian Premier Mussolini's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Count Ciano, is directing a "conspiracy" to lead Il Duce to denounce the Anglo-Italian accord of Easter, 1938. The group headed by Ciano, the diplomatic correspondent of the newspaper wrote, is seeking to advance the German thesis that Britain violated the Anglo-Italian pact by reaching an agreement with Turkey.

BRITISH PRESS WARNS GERMANY TO STEP WARILY

Willingness to Settle Differences by Negotiation Not Sign of Weakness

HALIFAX IS BLUNT

Any Threat Against Independence of European Nations Will be Met With Resistance

London, June 9 (CP)—The British Press today warned Germany that Great Britain's willingness to settle differences between the two nations by negotiation must not be interpreted as an indication of weakness.

Newspapers took their editorial theme from statements before Parliament yesterday by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Prime Minister Chamberlain who expressed Britain's willingness to explore Germany's demands for expanded "living space" provided mutual confidence was restored in both nations.

But they did not overlook the Foreign Secretary's blunt statement that "the day has gone by" when the independence of European nations can be destroyed by the action of one country and that any such threat would "meet with wide and resolute resistance."

Warning Emphasized

Lord Halifax emphasized this warning by predicting the permanent alliances soon would replace the mutual aid arrangements which Britain recently negotiated with Poland and Turkey.

His statement came while William Strang, Foreign Office Central-European expert, was returning from a holiday in Poland to take over a special mission to Moscow to speed inclusion of the Soviet within the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the Cabinet met at noon to complete instructions for Mr. Strang's mission.

Before the meeting Lord Halifax talked with the special envoy and Sir Eric.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Press Association said that Mr. Strang will take to Sir William Seeds, British ambassador at Moscow, a new Anglo-French formula designed to settle important details of Soviet co-operation.

State Dinner to Royal Visitors Climaxed by Musical Program

Washington, June 9 (CP)—Queen Elizabeth, wearing a diamond and ruby coronet, sat forward in her chair to watch Soco Gap square dancers from North Carolina do the "water wheel."

The King-Emperor, resplendent in evening attire and glittering decorations, sat by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to hear the Coon Creek girls from Kentucky "knock 'em daid" with fiddle and song.

The unusual scene was the climax of a state dinner and musicale at the White House last night in honor of Their Majesties—a program in which American folk singers and dancers appeared with such eminent vocalists as Lawrence Tibbett and Marian Anderson, the negro contralto.

But before the program, take a peek in the oak-panelled state dining room:—

First, there had to be an extra cushion for Queen Elizabeth's chair which of course was at the right of President Roosevelt's. Speaker William Bankhead of the House of Representatives, was at her right, then Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Earl of Eldon, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Harry Woodring, Secretary of War, and so on.

Across the big horseshoe table, decorated with hundreds of fragile white orchids, in and around the Monroe gold and mirror centrepiece, sat Mrs. Roosevelt in lovely Alencon ace. The King was at her right.

Next to him was Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, now ill. Vice-President John Garner was at Mrs. Roosevelt's left, then Lady Lindsay, Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and Washington, June 9 (AP)—The King and Queen brought a bit of Buckingham Palace to the British Embassy Garden Party, but they didn't seem to mind the definitely American touches.

New to the 1,400 guests, but old for Their Majesties, were the formal entry to "God Save the King," the opening of wide lanes for the royal party to pass through, and escorts of ladies-in-waiting and equerries.

But the gathering of Americans with big names and official rank on four acres of British soil under a hot sun and threatening clouds yesterday was not quite in the Buckingham Palace manner.

Million Pupils In Central Park To See King, Queen

New York, June 9 (CP) — New York, getting ready its flags and bunting, today anticipated perhaps the greatest crowd in its history to cheer King George and Queen Elizabeth as they ride through 51 miles of the city's streets tomorrow.

More than 60,000 tickets that allow spectators to selected vantage points along the Royal route were exhausted yesterday. The Board of Education completed arrangements for 1,000,000 school children to line the drives of Central Park. Police officials refused to make any definite estimate of how many greeters there would be. They contented themselves with saying the crowd would be "tremendous".

'Good Morning' Say King, Queen To Ladies of Press

Washington, June 9 (CP)—Newspaperwomen, who assembled at the White House today for a press conference with Mrs. Roosevelt, had an unexpectedly close glimpse of the King and Queen as their Majesties left for the reception at the British Embassy.

The 84 newswomen formed a double line, through which the Royal couple passed, walking on either side of Mrs. Roosevelt, from the blue room to the White House front door.

King George, in morning clothes, smiled and said "good morning" frequently, as did the Queen.

"These are the ladies of the press," Mrs. Roosevelt said once or twice as they walked along.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY TO HOLD ANNUAL RALLY AT KINGSTON

It is expected that a large number from Belleville and the surrounding district will attend the Rally which is being held in the Richardson Stadium, Queen's University.

REAR-END CRASH QUITE EXPENSIVE

Considerable damage resulted to two trucks following a rear end motor crash on East Dundas Street yesterday afternoon. One truck, driven by Norman Brown, 185 Foster Ave., was leaving the south curb proceeding westerly when a second truck, driven by Norman Salisbury, R.D. 7, Belleville, collided with the rear of the Brown-driven vehicle. Upon police investigation it was disclosed that over $150.00 damage had resulted to the front part of Mr. Salisbury's truck, while nearly $75.00 damage resulted to the vehicle driven by Mr. Brown. Fender axle and even frame damage was seen, police reported, but no charges were preferred. Brown assured police he had only started to pull away from the curb when the impact occured from the rear.

TWO TRANSIENTS GIVEN 14 DAYS

Following reports and complaints that two transients were panhandling from door to door on the East Hill last evening and generally molesting the residents of that area, Sergeant Arthur Booth and P. C. Thomson subsequently arrested two men, who gave their names as Robert Briere and Wilfred Gongeau, both Montreal transients. When apprehended the men were intoxicated, a fact which was proven when the pair were sentenced to serve 14 days in the common jail after being convicted of violations of the L.C.A. before Magistrate E.J. Butler, K.C., today. The only other police activity was apprehension of a 16-year-old youth, who was held by police pending investigations looking into the breaking and entering of Madill's garage, Front St., and the theft of a set of socket wrenches from that establishment. The matter is still under investigation, Plainclothes Constable Isard hoping to recover the articles today.

Council in Committee Refuses Request Board Education

Due to Excessive Tax Rate Members Think Time for School Addition Inopportune

HOLIDAY JULY 3RD

The City Council held an important committee meeting at the City Hall on Thursday evening and after a lengthy discussion decided "that the requisition of the Board of Education for $35,000 for addition and equipment to Queen Mary School is inopportune and that the same be not further entertained by the council at the present time." This action was taken due to the excessive tax rate in the City of Belleville at the present time.

A new lighting system, the same as on Dundas Street and other main streets, will be constructed on Bridge Street West and Catherine Street in the immediate future. A recommendation to the Public Utilities Commission asking that the work be proceeded with at once was passed in committee.

The tender of Charles L. Hyde for new eavestroughs and conductors on the City Hall was accepted at a price of $492.50. The tender of Herbert Collins for painting the exterior of the City Hall building and tower for $700 was accepted.

Under the chairmanship of Ald. Jack Marshall, the Special Property Committee introduced a number of recommendations, that were accepted by the committee and will be ratified at the council meeting of Monday night. An extension of time was given Ross Neal to erect a house north of Bridge Street and that a new deed be given Mr. Neal on receiving a quit claim deed from the Patterson estate. The time limit was set at October 1st, 1940 with Mr. Neal to pay the arrears of taxes on the lot. W. H. Panter was sold a lot on Hillside Street for $20 providing a house valued at $2,500 be erected within one year and the purchaser pay the 1939 taxes. The offer of Frank Codling for a lot on the east side of Bleecker Avenue of $75 was accepted providing the purchaser erects within one year a house valued at $2,500 and pay the 1939 taxes.

P. C. McGuire was sold a lot on Bridge Street east between Bleecker and Dufferin Avenues, for the sum of $240 providing he erects a house on the property within a year at a value of $3,500 and that he pay the 1939 taxes.

Monday, July 3rd, will be celebrated as a Public Holiday in this city if a recommendation passed in committee is ratified by the Council in regular session. The committee recommended "that His Worship the Mayor, proclaim Monday, July 3rd., Dominion Day holiday for the City of Belleville in lieu of Saturday, July 1st.

Inspecting Officer States Queen Mary School Cadets Best in Dist.

If those manly little fellows that comprise the cadet corps of Queen Mary Public School strut around the campus today with their chests thrown out and a look of pride on their faces they can't be blamed very much, for yesterday at their annual inspection they drew the unstinted admiration of a large crowd of spectators, and the statement from Captain P. C. Millette, G.S.O., M.D. 3, that they were the best public school cadet corps in the military district. And military district No. 3 comprises a large portion of Eastern Ontario.

To the blare of bugles and the roll of drums the smart khaki-clad corps marched past the saluting base with the precision of veterans. In line, column-of-route, and battalion formation the straight unwavering lines of cadets, eyes turned smartly to the right marched past the base, where Captain Millette took the salute. With the inspecting officer were Acting Chairman of the Board of Education, Lieut. Col. A. E. Geen, Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble, A.L.I., Captain P. Douglas and others.

Following the inspection and march past, the cadets displayed their military efficiency in company manoeuvres. Signal corps swept into action and other detail units exhibited their ability.

A colorful feature of the inspection was the display of physical training in which the corps was augmented with 86 girl pupils attractively garbed in blue and white.

Drawn up in a square at the conclusion of the inspection, the corps heard Captain Millette compliment them on their splendid appearance and drill. "I have no hesitation" he said, "in classifying you as the best public school cadet corps in the military district." He paid tribute to the officers and corp instructor, E. S. Fairman. He urged the corps to apply their military education to the great game of life and go out as fine citizens of this great democracy.

Kinsmen Crests Presented

President William Hurst of the Belleville Kinsmen Club addressed the cadets briefly and presented 12 winners with club crests for efficiency in shooting.

Lieut. Col. Geen congratulated the corps on their smart efficiency and for the distinction it had brought the school and city. He declared the rest of the day a holiday.

OTTAWA COUPLE SKATING TO N.Y.

Walter Rabbe and Sister Expect to Make Journey in 25 Days

Enroute to the New York World's Fair, Walter Rabbe and his 19-year-old blonde-haired sister, rolled into Belleville on roller skates last evening. Walter and Lila Rabbe left Ottawa on Monday bound for the "big fair," but the unique part of the trip is the fact that they are making the trip on roller skates.

The Rabbes skated from Kingston to Belleville yesterday, rested here last night and early today struck out for Port Hope. "We understand the road from here to Toronto is cement, so we expect to make much better time than we did from Ottawa to Kingston," stated Walter as the pair headed westerly this morning.

The Rabbes are skating the entire distance, but they admitted they received a lift of four miles, three of which were east of Belleville on Highway No. 2 where roller skating was impossible owing to the condition of the road.

The Rabbes hope to complete their trip from their native Ottawa to New York in 25 days, although Walter intimated last evening upon their arrival in Belleville they were a full day behind their schedule already. The Rabbes skate on solid steel, case hardened, wheels, from which one-sixteenth of an inch of steel has already been worn off, they revealed last night.

Walter had fallen three times since leaving home, while Lila had only fallen once upon her arrival in Belleville, but while conversing with a local reporter on Front St. last evening, Lila's skates slipped from beneath her and she took her second fall of the trip, while practically at a standstill. Sun-tanned and happy about the whole thing the two left after a good night's rest, early today.

OBITUARY

JAMES LORIMER

After an illness of one month's duration James Lorimer passed away at the family residence, 323 Charles Street, this Friday morning.

The late Mr. Lorimer was born 71 years ago in Belleville and had lived here practically all his life. For many years he was in the service of the old Grand Trunk Railway, later the Canadian National Railways and discharged his duties as a locomotive engineer with efficiency. He was held in high regard by the officials and was popular and well esteemed by his fellow employees. After serving in this division for forty-five years he retired in the year 1933 and since then he had lived retired in this city. He was a good citizen and will be much missed by many old friends and acquaintances.

In religion Mr. Lorimer was a member of the Tabernacle United Church, and fraternally he was a member of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A. F. & A. M.; Quinte Chapter R. A. M. No. 237; the Ancient Order of Foresters and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

Surviving him are his wife; two sons, Mr. James W. Lorimer and Mr. Ralph A. Lorimer, both of Belleville; one daughter, Miss Annie Olive Lorimer, at home, and one brother, Mr. William Lorimer, Port Huron.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

"Scavenger Hunt" Proves Entertaining

If you happened to see youthful boys and girls rummaging in back yards or garbage cans last evening, there was really nothing to concern oneself about as the students of the Belleville Collegiate were merely entertaining themselves at a "scavenger hunt". The ideas and principles of a scavenger hunt are quite simple, the participants are divided into teams and given a long list of articles they must procure and bring back to a central point, which happened to be the Belleville Collegiate last night.

On the list of articles to be obtained might be a live gold fish, as was the case for one of the teams last night. Old rubbage such as a discarded boot, a sox with a hole in the heel, an old derby hat, maybe the signature of a policemen or firemen is needed to complete the list, but at any rate the game is seemingly enjoyed by the old as well as the young.

In last evening's "scavenger hunt" at the Collegiate the team composed of Betty Shorey, Ted Hinchey, Jean Aikens and Bill Bateman was the winner. A period of one hour and 15 mintues was given the teams five in all, to gather their list of allotted articles and return to the Collegiate. Team No. 2 composed of the above mentioned students, was successful in procuring their goods in exactly 31 minutes. Refreshments were later served in the domestic science room.

Dr. Baker Oldest Graduate To Attend Anniversary Dinner

Graduated from Albert College Sixty Years Ago

In the stately dignity of Burwash Hall, Victoria College, Toronto, surrounded by venerable graduates of years ago, the Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, president-emeritus of Albert College observed the sixtieth anniversary of his graduation from the latter-named institution.

Twenty-five graduates of well over two-score years sat down to the commemorative banquet, presided over by Principal Brown of the Theological College. The function was held for graduates of fifty, fifty-five, sixty and sixty-five years standing. Dr. Baker was the oldest "grad" present, and the only one to commemorate his sixtieth anniversary. He is the sole remaining member of the class that strode bravely from the classrooms and halls of Albert sixty years ago to spread the word of God throughout the land.

Interviewed this morning, Dr. Baker said that "I feel fine. Here I am eighty-six years old, and getting along splendidly. Why? Because I observe the laws of health. I take my exercises every morning, and enjoy doing them."

Dr. Baker explained that when church union was consummated fourteen years ago, Albert College was affiliated with Victoria College. "But I still have a warm spot in my heart for the dear old school," he smiled.

10 YEAR TERM

McSherry's Explanation.

McSherry told the jury he was "entitled to give you an explanation as to what has taken place in Scotland and England."

"In January of this year, the army council of the Irish Republican army (an organization illegal in Eire and Great Britain) sent the British Foreign Secretary a note demanding withdrawal of all British troops from Northern Ireland.

"All representations failed. The British government did not take action and a series of explosions took place throughout England.

"I hold the British Government responsible for those explosions that have taken place and will continue to take place until the demands set out in the ultimatum are granted."

TARIFF BOARD ASKED TO MAKE SWEEPING SURVEY

Profits Earned by Refineries in Past 20 Years Should be Probed Says Member

HISTORICAL REVIEWS

Sugar Industry Great Boon to South-Western Ontario Board is Told

Ottawa, June 9 (CP)—A request that the tariff board make a "sweeping survey" of the profits earned by the sugar refining companies of Canada during the last 20 years was made by Ross W. Gray (Lib. Lambton West), when the board began its hearing on the sugar industry.

Four parliamentarians attended the opening, with Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East), submitting a lengthy brief on behalf of the sugar-beet growers in Western Ontario. This industry was valuable to farmers in that it ensured a proper rotation of crops, but it was unprofitable, said Mr. Martin. The sugar beet growers were capable of filling [illegible] per cent of Canada's sugar requirements. At the moment they supplied only 12 to 14 per cent.

H. A. McKenzie (Lib. Lambton-Kent) and J. H. Blackmore, Social Credit leader, were also present.

A. W. McIntyre, Secretary of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company Limited, Chatham, Ont., gave the Board a historical review of the sugar industry since 1902. He sketched the general developments during the war years and the collapse of the sugar boom in the 1920's.

In spite of greatly reduced returns to both farm and factory, the sugar industry had been a "great boon to south-western Ontario", he said.

Tribute was paid to the memory of Hon. George H. Sedgewick, former chairman of the Tariff Board at the opening of the hearing.

New Relief is Found For Angina Pectoris

Scientist Develops Belt to Ease Weight of Abdomen

San Francisco, June 9.—An important new development in the world-wide campaign to halt the inroads of angina pectoris, one of the most painful and dreaded of all human heart complaints, is announced by the University of California Medical School. A simple therapeutic process, designed at first to relieve certain lung conditions, has developed surprising efficiency in overcoming the anginal condition the medical division of the school reports.

Apparently hopeless cases have experienced a restoration of function to the extent that they could resume their normal activities, according to a bulletin just issued. Many other cases have been helped so materially, it was said, that the division has felt justified in publishing the conclusion that the way may have been found to check the mounting toll of incapacities from this disease.

The treatment requires a specially designed abdominal belt, the use of which increases return of venous blood to the heart by raising the intra-abdominal pressure. In cases of obesity, the belt relieves the diaphragm of the counter-weight of the abdomen, allowing the diaphragm to function more normally. The consequent improvement in coronary circulation is roughly proportionate to the filling of the heart with blood.

Abdominal support serves for the relief of pain during the time that the weight is being reduced by dietary measures. It has been found that, during treatment, the usual drugs may be dispensed with. Also, with certain modifications, the treatment may be used effectively [illegible] slender people.

HEARST PAPERS PRAISE THE KING

Editorial Says Americans Forget There Ever Was a King Named George III

New York, June 9 (CP) — "George VI, by his great charm and sincere interest in doing his 'King-job' well, has already won a warm welcome here that makes us forget there ever was a King named George III," said William Randolph Hearst's Daily Mirror in an editorial today.

"History will record that at 10.30 o'clock on the evening of June 7, 1939, an English king named George crossed into American soil from the British Dominion of Canada," said the Mirror. "And perhaps historians will say that no single sovereign has done any thing so important to the history of the British Empire since another King George—the third, he was—stubbornly crossed swords with American colonists more than a century and a half ago.

"Amateur historians may be permitted to speculate on this idea: "Suppose King George III had been a nice fellow like George VI . . . We wonder if the United States of America would today be the British 'Dominion of America?'"

Queen Mary Makes 1st Appeararce Since Her Accident on May 23rd

By GUY RHOADES

London, June 9 (CP) — Queen Mary, making her first appearance in public since she was injured in an automobile collision May 23, watched the Duke of Gloucester take the salute yesterday at the two-centuries old ceremony of the trooping of the color in the sun-baked Horseguards parade.

The occasion was the official celebration in the United Kingdom of the King's birthday.

The Queen Mother was given an ovation by a vast throng as she drove across the parade at St. James's Palace in a car with Princess Margaret Rose. The two entered a building beside the parade to watch through a window while the scarlet-coated guards, wearing their high busbies, marched past under sweltering skies in one of the world's most spectacular military ceremonies.

Queen Mary, dressed in grey, walked a little stiffly as she left Marlborough to drive to St. James's. A large crowd gathered outside her residence and waved to her as she drove past. She responded happily although she seemed to be still suffering slightly as a result of the severe bruising she suffered in the collision two weeks ago.

Extremely Pleased.

She was reported extremely pleased to be able to attend the trooping of the color, held annually on the King's birthday, which she has not missed in almost half a century.

Most disappointed member of the Royal Family today was Princess Elizabeth, 13-year-old heir presumptive, who was forced to remain indoors with a slight cold while her younger sister and her grandmother went to St. James's. Princess Elizabeth last left Buckingham Palace June 5 when she was driven to Marlborough House to see Queen Mary.

The Duke of Gloucester formally took the salute on behalf of the King, who is in the United States following his Canadian tour. The Duke and Duchess of Kent and their young son, Prince Edward, looked on.

Although his Majesty's birthday is observed officially in the United Kingdom today, he will not be 44 years old until Dec. 14. The official birthday is marked annually in June because there is better weather.

(The Canadian celebration occurred May 20 when the King took the salute at a trooping of the color ceremony in Ottawa.)

71-YEAR-OLD MAN REFUSES TO DUEL

Quarrel is Over Article in Royalist Organ Attacking Newspaperman

Paris, June 9 (AP)—A refusal to duel by 71-year-old Charles Maurras, Militant Royalist, brought a notification today from seconds for Jean Prouvost, a newspaper publisher, that they would accuse him of failure "in the obligations of a gentleman."

Maurras, once one of the readiest duellers of France, had told the seconds he considered duelling "out of date" and suggested the publisher use his newspaper of the Courts to obtain satisfaction. Duelling is illegal.

The quarrel grew out of an article by Maurras in the Royalist organ, L'Action Francaise, attacking Prouvost's reputation as a newspaperman.

LONDON PAPERS FEATURE U.S. VISIT

Display Pages Devoted Almost Exclusively to Royal Visit to Washington

London, June 9 (CP) — The United States' reception to King George and Queen Elizabeth shoved everything but stories of the hot weather off the display pages of many British newspapers today.

Headlines ranged from a breezy, "Hi Ya King!" to the Times' dignified caption, "Crossing the Border; the King's Visit to Washington."

The Times brought out a 32-page United States number, filled with pictures and articles on almost everything American, from contemporary literature to sports.

The Times said Britons would gain new insight into American life and noted that "the two governments understand each other well enough and have no need to ask the King and President to interrupt the pleasures of social intercourse with business of State."

10,000 Polish Jews Are Rounded Up By Gestapo Police

Only Men So Far Included in Drive

Berlin, June 9 (AP) — Polish Jews who number more than 10,000 in Germany were reported being rounded up today by the Gestapo—Secret Police—either for deportation or concentration camps.

Jews said groups were being escorted to the Polish frontier daily. So far only men have been involved in the drive.

In Munich 400 Jews were reported under arrest. Undetermined numbers were in custody in Berlin and Breslau. Several hundred Jews in Dresden were given until noon tomorrow to get out of Germany.

Those who lost their Polish passports under a new Polish citizenship law last November are being taken to concentration camps while those whose passports are in order are being put across the Polish frontier.

Jews said two general reasons were given them by the Gestapo for the campaign—that Germany would not tolerate foreigners without passports and that it was a measure to counter recent Polish deportations of German citizens.

AS HEADS OF DEMOCRATIC NATIONS MEET

"How are you, I am glad to see you."

The heads of the two greatest of world democracies met yesterday in Washington and the host said, "How are you, I'm so glad to see you." That was President Roosevelt's greeting and welcome to His Majesty, King George Sixth, head of the greatest empire that has been.

These men are the heads of the two branches of the English-speaking race and it was fitting that the visit of the King and Queen of Great Britain to the United States should be opened with words of pure Anglo-Saxon undefiled. The words used by Mr. Roosevelt are simple words of one syllable. What the King's reply was is not recorded but it doubtless was in the same simple unaffected strain. They are simple words used by sincere men and women and lack all sense of poise. His Majesty in his speeches too has shown his fine command of English, particularly of the Anglo-Saxon words which are the foundation of the English language. It is found that in all life's great moments, simplicity and lack of poise are marks of man's expression. These words of the President and the words of the King were spoken in just one of these great moments of human life, in this case, the meeting of two great men, representing each a mighty nation and men who had heard much of one another. Such words ring true and natural.

Such words are a happy prelude to the American visit of the King and Queen, for both nations use the same language and the same style of thought; and the gracious royal ways and the free-and-easy American ways, expressing a love of liberty and the spirit of optimism, become the two branches of a race in which lies largely the hope of world democracy.

HELP HUMANE SOCIETY TAG DAY

Faith in the responsive spirit of Belleville so generously given to worthy causes, exemplified last year when the Belleville Humane Society launched its inaugural campaign for funds and membership was voiced today by officials of the Society.

While the majority of people, no matter what creed or color, nationality of denomination, are more or less generously endowed with the humane quality toward dumb animals, residents of this city and its environs have shown by their attitude toward the efforts of the Society and their wholehearted sympathy with its purpose, that they are possessed of more than the average amount of feeling for the well-being and kind treatment of their dumb friends.

Tomorrow, Saturday, the Society holds its second annual tag-day. Tomorrow sellers of the little mementos will offer their wares at street corners, on public thoroughfares, in homes and in shops and places of business. They will go about their duties with the feeling that the big heart that is part of the life of this city will again demonstrate its willingness to sympathize with, and to contribute to, a cause that is a worthy one.

Remarkable strides were made last year in the first twelve months of the society's operations here. It has gone a long way toward the alleviation of distress on the part of a number of animals while its efforts, in some cases, in bringing to justice persons who according to evidence and the court showed lack of regard for animals' sufferings, have earned it well-deserved admiration from all walks of life.

It is still keeping up its splendid work. But this cannot be done with moral support of the city and district alone. Finances are urgently needed, and through the medium of the Tag-Day officials and members are appealing to a warm-hearted Belleville public to again respond to the silent plea of the dumb animals who are unable to plead for themselves.

Tomorrow is Belleville's chance to show its appreciation of the fine work being done by this society. Tomorrow all lovers of animals, no matter who or what they be should respond generously to the call for funds.

Buy a tag—buy two—and then watch the results of your investment in the careful treatment of these animals of the city and district which, until a couple of years ago, were victims of sad neglect, and in some cases, inhuman treatment.

Give bread to the stranger, in the name of the universal brotherhood which binds together all men under the common fatherhood of nature.—Quintilian.

NEWSPAPER COLUMNISTS HAVE MORE LATITUDE IN DESCRIBING current news events than the ordinary reporter and seldom fail to inject a note of humor in their paragraphs if the subject permits. A Chicago writer led off his description on the trial of Jack Benny for smuggling jewellery as follows: "Jack Benny, the professional comedian and amateur smuggler, was fined $10,000 and handed a one year's suspended sentence after being reprimanded by the court in six assorted flavors including raspberry." Damon Runyon opened his description on the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann thus: "I don't like to cover executions. It's tough enough to see people live without having to watch people die." Heywood Broun commenting on a Babe Ruth batting slump said: "Ruth, crushed to earth, will rise again."

JAPAN'S MESSAGE TO THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR comes in unique form being an eternal flame from a Shinto temple in Japan and borne to the World of Tomorrow by a Canadian-born Christian Japanese girl. The flame is from a sacred fire which has been burning for 1500 years and is described by the New York Times as follows:

x

"An inch-high, flickering yellow light that she had escorted 11,000 miles by water, land and air was the precious freight carried recently by Miss Akiko Tsukimoto as she got off an airplane at Newark. The "flame of friendship," representing Japan's official gesture of good-will toward this nation, was lighted in a Shinto temple at Izumo, and borne to the World of Tomorrow by a Canadian-born Christian Japanese girl almost literally from the world of yesterday, since the original fire from which it was taken has been burning for 1,500 years.

x

At Flushing Meadows the glass and metal receptacle was presented formally to Grover A. Whalen, president of the World's Fair, in a ceremony at the Court of Peace, where Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi conveyed the greetings of the Japanese nation. The flame was then taken in a procession to the Japanese Pavilion, where it was placed on view and kept burning for the duration of the exposition.

x

From the Grand Shrine of Izumo, hundreds of miles from Tokyo, the cypress torch lighted from the ancient fire was carried to Tokyo and consigned to the care of Miss Tsukimoto, who had previously been selected as its caretaker and given the title "Miss Japan." Her assignment was to deliver the flame to New York without permitting it to die. It was carried in a lantern of glass and precious metals, burning a mixture of vegetable oil and camphor that had to be replenished every four hours.

x

To insure that no sudden gust would extinguish the flame, it was carried across the continent after its arrival at San Francisco in a specially constructed metal case resembling an oven unit. A second unit carried two smaller flames, the latter in small, bulbous glass vases set up in ornamental urns resembling gilded lotus flowers.

x

Akiko Tsukimoto, whose birthplace was Vancouver, B. C., and who lived for a short time in Seattle before returning to Japan with her parents, speaks English German and French as well as Japanese. She was a delegate from Japan to a college conference at Reed College in Portland, Ore., in 1935, but is greatly thrilled by her first visit to the East..

SOME QUEER THINGS ARE BOUND TO HAPPEN at the New York World's Fair where so many people from all over the world congregate for sightseeing day by day. This one is contributed by Will H. Hayes, president of the Motion Pictures Producers and Distributors of America, a recent visitor at the Fair. "Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, Commandant of the 3rd U.S. Naval District, was walking around the Fair in his uniform on a recent morning when a visitor stopped him thinking he was an attendant. Said the visitor to the Admiral: "Call me one of those motor chairs." Said the Admiral: "But I am an Admiral in the U.S. Navy." Visitor: "All right. Call me a boat."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Curing Insomnia — Sleeplessness

The story has been told for many years about a member of a household who complained of her inability to sleep. She said she was a very light sleeper, the slightest noise would awaken her, and, once awake it would be hours before she got off to sleep again. It happened one night that there was a large fire directly across the street, so large indeed, that a "general" alarm was sounded and with it, the usual noises of sirens and shouting. Everybody in the house was awakened and watched the proceedings for hours; everybody except the non-sleeper and she had taken no drugs to make her sleep.

The point is that most of us get more sleep than we think we do. The minutes that we are awake during the night seem like hours and the hours we sleep seem like minutes.

Research workers tell us that if we could all get two hours of sound sleep each night and rest quietly (no plans or problems on our mind) for six more hours, we could at least continue to live; with four hours sleep and four hours complete rest, we could do our daily work. They state further that the worry of not being able to sleep is more wearing on the body than the lack of sleep itself.

In searching for the cause of insomnia or sleeplessness, there are certain definite ailments such as a brain tumor and high blood pressure that should be considered There are also cases of disturbed rest due to poor mattresses or springs, too much light, unusual noises, worries or problems, pain, temperature of room too high or too low, the wrong kind or too much food at evening meal or before retiring.

Most insomnia patients respond well to a hot bath before retiring if they will go to bed in the darkness immediately after the bath. In mental hospitals where there are both the depressed and the excitable types, the hot bath for some minutes is often used to induce and prolong sleep.

What about drugs? It would be safe to say that there have been more new drugs to produce sleep and relieve pain placed on the market in the last few years than nearly all other new drugs for other conditions combined. In cases where there has been severe emotional disturbance causing sleeplessness, the use of these new drugs is considered justified. Such simple methods as the hot bath, a hot drink, hot water bag to stomach, light exercise before retiring, should also be tried before the use of the sleeping tablet should be permitted.

KING

"I pray that our great nations may ever in the future walk together along the path of friendship in a world of peace," the King said, replying to a toast by the President.

"I trust and believe that in years to come the history of the United States will continue to be marked by that ordered progress and by that prosperity which have been theirs in the past."

Settle Grievances Peacefully

The President said the United States and Great Britain made their principal contribution to civilization by showing international grievances could be settled peacefully. He pointed to settlement of the recent episode between Britain and the United States over ownership of Pacific Islands and continued:

"If this illustration of the use of methods of peace, divorced from aggression, could only be universally followed, relations between all countries would rest upon a sure foundation and men and women everywhere could once more look upon a happy, prosperous and a peaceful world."

The State dinner climaxed a day in which hundreds of thousands of Americans acclaimed Their Majesties. It was difficult to detect any difference between the welcomes they received in Canada and the United States that broke away from the Empire 150 years ago.

More Soldiers Seen

In Canada there was a depth of loyalty and love that brought tears and could not be duplicated in their "foreign" country. Otherwise there was nothing that differed except that Washington had more soldiers. Too, it had more airplanes. And, for the first time in the royal tour, Their Majesties were provided an escort of armored trucks.

An afternoon garden party at the British Embassy—following a hearty Presidential welcome, a procession through the crowd-lined city, a White House luncheon and a sight seeing tour—was the only event of the day at which Their Majesties mingled with hundreds of persons as they often did in Canada.

The State dinner was exclusive, confined to 80 guests, but 1,500 persons attended the garden party and every last one who could possibly manage a presentation was presented.

Took Different Courses

To save time and wear and tear the King took one route through the British Embassy grounds and the Queen another. They were separated for more than an hour, their longest public separation since they reached Canada.

G-Men stuck out like sore thumbs around the garden. They wore neither morning clothes nor linen suits—the garb prescribed by Lady Lindsay recently—and their appearance at each entrance and every possible exit, including the hedges, was noticeable. They stayed on duty long after the last guest had left and saw that the last newspaperman departed from the grounds.

The garden party was, for Washington's elite, the event of the day. The beautiful grounds—four acres of England—of the $1,000,000 Embassy were filled with notables who never jostled each other but did all they could politely to move nearer the King and Queen.

Talks With Admiral Byrd

His Majesty, recognizing the name of some one who had been presented, would stop and chat for a while. He had rather long talks with Admiral Richard Byrd, the Antarctic explorer and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt who said later she had "known him since he was a lad and all his family, too."

He and the Queen met about 150 persons each and smiled through all the handshaking despite Washington's heavy heat. Later they had tea under the Embassy portico with J. P. Morgan, the banker.

The Queen looked a trifle sunburned during her Washington stay but her clear complexion drew exclamations from Capitol belles. Neither she nor the King seemed to mind the heat.

Formal Clothes

During the morning His Majesty wore the heavy uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet. In the afternoon he wore formal morning clothes and a grey top hat and, despite his long walk, seemed cool while others at the garden party mopped their brows every minute.

The garden party and the state dinner topped a day in which Their Majesties were acclaimed by 500,000 Washingtonians and their visitors. In a temperature of 89 degrees they drove around miles of the city and watched people packed six-deep at the curbs acclaim them.

They had luncheon at the White House with the Roosevelt family, met Franklin Junior, Elliott and James—who were at the garden party but kept in the background—and later took a sight-seeing drive through the city before going to the garden party.

Many in Linen Suits

Many men prominent in political, social and business circles defied the hot June sun at the garden party in white linen suits. The Embassy ruled them socially correct.

In the evening following the State dinner the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained their Royal overnight guests and 200 others with a musical program that was 100 per cent American.

There were songs by Marion Anderson, negro contralto, Kate Smith, who popularized "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," Lawrence Tibbett of opera fame and a negro spiritual choir. There were also square dancers from North Carolina and mountain musicians from Kentucky.

IN HUMANE SOCIETY DRIVE

Pictured above are Mrs. Robert J. Graham and Mrs. Charles A. Payne who will be in charge of the Tag Day operations tomorrow when the Belleville Humane Society launches its second annual appeal for funds with which to keep up its splendid work. Any information regarding the campaign will be cheerfully given by these ladies or Miss Helen Fraleck, secretary of the Society.

LIFE INSURANCE

Without Waste.

"It is the duty of all to see that honest, competent and economical management shall obtain so that insurance may be available to our people at the lowest possible cost, without waste, improvidence or avoidable expense." Mr. Conant declared.

The amount of life insurance in Ontario in 1938 passed the $3,000,000,000 mark, Mr. Conant pointed out, and its annual turnover is second only to the budget of the province itself.

"How vital it is to our people is further indicated by the fact that the business in force of over $3,000,000,000 represents some 2,800,000 policies, with the average policyholder carrying less than $2,000 insurance," he continued.

Companies' Responsibilities.

"Those very figures, however, impose tremendous responsibilities upon the insurance companies and, perhaps to a lesser degree, upon the Department of Insurance and Governments. These monies in the hands of insurance companies are a trust representing to many people their very life-blood and to their dependents the necessities of life or the difference between want and comparative competency.

"To the insurance department these funds present the responsibility of seeing that sound business and solvency prevail. That is essentially and primarily the function of the insurance department."

Government's Concessions.

Mr. Conant told of the government's concessions to the insurance business. The province amended the Succession Duty Act two years ago to exempt from duty the capital value of any annuity, income or periodic payment up to $1,200 a year established for the benefit of dependent members of a family. In its submission to the Rowell Commission last year, the government advanced the suggestion that life insurance premiums on policies up to $1,200 lump sum value, or annuities up to $1,200 a year ought to be allowed as deductions from taxable income.

The only animals allowed on the planes of the Trans-Canada Air Lines are "Seeing Eye" dogs guiding their blind masters. The first dog passenger on the T.C.A. was Wanda, who accompanied her master, R. P. Thompson, executive officer, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Calgary, Alta., from Calgary to Lethbridge and Vancouver and across to Victoria by Canadian Airways.

STATE DINNER

Lady Katharine Seymour, lady-in-waiting to the Queen.

At the left of the President were Mrs. Garner, Sir Ronald Lindsay, Mrs. Bankhead. And on around the table were 82 of Washington's and London's official elite.

Queen Beautifully Dressed

The Queen was the object of many eyes. Her coronet was just a beginning. Her white tulle bouffant gown had three full flounces specked with gold. Her necklace and earrings were of diamonds and pigeon-blood rubies and, she wore a diamond necklace.

Thanks to the King, who sent the word around after a taste of Washington's heat, men in the royal party were in evening dress instead of court uniform.

After the terrapin and capon, there were toasts by the President and King—toasts pledging the friendship of the English-speaking nations.

Then the ladies moved to the green room, where the Queen sat on a couch and the guests took turns talking to her. In the dining room, President Roosevelt signalled for the King and Vice President Garner to come around to his side of the table, and all the men were served liqueurs and coffee.

The Queen talked mostly about the weather, thought it was quite hot. Her children, she said, are just beginning to get homesick for their parents. She and their father talk to them every day.

Then into the east room for the musicale, to which 200 more guests came:—

Tibbett sang "Sylvia." Marian Anderson sang "Ave Maria" and "Trampin'." The North Carolina Chorus did "De Ol' Ark's A Moverin'." Alan Lomax gave the cowboy touch with "Git Along Little Dogies."

When it was over, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the King and Queen received the entertainers. It must have been fun; it lasted until 12.30 a.m.

Premier Leaves London

The Prime Minister is to leave London for Birmingham late today. He will return Sunday evening.

The question now is whether the German Government will agree to steps for disarmament or arms limitation, said The Daily Express (Independent). It was of urgent importance that the Germans should learn of the peaceful desires and intentions of the democracies, "and of their strength and resolution should goodwill fail."

The News Chronicle (Liberal) expressed a fear that the Foreign Secretary's speech was "expressed in a manner which may be misinterpreted as weakening British policy, as a return to the policy 'of appeasement.'"

"It would indeed be a dangerous element in the present situation," as Lord Halifax stated, if Germany should drift to the conclusion that Britain had abandoned all desire for an understanding. The News Chronicle said.

"But it would be far more dangerous if Germany should think we are once more ready to tread the Munich path."

KEEP COOL THE "SALADA" WAY

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

Graduates are Challenged To Conserve Their Resources At Convocation Exercises

Rev. Frank Langford of Toronto is Special Speaker for Occasion

GET READY TO LIVE

A stirring challenge to youth to conserve the natural resources of life when they go out into the world was given member of the graduation class, and undergraduates of Albert College yesterday in a brilliant Convocation address by the Rev. Frank Langford, B.A., D.D., secretary of the Christian Board of Education, Toronto, at the annual exercises held in the Memorial Chapel of the college.

Natural resources of life, like those of the nation consist of three classes, the speaker said, and these are renewable—living things of constant supply; unrenewable, those things which must be conserved or they are lost forever, and permanent such as truth, beauty etc.

"Life itself is an unrenewable resource. You live it but once and it can never come back. Time is another. You have but one opportunity. Conserve it and use it. Make it pay dividends. Each day brings you an opportunity that is never renewed."

Just an Excuse

"Youth too is in this class", Dr. Langford said. "The quotation that 'you are young but once' is but an excuse for a waste of time. You are not getting ready to live. You are living now. Youth brings the things that never come back as long as you live."

"Go out in high adventure of life", he said, "and let youth call you to do the hard things. Face the world with your chin up and be a great adventurer. Unrenewable resources are well worth considering. Use them well."

All things that society has built up are renewable resources Dr. Langford told his audience. "This great democratic government of ours was bought at a great price—hence it is well worth keeping. It is not known what kind of a government we shall have fifty years from now, so I suggest you conserve the advantages of the political system entrusted to you. In other systems the liberties of man have been denied them.

"The value of the twin privileges we enjoy, freedom and responsibility should make us proud of the fact that we live in a country like this where freedom is the base of the individual. Go out into our great economic system feeling if you accept its advantages you must accept its responsibilities", he added.

The church is a great renewable resource that is entrusted to youth, the speaker declared. It keeps constantly changing but the opportunity of responsibility for the carrying on of its work rests in the hands of youth. "It is worth passing on. Conserve the Christian Church, a renewable resource that has been entrusted to your care".

Truth, beauty, art, great music, justice, honesty, honor, integrity and purity are resources that are eternal and never die, Dr. Langford said. "They are the most precious treasures you carry away. Nations die and are forgotten. Truth and honor cannot die because they are part of Nature and God Himself".

"Among all gifts, cherish these things that will not pass away. Life will be richer, finer, nobler, because of the resources permitted you in your life in Albert College. May God bless you", Dr. Langford concluded.

ALBERT STUDENTS GIVEN DIPLOMAS AT CONVOCATION

Principal Rev. Dr. Bert Howard Presides at Beautiful Ceremony

BIBLE PRESENTED

Ronald Mercer of British West Indies Delivers Valedictory Address

Stately Memorial Hall of Albert College was filled to near capacity yesterday afternoon with proud parents, friends and alumni as members of the graduating class of 1939, and undergraduates of the college were honored at the convocation exercises.

Immaculate in white graduation dresses, and corsages of spring flowers, the young lady members of the class afforded a distinct contrast to the smart blazers and flannels of the youths as they filed into Memorial Hall a few minutes before the exercises opened.

Members of the faculty and staff dignified in cap and gown, occupied the dais at the end of the Hall. The Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of the College, presided over the exercises, while seated with him on the platform were the Rev. Dr. Frank Langford, B.A., D.D., Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, Toronto, guest speaker for the occasion and the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church. In the auditorium were noted visitors and relatives of students from the far-flung corners of the Dominion and Province.

The Candidates

Candidates for graduation were: Atkinson, Harry, Albert College; Beacock, Stanley, Elmvale, Ont.; Beatty, Fred, Fergus, Ont.; Brown, Bruce, Schreiber, Ont.; Finlay, Jack, Toronto, Ont.; Fisher, Marion, Belleville, Ont.; Freeman, Wm. J., Stratford, Ont.; French, Harry, Ottawa, Ont.; Little, Lewis, Trenton, Ont.; Macdonald, Howard, Lancaster, Ont.; Mady, David, Garson Mine, Ont.; Melvaer, Thorunn, Chuquicamata, Chile; Mercer, Ronald, Plymouth, Montserrat, B.W.I.; Pascoe, Robert, Creighton Mine, Ont.; Simmons, Wayne, Trenton, Ont.; Ward, Orde Burr, Picton, Ont.; Whiteman, Margaret, Picton, Ont.; Wilson, Bruce, Trenton, Ont.; Wilson, Helen, Vancouver, B.C.; Woolley, Thomas, London, Ont.

Following the invocation and hymn that officially opened the exercises, Principal Dr. Howard presented his report. Granting of diplomas and certificates awarded in Conservatory Department and presented by S. M. Anglin, B.A., preceded the Valedictory Address delivered by Ronald Mercer of the British West Indies. Then followed a much-enjoyed vocal solo, "Land of Hope and Glory" by Mr. Anglin; the address by Dr. Langford which appears in another column; the presentation by the graduating class and the presentation of prizes, scholarships and athletic awards.

Expressions of sincere gratitude were voiced by Principal Howard to friends of the school not only of this age but others "who had made it possible for us to serve youth with one great purpose and ideal in mind." He paid tribute to the late Mr. Morrow of Peterboro, who was possessed of a fine Christian nature and a corresponding generosity toward youth. "We feel his loss keenly," Dr. Howard said.

Faculty Congratulated

He congratulated the faculty for their splendid efforts. He expressed his sincere thanks to the student body for their good work, splendid loyalty, and fine school spirit. He paid tribute to the staff, men and women who work faithfully, diligently and loyally yet who never appear in public functions, but who do their duty in their own loyal way. He expressed appreciation of the school to the Women's Guild, "that body of splendid women whose one great interest at heart is the College." He voiced sincere regret at the inability of President Emeritus Dr. E. N. Baker to be present.

Gratitude of the graduation class to the school and its faculty was voiced in the stirring valedictory address given by Ronald Mercer. In the future, in university days or in vocations graduates will look back to Albert, "the shrine of our memories," he said. Tribute to the school, its principal and faculty was expressed in the address, as well as the hopes of the class, that is now leaving its beloved college.

The presentation of a beautiful Bible by Fred Beatty representing the graduation class was made to the Memorial Chapel through Dr. Howard. In expressing his appreciation of the gift, the principal said "it was a most delightful gift, symbolic of the young people who are living with us. You are leaving a tangible appreciation, one that will be thought of as the philosophy of the teaching of this school. I thank you for this beautiful Book."

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

There's a garden on many hats designed for afternoon wear. A model of burnt straw has its entire crown filled with lilacs in blue, lavender pink and deep rose.

Clinging vine is the apt name of a new evening frock. It is of clinging silk sheer in white with a big design of purple grapes and green vine leaves. With it is worn a full length coat of solid purple faille.

Set off your smart outfit with the aid of a smart bag. A model of white supple kid on square pouchy lines has a very wide kid handle. The border of the bag is stuck all around with tiny gold dagger pins and the clasp is a larger golden dagger.

Maybe it isn't strictly a fashion item, but we feel we must call the attention of Fair visitors to those grand seat-canes copied from the English shooting-stick. They look like canes with crooked handles but they unfold into three-legged chairs said to bear up under a full two hundred pounds.

A pretty notion is that of a bag and hat set. The hat is made entirely of silk sweetpeas in delicate pastel shades, while the square bag

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Beware The Irresponsible

Love, according to the Standard Dictionary, is a "strong, complex emotion or feeling causing one to appreciate, delight in, and crave the presence or possession of the object and to please or promote the welfare of that object; devoted affection or attachment."

"Way back in the age of dinosaurs, flying fish, and reptiles, we still had LOVE, it was mixed up with a good deal of tooth and claw business. One dinosaur fighting with another dinosaur—minus Queensberry rules—for the lady dinosaur of his choice.

Don't forget the adage that it's love that makes the world go 'round, even though love language has taken on innumerable aliases. Today "Pitching Woo: is the procedure of making up to the girl friend. It's all right, though a bit startling to a more formal generation used to terms of "Courting" and the earlier expression "waiting upon".

"Hitched" stood for married, and still does in certain states. "Fancy" (pronounced fawncey) by our English cousins, implies being interested.

"Rushing" is still good college language. "Steady" may mean engagement, or temporary devotion to the exclusion of everyone else. The latest term is "Elsewhere-ian".

The "Elsewhere-ian" is always masculine gender. He avoids the appearance of being seriously interested in a girl by never meeting her in her own home. If they have a date, he suggests the restaurant where they are to dine, the movie where they are to see a picture, or even a street corner.

The "Elsewhere-ian" by the elsewhere course he charts for himself toward the girl friend, wishes it to be understood by her family—if any —that he has absolutely no serious intentions. He's a free-as-air bird, and a girl, accepting his attentions, does so at her own risk.

Here's an extract from a letter concerning one of the species: "I like this boy a whole lot and he tells me he loves me. The one thing I have against him is the fact that he won't come to my house, and whenever we go out together, he wants to meet me some place downtown or elsewhere.

"My parents know about this and think it's not respectful so I've begged H. to come to my house and meet mother and father. But he objects to this and refuses to call for me as a gentleman should. Why he does this, I don't know. I do know that he has a good job, his parents are well-fixed and if he does plan to marry me or some other girl, the road would be clear.

"He also objects to my going around with other boys. If I do this we quarrel, and he stays mad for several days. Shall I keep on with this boy, who never wants to meet me at my own home, but elsewhere."

As a species, the "Elsewhere-ian" shows definitely that he lacks the deference every girl should insist upon having.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bride Shares First Cut on Wedding Cake with Bridegroom

The bride's cake, white, iced, and often elaborately decorated, is usually the centrepiece of the bridal table. The bride always cuts the first slice of this cake and shares it with the bridegroom. If the reception is small, she usually cuts the rest of the cake for the guests; if it is large, an attendant cuts it; if it is a buffet repast, the guests may cut the cake for themselves. The wedding cake—a dark fruit cake—is sometimes cut and served in slices but usually small monogrammed individual boxes of the cake are piled on a table near the door, so that the guests may each take one as souvenir.

Usually it is the best man who proposes a toast to the bride and bridegroom. The guests rise, raise their glasses, and drink the toast. The bride and bridegroom do not rise, nor do they raise their glasses for the toast. The bridegroom replies to the toast with thanks for his bride and himself. He usually merely expresses his thanks — lengthy toasts and lengthy 'speeches' are not necessary, and nowadays are not in favor.

If there is dancing, the bride and bridegroom dance the first dance together. Wedding presents may or may not be shown.

As the bride leaves the reception, to change to her travelling clothes, she gaily throws her bouquet among her bridesmaids. She says her good-by to her family; sends for the bridegroom's parents to say good-by to them.

Then comes the merry dash through the aisle of relatives and friends, amid a shower of good wishes and colorful rose petals and confetti.

Courtesy Tip

Lord Chesterfield was one of the the greatest writers on good manners. Since he himself was a model of courtesy and fine breeding, his words on these important subjects have the true ring of authority and helpfulness. In our word "Chesterfieldian" we pay tribute to his good manners, and, by similarity, the good manners of any man.

The other day I came across this gem in one of his famous "Letter"

"Politeness and good breeding are absolutely necessary to adorn any, or all other good qualities or talents. The scholar without good breeding, is a pedant; the philosopher, a cynic; the soldier, a brute; and every man, disagreeable."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Child's Rest Deemed Almost as Important as Proper Food

Yesterday we discussed the fact that each person has two sets of nerves; the sympathetic set, in charge of the body when we are under great stress or when we are frightened, and the parasympathetic system, which runs us when we are acting normally under normal conditions.

In a baby, these systems aren't always as well balanced as they are in an adult. What would happen to your infant if the sympathetic system took control? Well, if this happens, you will notice that he is much more wide awake than usual. When he does sleep, he won't sleep as soundly or as long as other babies. When he is awake he will be irritable and hungry. When he eats however, the food doesn't pass through his system as it should because the parasympathetic nerves, which look after such details, as digestion, are now dominated by the other system.

When this condition of hypertonicity exists, the child will often hold himself quite rigid. I have even known mothers to boast about how strong her baby's muscles were when actually the child was suffering from hypertonicity. The child may become a serious feeding problem if this condtion persists. Severe cases have been known to prove fatal as a direct result of the failure to digest food.

Babies do not tolerate excitement very well. They should be kept quiet, and visitors shouldn't be admitted too often. They should have definite routines and these routines should not be disturbed under any conditions.

Hypertonicity is curable. If you call your doctor when your baby shows these symptoms, he will take measures to quiet the sympathetic nerves, allowing the other set of nerves to resume control.

Even more significant, hypertonicity is preventable in most cases. The trouble rarely occurs in homes where the baby is kept quiet but it is common in homes where the baby is the centre of attraction, time he is awake, where routines are ignored.

It is a wise thing for a mother to make her children rest for a few minutes before they eat. I know you must at some time have seen children come to the table vastly excited from some game they were playing. They are so wrought up they can't eat or, if they do, then they have stomachache afterwards.

Every day the Quints are called into the nursery fifteen minutes before dinner and fifteen minutes before supper and they lie down in their cots for this quarter hour and relax. During this period, the parasympathetic nervous system gets full control again; the sympathetic nerves subside and the system becomes ready to take food and digest it properly.

I have placed this discussion on hypertonicity at the close of the article on deficiency diseases because I often feel that correct rest and quiet are almost of as much importance to the child as some of the foods we give him.

Stoke Up a Bit, You Skinny Gals

(By HELEN FOLLETT

STRAPLESS bodices are not for the young lady who has let herself get so skinny that her collar bones could be used for shelves and you can count the bumps in her backbone. She may have gone in for reducing and over-trained; that happens lots of time, and a bad practice it is

She will have to stoke up a bit, take on weight until her silhouette carries curves where curves should be. The day has gone when a woman is entitled to be prideful of bones. Bones are out of fashion, therefore should be out of sight.

To woo fat cells pin your faith to milk that is rich with cream. Milk contains many elements that are favorable to health and vitality. Eat meat, fish, vegetables, green salads, fruits and speed up a bit on starches. A dish of cooked cereal every morning with plenty of sugar and cream will put fat on the ribs.

Good posture will shame the collar bones and make them hide. Stand against the wall, heels, buttocks, shoulders and head touching the wall. Pull in your bread basket. Then walk across the room. With the tummy flat the chest is bound to be lifted, shoulders will have a natural, easy pose.

The wise mother will take time by the cowlick and ward off beauty griefs that might come later in life to her children.

Outstanding ears can be corrected. Make a little cap of tapes, have the baby wear it at night. The infantile sound receivers will respond to the suggestion, will stay closer to the head.

Even small children should have a dental examination once a year. Baby teeth need professional attention; their health has much to do with the health of the second set of white pearls.

If posture is poor, chest flat and abdomen protruding, see the doctor. Diet is important, not only for the sake of the mind and body but for the well-being of teeth, hair, complexion and finger-nails.

Queen Elizabeth Charms All Washington

(By Sigrid Arne)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 9. —(AP) — Queen Elizabeth could have had almost any movable object in Washington today for the asking. She charmed officials and plain folk alike. Most of the talk ran, "And did you see her?" then later, "He's nice, too."

She seems to overcome the fact that she's a queen. In a twinkling he has spectators thinking of her as an extremely feminine and pretty person. But there is an aura of royalty about her that's hard for an American to explain.

She's a slight figure, much more so than her pictures indicate. Only her face looks plump. She's shorter than the King, but she stands very erect, bowing with a slight graceful nod of the head.

Her salute when the cheering crowds get especially noisy is an individual gesture. She brings up her right arm gracefully from the side, palm turned in, until her hand is on the level with her head, and then she moves the hand back and forth three or four times.

She turns a frankly affectionate smile on her husband when he speaks and he returns the attention with a swifter, shyer glance. Her clothes add much to the regal impression. Their pastel shades make her stand out in the crowds. Her high off-the-face hats and the very high heels on her dainty pumps add to her height.

Her daytime dresses are almost tailored in detail. But for formal afternoon or evening she goes entirely feminine with frothy, full-skirted frocks — like the white organdy with wide insert bands of lace that she wore to the Embassy Garden party, and the white tulle powdered with gold paillettes that she wore to the White House dinner.

HOLLOWAY STREET W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Holloway St. W.M.S. was held in the church parlours on Tuesday afternoon, June the 6th., with an attendance of twenty-eight members. Mrs. Cordes, the president, occupied the chair.

Mrs. Hubbs presided at the piano during the singing of the hymns, which emphasized the subject of the programme "Christian Citizenship".

The different secretaries gave their reports and these were approved. Mrs. Hyde and Mr. Sinfield were remembered in their bereavement and sympathy was expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Andrews in their recent injuries from a motor accident.

Mrs. Beal, the treasurer, reported thirty-two dues paid, making the total of $138.40 raised this year.

Mrs. Walters, for Group V conducted the programme, which stressed the Christian Citizenship Topic.

Scripture Readings by Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Livesay emphasized the same topic as did the prayers by Mesdames Oliphant, Beal and Cordes.

The offering was taken by Mesdames Wicket and Oliphant after which Mrs. Hubbs gave the offertory prayer.

Mrs. C. Holmes and Mrs. Newman presented the topic for the afternoon on Racial Brotherhood in the question and answer method. The question being "Should Canada admit refugees?" This subject was very ably dealt with bringing out much knowledge on the subject and proving that Canada could improve her economic condition by admitting these people, many of whom are talented and efficient workmen as well as cultured people. lection so will not become a public charge. Some are agriculturally inclined as well as industrially. Mrs. Holmes closed the discussion with prayer.

Mrs. Cordes urged all members to give this subject further study before the next meeting in July.

Mrs. Walters pronounced closing benediction after which a social half hour was spent.

The Foxboro Young People's Union held their closing meeting of the year on Monday evening. Mrs. Geo. Priest, convener of Christian Culture, was in charge. The meeting opened with quiet music by the pianist. Mrs. Priest gave the call to worship. A poem was given by Eugene Spencer and the devotional topic, "Do All To the Glory of God" was given by Marion Daniels. Hymn, "For the Beauty of the Earth" was sung.

The president took charge of the business part of the meeting. She gave a brief report of the year's work mentioning the friendly co-operation and pleasant associations enjoyed throughout the year between the young people of the Presbyterian Church and those of the United Church as they have been united in the year's activities. Twenty-five regular and four special meetings have been held since reorganization with an average attendance of forty-four at regular meetings. The financial report was given showing that $154.85 had been raised; the proceeds of the drama put on during the winter amounting to $102.70. The young people have paid the church's hydro bill for the year, donated two cords of wood, given $55 to missionary and maintenance, sent a delegate to winter school and are sending two delegates to Oak Lake summer school.

Rev. Mr. Cook spoke briefly commending the young people on the year's work.

At the close of this session a reading was given by Glenn Priest. Leon Wilson gave a guitar solo. The Scripture lesson was read by James Reynolds and Mrs. Priest gave a very interesting topic, 'Taking Christ on Our Holidays'. Harper's Bazaar says:
It's a WHITE SEASON
● Frilly blouses, petticoats, gloves, ruffles, collars — most everything is white! WHITE IS RIGHT this season. But white things must be washed frequently and repeated washings turn them yellowish, unless Blue is added. A swish or two of Blue in the final rinsing water on wash day assures the sparkling snowy whiteness that fashion demands — and it costs only a cent or two a month!

THREE DROWNED IN LAKE HURON

Violent Rain Squall Upset Boat as Party Enjoying Fishing Trip

Sarnia, Ont., June 8—(CP)—Searchers began to drag the rough waters of Lake Huron today off Kettle Point, 40 miles north of here, for the bodies of two women and a man, drowned last night when a violent rain squall suddenly ended their fishing trip.

Sufficiently recovered from exhaustion to talk, Edward Brisette, Kettle Point Indian guide, told rescuers how members of the party, Wesley McAusland, London; Kay Batchelor, Ingersoll, and Mrs. Angus Ross, also of London, met their deaths. Brisette and Angus Ross, husband of one of the women drowned, were rescued.

So suddenly did the storm strike, he said, that the outboard motor stopped in the driving rain while they were still three-quarters of a mile off-shore, although they had headed in when it first came up. The small boat was hurled upside down by a breaking wave as it drifted towards the rocky shoreline. Ross and Brissette were found by Stan Cloud, brother-in-law of Brissette, after they had clung to the over-turned craft for nearly half an hour. The fisherman went to look for their boat when it did not appear after the storm. Ross was injured when the boat was washed against rocks but managed to maintain his hold.

The Bible lesson was sung by all and the worship story was given by Miss Annie Holmes. Rev. S. B. Smith offered prayer. "Stewardship" was read by Mrs. A. Empey and the singing of hymn 148 brought the worship service to a close. Mrs. George Robinson, group leader at this meeting, took charge of her program and opened with prayer offered by Mrs. F. A. Comerford. A poem was read. An instrumental number was given by Mrs. A. Empey. A temperance reading was given by Mrs. W. Blackburn. The study book talk was well given by Mrs. Clifford Chambers and a solo was rendered by Mrs. L. Robinson. Dinner was served in the Sunday school rooms and after dinner a short business period was conducted by the president. Roll call showed ten members, three visitors and three children present. A short time was allowed to pay fees and for the Missionary Monthly Secretary to give out books. A letter of thanks from Mrs. A. Harvey was read by Mrs. S. B. Smith. Arrangements were made for an ice cream social to be held in June. The usual bale of clothing was then packed to be sent to Napanee for supply work and Rev. S. B. Smith closed with prayer.

The day was ideal for the occasion and fifty-one children were present. The worship service, the theme being "peace", was in charge of the Little Builders. The president, Audrey Carman, presided with Velma Carman reading the Bible lesson and Laura Robinson the responsive prayer. All sang "O Canada" and a hymn. The offering amounted to $1.05. Bessie McCann, president of the Band of Hope, Eldorado, took charge and opened her program by all singing a hymn and she also thanked the Little Builders for the kindness of having them meet with their members. A chorus of "Little Sir Echo" and "Greetings To the King" were sung. A poem was read by Ann Nickle and a temperance reading by Betty Strebe. A very fine guitar duet was given by Joan Empey and Lillian Blakely and after singing two more choruses by the members of the Mission Band, the study book talk on Manitoba was much enjoyed as outlined by Mrs. F. USES BOTH HANDS TO WRITE

Letter From a Man of 90

He asks us to excuse his writing. We do more than that—we congratulate him on being able to write at all at his age, especially as he has been suffering from rheumatism. This is what he says in his letter—

"Three years ago I was in bed for six weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. Since that time I have been taking Kruschen Salts, and have not had another attack. But the complaint left me with inflamed feet, and it hurt me to walk. My hands were also somewhat stiff. I took Kruschen every morning before breakfast and shall continue to do so, because I am sure they have kept me in good shape for three years. Excuse this writing, as I am ninety years old, and use both hands to write." —J. R. G.

The pain and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen helps to dissolve and remove excess uric acid in a gentle way through the natural channels. Renewed health and vigour is the result.

"Dear Carleton and Irene:

"This gathering is a joyous occasion in view of the fact that it gives us the pleasure of welcoming a talented member to our community. Married life brings many responsibilities as well as pleasures. May you with God's guidance meet them hand in hand together.

"Carleton, we congratulate you on your wise choice of a life partner. We wish you every success in the years to come. The crowd gathered here tonight is proof of the many friends won by your generosity and sunny disposition; you have always been willing to help whenever needed, and old and young have been cheered by your jovial manner.

"Irene, you are not a stranger in our neighborhood as you are a friend of many of the young people here. The Young People's League, Sunday School and Church invite you to become a regular attendant. Your musical talent will be a help to us and will be much appreciated. The girls' softball team welcome your assistance.

"A little bit of kindness helps to ease the load,
To share another's burden on the uphill road.
A word of commendation like a lilting song
Will always lighten when the task proves long.
A friendly hand in greeting to the heart that's sore,
Cements a bond of brotherhood
the wide world o'er.
Then what though fame and laurels crown the favored few,
Lowly, kind and helpful deeds
daily call for you.

"As a small token of our esteem for you we ask you to accept this gift. May success crown your efforts and God's richest blessing rest on you.

"Signed on behalf of Mount Pleasand friends and neighbors — Anna Sharp, Esma Cole, Herb Higgs, Bert Jeffs, Burton Sharp and John Coggins."

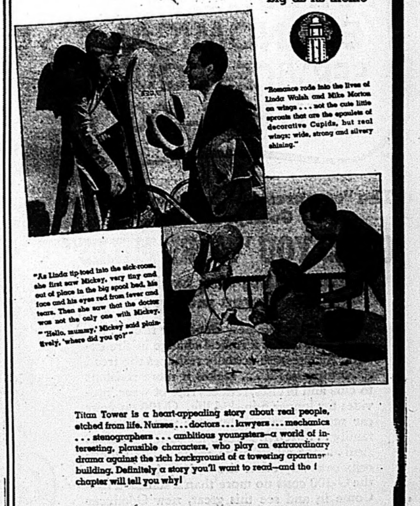
TITAN TOWER

by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

A serial as big as its theme



"Romance rode into the lives of Linda Walsh and Mike Morton on wings ... not the cute little sprouts that are the epaulets of decorative Cupids, but real wings; wide, strong and silvery shining."

"As Linda tip-toed into the sick-room, she first saw Mickey, very tiny and out of place in the big spool bed, his face and his eyes red from fever and tears. Then she saw that the doctor was not the only one with Mickey. "Hello, mummy,' Mickey said plaintively, 'where did you go?'"

Titan Tower is a heart-appealing story about real people, etched from life. Nurses ... doctors ... lawyers ... mechanics ... stenographers ... ambitious youngsters—a world of interesting, plausible characters, who play an extraordinary drama against the rich background of a towering apartmer building. Definitely a story you'll want to read—and the f chapter will tell you why!

Reds' Margin In National Increased To Four Games Over Second Place Cards

Derringer and Mulcahy Hook Up in Mound Duel at Philadelphia

YANKEES WIN

Joe Dimaggio Hit Homer, Double and Single in Victory

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Somebody is always taking the joy out of living by calling attention to the walkaway New York Yankees are making of the American League, so some similar clamor ought to be raised, as a counter irritant, against Cincinnati Reds.

Their 3-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies last night increased the Reds' margin over the second place St. Louis Cardinals to four games and extended he gap between first and last place in the National League to 17 1-2 games.

Their lamplight struggle with the Phillies was a pitchers' duel between Paul Derringer and Hugh (losing pitcher) Mulcahy—and like most such pitching duels involving Cincinnati, the Reds not only produced the best pitching, but the most timely hitting.

Mulcahy Wild

Both twirlers were touched for seven hits, but Mulcahy was wild in addition. With the score tied in the third inning and Lonnie Frey on second through a double, Mulcahy made a wild pitch which left the runner reach third. Then he walked Buck McCormick, who stole second, and almost before anyone realized it the game was decided. Ernie Lombardi beat out a bunt to score Frey and Harry Craft singled McCormick in with the winning marker.

In the two other National League games yesterday Lou Fette pitched three-hit ball to give Boston a 2-0 shutout over Pittsburgh Pirates and Harry Danning and Zeke Bonura hit homers for the New York Giants' 5-3 decision over Chicago Cubs.

Donald Wins Six

The Yankees' second consecutive victory over Chicago White Sox, 7-2, kept their lead over the second place Boston Red Sox at nine games and increased it to 22 games over the last place St. Louis Browns. Joe DiMaggio hit a homer, a double and a single to pace the champions' 12-hit attack on the Sox and rookie Atley Donald moved into the league's pitching lead with his sixth straight victory.

Boston had to do some heroic hitting to hold its position with an 8-7 triumph at St. Louis. Jimmy Foxx hit two home runs, one of them with two on base, and Lou Finney came through with a pinch homer with one on in the eighth to tie the score. The winning run came on a double and two sacrifices in the ninth.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitched Detroit Tigers to an 8-4 victory over Philadelphia Athletics, striking out seven and allowing only six hits. Washington's winning streak was ended by a 7-5 defeat at Cleveland, with the Senators committing five errors.

Winter Olympics May Take Place At Montreal

London, June 9 (AP)—The International Olympic Committee took the 1940 winter Olympics away from St. Moritz, Switzerland today because Swiss Olympic officials refused to obey the International committee's instructions.

Delegates will meet this afternoon to choose another site—possibly Montreal.

Swiss officials originally accepted the program laid down for the 1940 winter games but later refused to run the games unless the skiing program was changed from an exhibition to a regular competitive event.

The I.O.C. refused to do this because of a dispute with the International Ski Federation over the definition of an amateur.

Yesterday Count Henri De Baillet-Latour, President of the I.O.C., cabled Swiss authorities to comply with the I.O.C. program by noon today or forfeit the games and the Swiss cabled their refusal.

Count Baillet-Latour has asked the Canadian delegation if Montreal would be willing to hold the games. Canada is expected to accept on condition their chances of getting the 1944 winter program are not prejudiced.

The sites of the 1944 winter and summer Olympics also will be chosen in this afternoon's final business session.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Lou Fette, Bees: Shut out Pirates on three hits.

Hank Danning and Zeke Bonura, Giants: Former hit double and homer, latter homer with one on, to beat Cubs.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: Hit homer, double and single to lead successful attack against White Sox.

Jimmy Foxx and Lou Finney, Red Sox: Former hit two home runs and latter hit pinch homer with one on against Browns.

Harry Craft, Reds: Singled winning run home in Cincinnati's 3-2 night game victory over Phillies.

ROCHESTER TEAM MARCHING AHEAD TO LOOP TITLE

Jersey City Defeated in Twin Bill and Now Four Games Behind

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Boast Three-Game Winning Streak, the Longest of Season

(By The Associated Press)

There doesn't seem to be much Jersey City Giants can do about stopping the march of Rochester Red Wings toward an International League title

Last night, with everything in their favor, including the home grounds and a partisan crowd of 21,024, the Giants failed twice, and instead of closing the two-game gap between themselves and the Red Wings they are now four full games back of the leaders.
